REVOLT GRIPS ITALY

REDS CONTROL LARGE CITIES

GENOA SCENE OF BLOODSHED AND RIOTING

Royal Guards and Strikers Clash.

BULLETIN.

MILAN, Sept. 4.—In the storming of factories in Genoa workmen came into conflict with the royal guards stationed inside. One man was killed and six wounded.

A night attempt by the police to enter the Fiat-Lingotto automobile works in Turin to remove machine gun parts, was frustrated by the defenders with revolvers and hand bombs.

PARIS, Sept. 4.—The Red movement is making headway inItaly and is even threatening the stability of the government, according to advices received today by the French foreign office from expert observers in the principal Italian cities.

The French government is alarmed over the conditions in Italy and the difficulty the government is having in dealing with workers. Grave fears are entertained over the development of the outbreak, which is expected to move swiftly.

Today was pay day throughout Italy and reports arriving in Paris this afternoon indicate that the unpaid workers are in ugly temper and are either demonstrating or threatening violence tonight in the various cities.

Government's Hands Tied.

So far there has been little bloodshed anywhere, but the reason for this is significant—because the government is powerless to take action, as the troops and police are refusing any attempt to protect property and are permitting the workmen to seize the factories and to commandeer foodstuffs.

Milan, Turin, Bologne, Genoa, and Naples are hotbeds of bolshevism and the movement is taking root in Rome. Practically all factories have been closed down in these cities or are being operated by workers who have strung high voltage electric wires around the plants and are barring entry to all outsiders and are holding former superintendents and proprietors as hostages.

Workers to Divide Profits.

Engineers and expert specialists have been kidnaped from their homes by laborers in some places and dragged by force to the factories and forced to keep the plants in operation, the workmen declaring that they will divide the profits among themselves.

At Genoa bolshevik longshoremen, headed by Capt. Gioletto, seized all the shipping in the harbor and announced they would mount cannon and bombard any warships attempting to enter the port.

The arsenal was seized at Venice, the workmen distributing among themselves rifles and ammunition.

Half a dozen members of the board of directors of the Lombard automobile factory at Milan were imprisoned in the factory as hostages to be held until payment of the men's salaries was guaranteed.

Form Miniature Soviets.

The workmen at Turin completed twenty-four automobiles in the Fiat factory and announced they would sell the machines and divide the money unless their wages were paid this evening.

Miniature soviets have been established in about 100 former munitions factories, now utilized as commercial plants, which the workmen seized with the announcement that they would operate them themselves. Many silk factories are included in the list, but none has any reserve of raw silk on hand, and trouble is expected when the present stock is depleted.

GOVERNMENT IS HOPEFUL

LONDON, Sept. 4.—[By the Associated Press.] — The striking Italian metal workers, who have taken possession of the workshops, have been informed that the employers will pay them no wages this week, says a Central News dispatch from Rome. The leaders of the strikers have issued a manifesto, urging the workers to remain in the shops tomorrow in order to prevent the authorities from taking possession of them.

Minister of Labor Labriola is declared to be still hopeful of bringing about an understanding between the metal workers and their employers.

T. R. JR. CANCELS TALK; WON'T "SOFT PEDAL" ON MAYOR

Heeds Appeal of the G. O. P. Chiefs.

Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, billed as a speaker at a noonday luncheon at the Hamilton club yesterday, arrived in Chicago in time to address the club, but he did not do so. Instead Gov. W. L. Harding of Iowa was hastily enlisted as an emergency speaker and members of the club who heard him believed that Col. Roosevelt had not arrived in Chicago in time to speak.

Col. Roosevelt himself gave the explanation. He did not speak at the Hamilton club because he could not speak in Chicago at the present time without telling the world what he thinks of William Hale Thompson.

The Republican national committee, under whose auspices Col. Roosevelt is speaking, did not care to become involved in a state primary fight. Col. Roosevelt said he wouldn't talk unless he could say what he wanted to say.

Lorimer Incident Recalled.

The incident recalled the celebrated refusal of Col. Roosevelt's father to speak at a Hamilton club banquet because the name of William Lorimer, then United States senator, appeared on the list of invited guests. The club got out of its difficulty by canceling the invitation to Lorimer.

T. R. Jr. came to Chicago yesterday fresh from a campaign in Maine, where the state elections are to be held a week from tomorrow. He was met at the La Salle street station by a committee from the national committee composed of Senator Harry S. New of Indiana, Mrs. Christine Bradley South, assistant secretary of the committee, and Mrs. Manley L. Fosseen, one of the members of the executive committee. The party drove to the Blackstone hotel, where the lieutenant colonel met his sister, Mrs. Longworth.

Can't Keep Silent on Mayor.

Senator New, chairman of the Republican speakers' committee, told him of the arrangements for him to speak at the Hamilton club. He immediately informed Senator New of the obstacles to his speaking in Illinois now and explained that he did not believe he could keep quiet about Thompson and Thompsonism.

He said he did not want to embarrass the national committee, as anything he said might be taken as a reflection of its attitude. Senator New suggested that the only way out of the difficulty was canceling the speech. This was agreed to and Gov. Harding was called in as pinch hitter for Col. Roosevelt.

Col. Roosevelt Explains.

Col. Roosevelt, when asked about the incident, made the following statement:

"My position on the present primary contest in Illinois is well known. I could not speak in Illinois at this time without voicing it. The national committee, under whose auspices I am making this tour, has as its traditional policy noninterference in state primaries. They accordingly requested me not to speak in Illinois."

It became known that Col. Roosevelt was not the only prominent Republican who has been kept out of Illinois as the result of feeling against Chicago's mayor. Fiorello H. La Guardia, president of the board of estimates in New York City, who was leader in the recent triumph over the Tammany forces in New York, has refused to speak in Chicago at all during the present campaign.

Binding While "Bill" Is Mayor.

His refusal is binding "as long as William Hale Thompson is mayor of Chicago," to use his own language. La Guardia was formerly a member of congress and resigned to enter the aviation service during the war. He is looked up to by all Italian Republicans in the country, especially since his victory over Tammany.

Before the Hamilton club engagement was canceled Lieut. Col. Roosevelt predicted Republican victory in Maine, where the tradition is that whenever the Republican candidate for governor gets more than 20,000 plurality in September the Republicans sweep the nation in November. Col. Roosevelt is confident of 25,000 plurality.

MOST OF STATES READY TO COUNT WOMEN'S VOTES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Doubt now exists as to the attitude of only two states, Louisiana and New Jersey, as to provisions which are being made for the registration and voting of women at the fall elections, it was announced at headquarters of the National Woman's party today.

Twenty-six replies have been received. Only Mississippi sent an unfavorable reply.

Attorney General Roberson of Mississippi wrote that the provision of the state constitution requires that electors shall have been registered four months before an election and that women therefore cannot vote this fall.

New Jersey Women to Vote.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 4.—Women in this state can vote on the same terms as men, Attorney General Thomas F. McCran announced here tonight.

PREACHER LEADS LIQUOR RAID IN ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Fifty federal prohibition agents from the Philadelphia and Trenton offices today conducted the most sensational raid this place has yet seen.

Nineteen hotels and cabarets were entered on search warrants and liquor valued at more than $100,000 confiscated.

Jacob Bernstein was shot and wounded when he attempted to escape from Deputy Marshall Voll of Trenton.

The raid was conducted under the personal supervision of the Rev. Dr. R. E. Johnson, pastor of a Methodist Episcopal church in Philadelphia, a duty appointed prohibition agent. Yesterday he led the raiders in Angelesea and Wildwood, where five hotels and cabarets were raided and liquor valued at over $60,000 confiscated.

The raids were conducted simultaneously and thousands of Labor day visitors watched the agents at work.

SHAH'S BROTHER AS YANK WILLING TO BE SPANKED

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 4.—"I want to be an American," announced Prince Mejid, aged 12, brother of the shah of Persia, when he appeared today accompanied by his guardian, Sahib Jem, to matriculate at the preparatory school of Robert college.

"All right, we will permit you to enter, though we will not call you prince, but plain Mejid, and also spank you if you do not behave and learn your lessons," answered the teacher. These conditions the prince accepted.

All the teachers in the school are American, and the students are Persians, Tartars, Greeks, Armenians, and Turks.

DEMOCRATS TAX TOILING GIRLS TO WIN WHITE HOUSE

14 S. D. Women Made to Put Up $560.

Aberdeen, S. D., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Evidence showing that women clerks and stenographers in government offices are being "assessed" for the Democratic campaign fund has been uncovered here. There is a federal law against collecting from female employés. Fourteen young women in the office of the collector of internal revenue for South Dakota were called to a room in a hotel here yesterday and asked to contribute $40 each to the Democratic campaign fund.

Six of the young women gave their checks to the "collector," who gave the name of E. M. Waterbury, Centerville, S. D., and said he was acting for Clarence H. Mee, also of Centerville.

Father of Federal Official.

Mr. Mee is a member of the Democratic state committee and the father of J. Walter Mee, collector of internal revenue for South Dakota, in whose office the young women are employed. The other eight girls promised to send in their checks today.

Owing to the tactics used, this attempt to "blackjack" poorly paid women employés of the government leaked out, and Congressman Johnson denounced it as an "outrage." He sent a report of it to Republican national headquarters in Chicago, intimating the matter will be laid before the senate campaign funds committee.

Form Letters Sent Out.

Mr. Waterbury came to Aberdeen and summoned the girls by means of a mimeograph form letter sent to their homes or lodgings. When they called he informed them that to subscribe was not compulsory, but that it was a "bread and butter" proposition, as their jobs depended on Democratic success this fall.

The young women are mostly, if not all, listed as "deputies," and are not under civil service, but are appointed and removed at the pleasure of their chief.

Two of the girls who paid up their assessments yesterday were so much in debt that they had to date their checks ahead, one dated Oct. 1, and the other Nov. 1, for $20 each. Several gave checks for only $20, being allowed to pay the $40 in two installments.

Text of the Demand.

One of the letters was addressed to Miss Marion Arnatrout, Aberdeen. It was dated Aug. 31, and follows:

"The democratic national committee is raising in this state a fund for campaign expenses, and those who are partaking of the benefits of office are asked to assist.

"You are cordially invited to arrange this matter by calling at the Sherman hotel, room 213, during the next three days.

"E. M. WATERBURY."

Here Are the "Contributors."

In the assessed party were Miss Jessie Barchard and Miss Sigrid Holland, Minneapolis girls; Miss Lida Young, Miss Marion Kennedy, and Miss Selma Schleuness. According to the stories of Miss Barchard and Miss Holland this is what Waterbury said to them:

"Forty dollars is the amount we have agreed upon. J. Walter Mee told me that if I would address the letters to each of you, 'City,' you would receive them. We first agreed upon $50 for each of you, but I feel that that was too much. Do you think you can afford $40 each?"

All of the young women agreed to "contribute."

JACOBSON AND WIFE MISSING AFTER INQUEST

Refuse to Testify on Rhodes Killing.

Richard Jacobson and his wife, Gladys Virginia Jacobson, who was the companion of Howard B. Rhodes, south side dry goods merchant, on the night Rhodes was murdered in "Lovers' Lane," vanished from their rooms at 833½ Sunnyside avenue last night.

Fifteen minutes later the place was raided by attachés of State's Attorney Hoyne's office.

An hour previous both Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson had refused to testify at an inquest held into Rhodes' death by Coroner Peter M. Hoffman in Evanston. They based their refusal to testify on the grounds that they might incriminate themselves.

Under Suspicion, Jacobson Told.

Jacobson was told frankly by Coroner Hoffman that he was under suspicion as to his activities the night of the crime.

Several conflicting stories by Jacobson came to light yesterday. One of these was his claim to the coroner and to others that he was a newspaper reporter. This was proven untrue.

At the same time the police learned that Jacobson has in the past been a "gun toter." He carried his revolver, which he showed to numerous acquaintances, in a shoulder holster. It was a .32 caliber revolver.

Two Machines at Death Scene.

At the inquest yesterday a new witness, produced by Chief of Police Charles Leggett of Evanston, testified that two automobiles were present on East Prairie road at the time of the shooting. They were within 400 yards of each other. Both machines were headed north. Both were standing still. This witness stood at the intersection of East Prairie road and Oakton street, within 200 yards of both machines.

New witnesses were also produced to corroborate the stories told by five others that there were but two shots fired, and that both the reports were of the same caliber gun, discrediting the story told by Mrs. Jacobson that Rhodes, surprising the "phantom robber," fired a single shot from his army automatic pistol. This gun was found ten feet from the scene of the crime.

Could Not Shoot as Claimed.

Coroner Hoffman declared at the inquest that Rhodes could not have fired his army automatic from the front seat of the car and still have the empty shell alight in the same seat. This will be further tested Monday with Rhodes' gun.

He also asserted that the gun could never have dropped to the point in the ditch where it was found the morning after the shooting.

Mrs. Amelia Aldrich, from whom Jacobson sub-rented rooms at the Sunnyside avenue address, was taken last night to the state's attorney's office for questiining. She was later released.

WOMAN SEALS LIPS

The first surprise came when Coroner Hoffman called to the stand Mrs. Gladys Virginia Jacobson.

Attorney Benedict M. Short, who had been noticed in the courtroom for several hours, jumped to his feet.

"I don't think Mrs. Jacobson is going to testify any more! I am going to—" he started.

"Are you her counsel?" interrupted the coroner.

"I am," he replied.

"I suggest, then, that the coroner call the witness into the courtroom and let her make that objection of record," Assistant State's Attorney Prystalski declared.

"Has Testified Falsely."

"I desire to say to you," chimed in the coroner, "that this woman has testified here and that she hasn't told the truth in one respect. If she is not telling the truth under oath regarding the affair, I don't know when to believe her."

"She may have been so excited that she didn't remember the details," suggested Mr. Short. "For instance, this automobile trip to the hospital. We all know she did go to the hospital. We will admit that Anderson was with her. We all know that, but——"

"But we don't know it," the coroner interjected. "If we had depended on your witness to know it we wouldn't have known it. But it is your privilege

Spark of Life Still Flickers in MacSwiney

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Sept. 4.—Lord Mayor MacSwiney was reported tonight as much weaker, but still conscious and determined to continue his hunger strike. Officials fear he may collapse, but Brixton prison authorities hope to prolong his life by feeding him when he becomes unconscious.

Mrs. MacSwiney was depressed when she left his side tonight. She and her sister-in-law called at the American, French, Italian, and Belgian embassies today to implore their intercession, but all the ambassadors were out.

Sends Cable to President.

Mrs. MacSwiney today cabled appeals to President and Mrs. Wilson asking their intervention to save her husband. She received messages of sympathy from the Limerick corporation and other Irish organizations.

Father Mathieu, who performed the wedding ceremony for the lord mayor and Mrs. MacSwiney three years ago, called on the sufferer today.

The Irish peace conference committee sitting in Dublin again wired the prime minister urging him "in the name of Irish peace and of humanity" to release the mayor of Cork and to "stop this spectacle of the law demanding its pound of flesh."

Harmsworth Takes Step.

Sir Leicester Harmsworth, a brother of Lord Northcliffe, in a letter to the Times today calls upon all members of parliament to telegraph their views regarding the MacSwiney case to the prime minister, the home secretary, and the newspapers as the only means possible for securing the opinion of parliament during its recess.

No action has been taken yet regarding the hunger strikers at Cork, but it is believed that the government has telegraphed orders that they shall have every possible attention, and it is probable that most of them will be released soon.

Mr. Bonar Law is said to be much annoyed at their having been confined without trial so long, which has been explained by the Irish government as due to difficulty in securing witnesses and juries. That trouble now is disposed of through the new coercion act which went into operation at the beginning of this week.

BRITAIN'S SIDE OF IT

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The reasons why the government will not release Lord Mayor MacSwiney are given in an official statement issued today.

It declared that fresh attempts would be made to "continue with added activity the long series of murders of policemen," and "would open the way to any person imprisoned for any similar offense to use the case of the lord mayor as a precedent with good hopes of obtaining release and the opportunity to repeat the acts which led to his incarceration."

Call Suffering Needless.

The statement continues:

"Unless the object of the lord mayor and his associates is to secure the secession of Ireland—in which case no compromise between them and the British government is possible — the sufferings of the lord mayor, together with the whole campaign conducted by him and his associates of violent usurpation of the machinery of the government of Ireland, are entirely unnecessary."

It is pointed out that "the government has not only presented to parliament a measure conferring on Ireland a degree of self-determination in advance of any scheme proposed or accepted by the elected representatives of Ireland in the past," but the premier has declared explicitly his willingness

START QUIZ TO SAVE BASEBALL FROM GAMBLERS

Plot to "Fix" Cub Game Stirs Storm.

Is baseball in danger?

Is America's national game threatened with destruction by rumors of crookednes and gambling scandals connected with the selling of thousands of baseball pools and alleged wagers on games that run into the thousands?

Will the game be killed by this enemy, which destroyed the sport of horse racing in many places, or will the charges prove only petty annoyances not strong enough to reach the game itself?

These questions were asked by America's fans yesterday following charges of attempted crookedness in an insignificant game played last Tuesday at the north side park between the Cubs and Philadelphia.

Charge Game Was Fixed.

It was charged that the game of Tuesday had been fixed for the Philadelphians to win and that large sums had been wagered not only in Chicago but in Detroit, Cincinnati, and other large cities of the country by those on the inside.

The charge in a way was substantiated by President Veeck of the north side club, who gave out a statement that included several telegrams sent just prior to the start of the game warning him that the game was fixed.

In an effort to thwart the conspirators the north side management placed its strongest team in the game, even pitching Grover Alexander out of turn, but the team lost anyway, 3 to 0. Alexander had been offered a bonus of $500 by the north side boss if he would win.

Warnings Under Assumed Names.

Hasty and incomplete investigations of the affair have produced the following facts and suppositions:

Not one of the five names signed to five different telegrams received from Detroit, nor either of two names given by persons who used the long distance telephone from the same city could be identified in Detroit. Fake addresses were given in some instances. None of the names was in the Detroit city directory.

Detectives are working on the case and have been since last Tuesday, having been employed by the Cubs' club.

Messages from Handbook Men.

Information from a Detroit investigator is to the effect that it is probable the messages of warning were sent to the Chicago club by hand book men in Detroit, who accepted large wagers on Philadelphia and then by means of the messages hoped to induce the Chicago management to pitch Alexander out of turn, cross the bettors, and win their money.

The fact developed that at one time within the last year twenty-six ball players in the big league were under suspicion of working crooked deals with gamblers.

There is a rumor that at the present time three members of the White Sox are under suspicion, yet are playing in the game regularly.

It was learned that bookmakers are operating in all parts of Chicago, especially in numerous places in the loop, and accepting large wagers on baseball every day. They also made book in the early spring on the pennant winner in each big league.

As to Last Tuesday's Game.

As far as the game of last Tuesday is concerned, no one who saw it could point out any incident that would prove it was fixed.

President Veeck states that when the telegrams of warning began to pour in during the hour preceding the starting time, he called Manager Mitchell into the office and they decided to make every effort to win the game, thus thwarting the gamblers, if there was any truth in the charges of a "fixing" plot.

They called in Alexander and informed him they wished to win that particular game at any cost, offering him the $500 bonus if he would win.

Take Aleck Out of Turn.

It wasn't Aleck's turn to work on the slab. For the last six weeks or more Manager Mitchell has worked Alexander, Vaughn, Tyler, and Hendrix in rotation with few exceptions. Aleck had worked on Saturday, Tyler on Sunday, Vaughn on Monday, and it was Hendrix's turn Tuesday. The Cub bosses figured Aleck as the best possible pitcher for the occasion. No other players on the team were admitted to the secret.

The only other change made in the lineup was the placing of Turner Barber at first base in place of Fred Merkle, the action being taken to get another left handed hitter in the game against Carl Meadows, the Philadelphia pitcher, who is right handed.

Details of the Game.

Aleck pitched eight innings and appeared at all times to be doing his level best to win.

In the second inning after one was out, a Philadelphia batter hit a hot one down past Barber for a base hit. The next batter hit a grounder almost directly at Herzog. A possible double play was in sight, but, in his hurry to make it, Herzog let the ball get away from him and both were safe. A double play on that occasion would have retired the side.

The next batter, Wheat, drove a triple to dead right center, sending two runs home. Those were the only runs obtained off Aleck, and, in the eighth inning, he gave way to a pinch hitter and Nick Carter finished the game.

In the ninth Le Bourveau hit one of Nick's deliveries over the right field wall for a home run.

There was nothing in the error made by Herzog to arouse the least suspicion. It was rather a hard chance. Any player might have erred on the same play. There was nothing during the game to make it look suspicious. The Cubs got five hits off Carl Meadaws, but he is a clever and fast pitcher, who has held better teams than the Cubs to less than five hits on numerous occasions.

Rumor of Four in Plot.

Still, one of the reports in circulation among the gambling fraternity was that four members of the Cubs' team were in the "plot to throw the game." Three of those mentioned played in the game.

One of the gamblers who gave the information stated he had bet $2,000 on the Cubs to win before learning that the game was fixed. The same man said that in the morning, when he placed his bet, the odds were 2 to 1 on the Cubs. In the afternoon the odds had shifted, making Philadelphia a 1 to 2 favorite. It was his opinion the plot was hatched in Detroit or Cleveland.

Wire Names Cub Player.

In one of the telegrams from Detroit the name of one of the Cub players was mentioned and Mitchell was asked to watch him. The north side management declined to give the name of the player involved, lacking any assurance that he was guilty.

It is known one of the players on the team is quite a close friend of a Chicago gambler. They have been seen together on numerous occasions.

The report from Detroit that perhaps the bookmakers there had sent the wires of warning to the Chicago club seems plausible to those familiar with the methods of gamblers who make books on baseball.

Here is the way it is being done in Chicago, according to one on the inside:

"These bookmakers are all percentage men and make their money by the shifting of odds. For instance, if you wished to go in and bet the White Sox would beat the Browns, they probably would offer you odds of 90 to 100 on the Browns. You would put up a hundred in order to win ninety. Maybe a man would follow you in and wish to bet on the Browns. They would offer him even money. Both bets are made. Don't you see—the bookmaker is going to make $10 on the deal.

The Bookies Should Worry.

"Last spring they made a season book on the pennant race. Why, I know one man who got $5,000 against $1,000 that the White Sox wouldn't win the pennant. He thinks pretty well of his wager now, but the bookie isn't worried. He has $75,000 in his book right now, and while he may have to pay that $5,000 and a lot more to fellows who wagered at those odds on the White Sox, he is going to keep all the money others wagered on New York, and Cleveland, and St. Louis, and all the other teams. It looks as though the odds are so placed that he will not have to pay out even one-half of the money he has taken in, no matter which team wins. You know only one of them can win."

Huge Sums Bet Every Day.

"Is much money being wagered every day on games?" he was asked.

"Much money!" was his surprised reply. "Say, thousands are bet every day within twenty-five yards of the city hall. Why, I know one man who is just a kind of a piker at it, and he bets an average of $300 every day, and he's just a little guy. Why, there was one man, the gang tells me, who lost $11,000 on that game last Tuesday."

"How about these baseball pools?"

"O, that's just small stuff. All the clerks in offices and stores, and even kids, buy those. Of course, altogether they run into pretty big money, but no one is risking much."

Last Series Stirs Doubt.

Undoubtedly the rumor is founded on alleged suspicious things that took place last fall in the world's series between the White Sox and Cincinnati Reds, which caused an investigation that never brought forth proof. The reports were so strong, however, that the world's series checks of eight different players on the Sox team were held up for several weeks and were not sent to them until they began to make inquiries of the national commission regarding them.

However, it was established that a huge amount of money was wagered on the games, many times more than the amount ever bet on any other world's series.

One gambler in New York, who was connected with the rumors of crookedness, is known to have won $70,000 from one individual.

Veeck Starts Inquiry.

President Veeck of the Cubs stated that every effort would be made to clear up the charges against the Cubs. He was in conference with A. D. Lasker, one of the principal stockholders of the club, and the only member of the executive committee at present in the city.

"No expense will be spared to investigate the charges," said Veeck. "We had detectives on the case before the game was played and they are working now. We propose to see this thing through to the finish and will withhold nothing from the public."

Veeck's Statement.

The statement issued by President Veeck follows:

"Charges that there were 'fixed' players on the Chicago National League baseball team in the game against the Philadelphians last Tuesday came as no surprise to me. If I have any regret at their publication at this time it is merely that investigations which were being made might be hampered through the advance publicity.

Bares "Plot" Telegrams.

"The whole matter was, and is, under investigation under the following circumstances:

"On last Tuesday, Aug. 31, about 2 o'clock, I received the first of several telegrams, the last of which came to hand at 2:45. I give them here in full:

"'Detroit, Mich., Aug. 31, 1920.
"'National League Baseball club,
"'Clark and Addison streets, Chicago, Ill.

"'Unlimited amount of money here today by Chicago sharks to be wagered on Philadelphia winning today's game. Something peculiar.

"'Detroit, Mich., Aug. 31, 1920.
"'Mitchell,
"'Mgr. Chicago National B. B. Club,

Also Gets Phone Calls.

"In the same period I received two long distance telephone calls; one from a man who said his name was G. R. Allen and was telephoning from Detroit. The other was also from Detroit by one who gave his name as J. H. Clinton, 57 Leadbury avenue, Detroit.

"The two parties who phoned me said, in substance, that vast sums were being wagered in Detroit and other cities on the Cubs losing the game that day, and that, with the information before me, they looked to me as president of the club to see that the alleged occurrence was thwarted.

"I immediately got in touch with Manager Mitchell. Until 2 o'clock that day neither of us had the slightest idea that there was, or could be, any suspicion in connection with any player on the Cub team.

Uses Premier Pitcher.

"Our unfortunate experience of last year made us feel doubly responsible to the great baseball loving public, and, after conference, Manager Mitchell and I decided to pitch Mr. Alexander, though he had pitched but three days before, and it was another twenty-four hours until his turn should come.

"We know Alexander is a man above all suspicion and felt with our premier pitcher in the box we were doing all we could, if there was any foundation to the charges, to insure that the dastardly conspiracy, if any such existed, be thwarted.

"I personally sent for Alexander and sketched the situation to him, offering him a bonus of $500 if he won that particular game. I am sure that no man ever went into the box wanting to win more than did Alexander.

Detectives Watch Game.

"I immediately got in touch with the Burns Detective agency and had them put two operators in the park, in space I selected, where they could watch if any untoward things happened which might be interpreted as suspicious.

"With Alexander in the box, the game was played before the public and the baseball reporters, than whom no greater experts nor sharper eyed detectives live.

"Following the game I had Manager Wood of the local Burns Detective agency call at my office. I gave him the original telegrams and instructed him to lose no time and spare no expense to locate the parties who made the charges and obtain from them such evidence as they had.

"Of course, independently it is my duty to the public and the club to continue the investigation which I have under way through the Burns agency. Thus far, in spite of the work of all the operators necessary, the Burns agency has been unable to locate any of the men who sent the telegrams. The man—J. H. Clinton—who phoned and said he resided at 57 Ladberry avenue cannot be located by the Burns office at Detroit. There is no such address in Detroit; there is no such name in the directory.

"If the investigation of the sporting writers should result in the finding by the directors of the National league that there have been players on the Cub team guilty of the heinous crime charged we will drive such players out of baseball, even though it shatter the Cubs team completely for any chance in the coming season."

Cub Pitchers in Spotlight

Pitcher Grover Alexander of Cubs, who was drafted to pitch Tuesday's game when reports of "fixing plot" reached management and was offered $500 bonus to win it. He made a gallant effort but Philadelphia won.

Pitcher Claude Hendrix, whose turn it was to pitch Tuesday, but who gave place to Alexander following plot rumors, so Cubs could face opposition with strongest possible men. Hendrix sat on bench.

ODD TWIST TO BETS ON GAME WHEN CUBS VISITED PHILS' PARK

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Professional gamblers of Philadelphia deny that any large sum was wagered in this city last Tuesday on the Phillies to beat the Chicago Cubs. Virtually all the baseball betting here is done on local games. If any large sum was sent here to bet on the game in Chicago they would have known about it.

One gambler who bets from $5,000 to $10,000 each day at the local ball park admitted that there was a mighty peculiar twist to one of the games played here during the last visit of the Chicago team.

The Cubs visited Philadelphia July 31, Aug. 2, 3, and 4. The Cubs won the first three games. The betting on the third game was 11 to 5 on the Cubs. In spite of three straight victories for the Cubs the betting on the fourth battle shifted to 6 to 5 on the Phillies. Hendrix pitched for the Cubs and the Phils won, 4 to 1.

Causey, a mediocre pitcher, was on the hill for the Phillies. Hendrix was hit nine times and gave four bases on balls in seven and two-thirds innings. After giving three bases on balls in a row in the eighth he was relieved by Carter.

ENVOY OF PERSIA DENIES SECRET BRITISH TREATY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Cable dispatches reaching this country by way of Berlin and widely published, stating that recent discovery had been made of what appeared to be an authentic copy of a secret treaty made by Persia and Great Britain in 1919, caused Sadigh-es-Saltaneh, Persian minister to the United States, to enter a vigorous denial today.

"There positively is no foundation for this report," he said. "The only treaty entered into by Persia and Great Britain was signed on Aug. 9, 1919, and was given the fullest publicity at the time.

"This treaty, however, has recently been temporarily abrogated until it can be submitted to the medjliss, which is the Persian lawmaking and treaty making body, to be called in session in a very short time."

ROBBERS OVERLOOK PAY CHECKS.

Bedford, Ind., Sept. 4.—The offices of the Indiana Quarries company at Olitic, four miles north of here, was robbed by safe breakers last night. About $250 cash was taken and pay checks amounting to several thousand dollars overlooked.

RED RULE TURNS RUSS INTO RACE OF CAVEMEN

Scum of Asia Fills Muddy Prussian Camps.

Since the bolsheviks seized control the vast Russian empire has been practically inaccessible to newspaper correspondents. There is apparently no record of any unprejudiced writer ever penetrating into the interior of Russia and reporting what has been the actual effect of communism on the mass of the people, the mujiks. What has been so inaccessible, now, however, has been brought to the windows of western civilization, and Mr. Gibbons is the first writer to give America a clear view of retrogression of the human race under bolshevism.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ARYS, East Prussia, Sept. 3.—Forty thousand haggard humans, bearing their burden of rags, vermin, mud, filth, hunger, cold, disease and despair—this is the blight of near life that is crowded into three square miles of green hillside and pine groves on the edge of this town.

When the Poles valiantly drove northward into the face of their Russian foes they accomplished more than a military victory when they annihilated the entire fourth Red army. Greater, they expelled into the light and vision of the western world 40,000 examples of what a human being looks and acts like after she or he has submitted to bolshevism as idealistically practiced in Russia. In all the refugee camps along the East Prussian frontier western civilization has an opportunity to see that rarest of rarities—propaganda truthful and uninternational.

Real Communism Here.

Here is real communism—the leveling of estates and conditions—a community of misery in which the bottom rung of desperation has been touched by all alike, in which there appears to be an equality for all in the common sharing of all the ills, troubles, discomforts and hopelessness to the exclusion of all things that man is presumed to desire for himself and his brother.

Taking these interned prisoners as a representative delegation from the land of the soviet, the unflaunted unprinted banner they carry blazes no other slogan than "Disorder, Confusion, and Chaos."

Scum of Asia.

The camp here is the concentration point for the smaller ones in the vicinity. Before the war this campsite was used as a maneuver ground across which the kaiser moved his divisions in mock attack. During the war it was used as a training camp where the younger classes were taught trench digging, dugout construction, and the methods of modern attack. Today this expanse, once so orderly as a national park, now literally seethes with the scum of Asia, ill fed, unkempt dupes of the Red régime.

The skies over this scene are leaden gray. There is a wet wind off the Baltic and there is a mean drizzle of cold rain. Thousands of wisps of smoke are rising from the miserable small fires of green wood. Underfoot a sea of mud is mauled up by the ceaseless moving about of the prisoners.

All Types of Asia.

All types of Asiatics are here. Pock marked Chinks with sleepy eyes leering out from under bulky fur hats. Volga fishermen with heads bare. Swarthy Jewish faces with cigarets limply projecting from thick lips. Northern boys with long straight golden hair and blonde eyebrows. East Indians, Caucasians, Ukrainians, Siberians, Tartars, Mongols, with their raggedness as the only uniformity in their varied costumings, all go to make up this congress of anarchy.

A walk through the camp leaves one with the individual impression of wet matted hair growing far down on brows beneath which peer eyes of fanatical brightness. Hands with talonlike claws are scratching the earth for roots or tearing the flesh from the carcass of some dead horse. Broad, flat, stumpy feet with gnarled toes protruding from dirty bandages, squash through the black mud. And from all rises a babel of hundreds of dialects.

Two thousand orderly Prussian burghers, with the law's "verboten" as their Bible, live next to their confused mass; while 2,000 German troops with polished boots, buttons, and leathers endeavor to restrict the visitors to the confines of the camp. A complete enumeration of the camp and its contents has been impossible up to date, but the German general, Ehrhardt, who is commanding, estimates that the number as between 40,000 and 50,000 men. The number of horses is unknown.

Star of Reds.

Most all the Russians carry a red enameled star pinned on their hat while some wear on their left shoulder, a brass wreathed Red star with a reproduction of a plow and sledgehammer. Several units have established headquarters in stables where Red officers hold forth, but there is no Russian management apparent.

The Germans issued 57,000 rations in camp today. Long lines were standing in the rain and mud in the front of the distributing huts. I saw several haggard women, thin wild looking creatures, wearing gaudy pins of green and white, standing bareheaded in the lines, seemingly entirely ignored by the crowding and eager men in the lines. The prisoners carried old tin cans in which they received their soup. There are numerous disorderly elements among the crowd as evidenced by frequent clashes and knife duels over food. The food is prepared by each individual over fires which are built in the mud.

Burn Up Five Wagons.

One symbol of bolshevism was shown in the act of a simple faced mujik who was designated to obtain firewood from nearby trees, but who instead took a wheel off of a finely made military wagon and by hard work hacked the wood away from the ironwork and made a fire of it. The ground was strewn with the iron skeletons of wagons from which all the woodwork had been consumed. Each wagon once represented the skillful toil of a worker and as such undoubtedly appealed more to the bolshevik as more suitable for destruction than firewood in the forest.

Peering over the shoulders of a circular group bending over some object, I saw that they were engaged in attacking the body of a horse which just had died, as was evidenced by the steam arising from the rainsoaked flanks. The men and women went at the body, some with knives, more with their bare hands, tearing the meat away in chunks. It looked like a feast of wolves.

Eat Whole Horse.

Returning half an hour later, we found nothing was left but the cleaned red and white skeleton lying in the tramped mud, a circle of bones, and the hide. Swarthy men, squatted on their haunches, were holding strips of red flesh on sticks over the fire.

In a field which once held a potato crop hundreds of others poked and scratched in the soil, occasionally finding an overlooked tuber which promptly was grabbed and hidden in the inside pocket. Extremity seems to have the effect of establishing a covetous theory of private ownership even among Communists. Barter and trade goes on garrulously over the fences surrounding the camp.

Germans Trade for Gems.

The Germans are not averse to trading sugar, coffee, cakes and money for precious stones, jewelry, and household articles looted from the fallen and from farm houses and city homes during the Polish invasion. The questionable origin of these valuables was not considered.

The attitude of the prisoners is mostly one of resignation to their fate. They have nothing more to lose. Disillusionment is dawning on most of them. Others simply are sick and fed up on war.

The Germans are unable to prevent any groups of these prisoners from leaving camp almost at will. The roads of the nearby country are dotted with bunches of from three to ten bolsheviki plodding along carrying bundles or riding horses and leading more.

German farm wives are locking their homes securely at night and the farmers are guarding their barns against this visitation of a people from a land where private property is not supposed to exist.

FOREIGN NEWS —IN BRIEF—

PARIS.—French foreign office experts report serious bolshevist disturbances in all principal cities of Italy. In Genoa unpaid workers seized all ships in the harbor. Factories have been seized in Milan and soviets formed in them. In Venice the arsenal was stormed by a mob which armed itself.

BERLIN. — Rumors of a czarist movement in Russia and a monarchist uprising in Germany, circulate in Vienna.

LONDON. — Cork's mayor sinking, but determined; wife appeals to President Wilson and foreign governments; American mayors cable Lloyd George, urging release of prisoner.

MANILA.—Supervised self-rule in the Philippines as controlled by the Jones law is pronounced a success by experts, who assert the Filipinos are rapidly overcoming the ills of all young countries.

ARYS, East Prussia.—TRIBUNE correspondent for the first time writes of conditions as he found them in the interior of Russia, showing clearly the retrograde of the human race under Communism.

BUDENNY BRINGS UP NEW FORCES TO CHECK POLES

Soviets, However, Lose More Ground.

WARSAW, Sept. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Budenny, the Russian soviet cavalry leader, is bringing up infantry reinforcements, apparently designed to check the Polish successes east of Zamosz, northwest of Lemberg.

An official statement issued shortly before last midnight says that Budenny's mounted army is concentrating under cover of newly arrived infantry.

These reinforcements, endeavoring to undo the effect of the defeat suffered by the cavalry, have taken the offensive in the region of Hrubieszow without success. Farther south the Poles have ousted the Russians from Belz, taking much war material.

East of Lemberg and along the Bug and Gnila Lipa rivers the Poles have repulsed the soviet forces with the aid of tanks.

Wrangel in New Offensive.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 2.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Baron Wrangel, head of the south Russian anti-bolshevik government, has announced a new offensive in the regions of Orokov and Melitopol, north of the Sea of Azov, according to dispatches received here. It is said the soviet forces have been driven out of Novo Alexienna.

TALK PEACE, MAKE WAR

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Sept. 4.—French secret agents in Poland report that Gen. Tougachevsky and Gen. Budenny are organizing their joint forces for continuance of warfare despite the soviet government's efforts to make peace speedily.

Russian militarists, realizing that their hopes would be lost by an armistice, are hopeful of maintaining their positions.

The Polish government is reported semi-officially today as saying:

Jugo Slavs to Aid Poles.

VIENNA, Sept. 4.—France has requested Jugo-Slavia to furnish sixteen battalions of infantry and a commensurate force of artillery to be used in the aid of Poland, it is asserted in Belgrade advices received here.

11 INDICTED AS $500,000 SUGAR PROFITEERS

U. S. Names Four Firms; More to Follow.

Four federal indictments, accusing eleven wholesale grocers, candy manufacturers, and sugar brokers of charging excessive prices for sugar, were returned yesterday. Excess profits totaling $500,000 are alleged by the government.

Assistant District Attorney Robert A. Milroy, in charge of the investigation, declared the government is only getting started and that other indictments will follow. A new September grand jury has been asked by District Attorney Clyne and the new evidence will be taken before it. An alleged "sugar ring," which is said to have conspired to boost prices and keep them at unwarranted levels, will be investigated. Nine of the men already indicted are charged with being members of this ring.

These Are Indicted.

The firms and men indicted yesterday are:

BUNTE BROTHERS, candy manufacturers, 720 West Monroe street; Theodore W. Bunte, president; Charles F. Bunte, vice president, and E. W. Boehm, secretary and treasurer. The concern's profits on sugar deals are set at more than $250,000 by the indictments.

HADESMAN BROTHERS, wholesale grocers, 1347 South Ashland avenue; Joseph P. Hadesman, president; Jacob Hadesman, vice president, and Samuel Hadesman, secretary; charged with taking excessive profits of $23,000.

Deny Charges; Claim Loss.

Officials of the indicted firms denied the profiteering charges last night.

"It's ridiculous," said Joseph Hadesman. "They had no grounds for indicting us. Instead of making excessive profits, we are losing money. They charge me with making an illegal profit of $23,000; why, I've lost five times that much on sugar deals."

"It's idle to talk of excessive profit in sugar," said Harry L. Kanter, president of the Empire company. "There's no such thing. All sugar dealers and brokers have lost heavily in the last month. The trouble is the government has taken an unfair attitude. Instead of averaging our monthly records, they have picked out isolated instances. Careful investigation would disclose that our firm has not made a cent in sugar. There is one thing I'm sure of, though. If the government keeps up its present tactics I won't need to pay any excess profits or income tax next year."

Officials of Bunte Brothers refused to discuss the indictments.

U. S. Denies Unfairness.

Government officials denied charges that the firms had not been treated fairly.

"Every angle of the matter has been carefully investigated," said Assistant District Attorney Milroy, "and no charge made which cannot be proved in open court."

Basis of Charges.

The specific charges on which the indictments were based are as follows: Four specific sugar sales laid to Bunte Brothers are detailed. On April 2 they sold 60,000 pounds of sugar to Sutliff & Case, Peoria, charging $17,570 for a shipment which had cost them $8,100, and clearing $9,470, it is alleged.

On April 11, it is charged, 60,000 pounds of sugar were sold to the Nowak Grocery company for $17,400 at a profit of $9,100, and on April 29 two 60,000 pound lots were sold, one to the Central Sugar company, 326 West Madison street, and the other to the Jobst-Bethard company, Peoria, at a profit of $10,400 each.

One Deal, $80,600 Profit.

The Empire company is charged with selling 600,000 pounds to E. W. Edgar & Son, Detroit, for $162,000. The cost, according to the government, was $81,400, leaving a profit of $80,600.

Three 60,000 pound deals are laid to the Hadesman company, on each of which they are charged with taking a profit of $7,781.26, making a total of $23,344.78. The firms purchasing the sugar were the Symes Moffet company, Flint, Mich.; Roehrig & Forester, Detroit, and Taylor, McLeish & Co., Detroit.

The Henderson Taylor company was charged with selling 1,000 pounds of sugar on which it charged a brokerage rate of 2 cents. The legal rate under the Lever law is one-tenth of 1 per cent. Other alleged deals are recorded where the company is said to have charged 1 cent a pound.

Profit Limit Set by Clyne.

At conferences with sugar dealers last spring District Attorney Clyne set [illegible] cents a pound as the maximum profit that could legally be made by a wholesaler in sugar. In some cases profits of 13 cents a pound actually were made, it is alleged. The indictments yesterday were returned before Federal Judge George T. Page.

PAPERS IN PARIS PROTEST EXILE OF "IRISH ENVOY"

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Sept. 4.—The Temps, usually the French government's mouthpiece, attacks Premier Millerand bitterly this morning because of his expulsion of Gavan Duffy from France.

The Temps by thus supporting the Irish stand makes the French press nearly unanimous and this is regarded as an accurate reflection of the strength and growth of anti-English feeling in this country.

This is the first time that Premier Millerand has lost control over the French press.

HOYNE, HAZEN CLASH AS 73 IN RAID ARE FREED

State Blames Court and Vice Versa.

State's Attorney Hoyne and Municipal Judge Irwin R. Hazen differ sharply about the cases of seventy-three persons charged with gambling which the judge dismissed yesterday morning for lack of prosecution.

They had been arrested Friday night in a pool hall at 406 North Clark street, owned by Arthur ["Prince Artie"] Quinn. Two revolvers, a shotgun, $7,000, and various gambling devices were seized by state's attorney's operatives commanded by Detective Sergeant Thomas Costello.

Hoyne Assails Judge.

"All the state's attorney requested was a reasonable continuance," said Mr. Hoyne. "Instead of granting this, Judge Hazen simply threw the cases out of court. He must answer to the people who elected him for his act, and the citizens of the community frown on the idea of snap judgment, especially where the welfare of the community is at stake.

"It is a sad proposition when a judge will go out of his way to throw obstacles in the way of the state's attorney's efforts to clean up the sore spots of the city. The fact that these men were gambling was not questioned."

Judge Defends Action.

Judge Hazen said:

"State's Attorney Hoyne is mistaken when he says I threw these cases out of court on his request for a continuance. Neither the state's attorney nor any of his assistants appeared in these cases. They were called for trial about 10 o'clock. All the defendants and their counsel and witnesses who had assisted in the arrests were sworn and the trials were begun.

"Then the police officer who had signed the complaints said to the city attorney, 'My orders are to continue these cases.' He made no mention of the state's attorney's office. I asked him why he was not ready to proceed and he said the evidence was not in court. I then continued the cases until 12:30 o'clock. He said he could have the evidence there by that time.

Evidence Still Missing.

"When I again called the cases, he said, 'I asked for the stuff [evidence, including $7,000], but they wouldn't let me have it. My orders are to continue this case.' I told him it was for the court to decide about continuances. He refused to testify. I accordingly dismissed all the cases for lack of prosecution."

Referring to Mr. Hoyne's statement about "cleaning up the sore spots of the city," Judge Hazen said he neither shields nor protects gamblers.

"On the contrary, my record will show that where gambling cases have been brought before me with the necessary evidence, I have always imposed substantial fines," he said.

VERMONT LOSES IN POPULATION; NOW HAS 352,421

Washington, D. C., Sept. 4.—Vermont is the first state in the 1920 census to show a loss of population in the last ten years. The census bureau tonight gave Vermont a population of 352,421, a decrease of 3,535, or 1.0 per cent as compared with 1910.

SWISS VIGILANT TO PROTECT LIFE OF LLOYD GEORGE

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

GENEVA, Sept. 4.—As the day of the departure of Lloyd George from Lucerne approaches, the Swiss, French, and English police authorities are taking further elaborate measures of precaution, as they fear an attack against the special train, if not a personal attempt. The date of departure and the route the train will take are concealed. It is reported from Lucerne, Lloyd George wants his son and daughter to travel by another route.

A Swiss mechanic named Oeuvray, who recently sent a telegram threatening Lloyd George, was released here last evening after five day in prison. The report that Lloyd George is going to the Aix conference is incorrect. His secretary says he is returning to London direct. The weather has greatly interfered with the premier's Swiss holiday.

SEES IRISH FIGHTING

E. M. Newman, travel lecturer, has just returned from Ireland, where he secured material for his coming lectures on the struggle of the Irish for independence. He was as eye-witness to many of the bloody conflicts in Dublin and Belfast and other towns.

Mr. Newman says that he went strictly as an observer to secure future material, and to visualize conditions as they actually exist, took many photographs and moving picture views. His deepest impression was the determination of the Irish to fight for their demands to a finish at this time.

Asked as to what he thought the outcome would be, he replied, "There will be no let up to the bloodshed in Ireland until England yields."

SEEK IN VAIN FOR TRACES OF MISSING GIRL

Mother Rushes East to Aid in Search.

At midnight last night the police were almost at a standstill in the city wide search for little Leona Shirley, 12 year old girl, who has been missing from the home of Mrs. Nellie Smith, 617 South Leavitt street, since last Monday. Clew after clew proved worthless. Theories fell down. Rumors had been traced to unreliable sources.

The case was pronounced by Detective Sergeant Charles Axnoe as "most mysterious." The investigators had been baffled at every turn.

Word was received from Pasco, Wash., that Mrs. Anna Cosgrove, mother of Leona, had started for Chicago to assist Mrs. Smith, who is her sister, in the search.

This word ended the theory that she may have had something to do with Leona's disappearance. Police believed that Mrs. Cosgrove or her husband, Frank, might have abducted the child. Difficulties between Mrs. Smith and Cosgrove several months ago are said to have resulted in Mrs. Smith taking Leona to raise.

Mother's Tip Fruitless.

Mrs. Cosgrove telegraphed the police that Leona could be found at 732 West Twenty-second street or that Dr. J. J. Kerwin, 2147 South Halsted street, might know of her whereabouts. Mrs. Smith moved from the Twenty-second street address six months ago, and Dr. Kerwin said he had not heard of Leona since that time.

The strongest clew developed during the day was furnished by Roy W. Curry, a 12 year old boy living at 2432 Warren avenue. He stated he saw a girl who answered the description of Leona, and a young man walking on Adams street near Campbell avenue last Thursday night.

"The girl looked exactly like Leona," said Roy. "She had been crying and the man was coaxing her along."

After telling the police his story Roy toured the neighborhood on his bicycle three hours, but failed to see the pair he watched Thursday night.

Storekeeper on Grill.

Another theory was that Leona, who ran errands for the neighbors and received pennies and nickels for the service, went to the candy store owned by Richard Goldenetz, 711 South Leavitt street, to buy candy. The police searched the store, basement, and Goldenetz' living quarters, but failed to find any trace of the girl having been there. Goldenetz was questioned by detectives for an hour, but they came away satisfied that he knew nothing of Leona's disappearance.

The police also searched the grocery store of Pasquale Lanora, 2222 West Twenty-second street, where Leona had assisted with light chores, but found nothing to indicate Leona had been there recently.

'HOSS DOCTOR' OF MANY JOBS GETS CITY PAY, GARAGE

McMahon Also Peddles Free Fertilizer.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Frank T. McMahon, a city employé, is described by an admirer of his professional ability as "a live wire and some hoss doctor."

A few inquiries yesterday show that he has the following employments:

1. Foreman of horses and veterinarian for the city of Chicago.

2. Claim agent on horses and automobiles and veterinarian for the surface lines.

3. Horse buyer and doctor for the Consumers' company.

4. Veterinarian for Ready & Callaghan Coal company.

At such a pace, he appreciates that life is short and so is a contributor to the city pension fund. If he holds on to his city job, he can later retire on an allowance. The theory of the legislature was that municipal employés could not save for their old age on the salaries they received.

Several Comfortable Salaries.

But Dr. McMahon is going along fairly well. His salary from the city is $2,820 a year. From the street car company he collected $854 last year. The Consumers' company has him on a salary basis of $4,000 a year. The Ready & Callaghan Coal company, who are attempting to collect a bill of $7,798 from the city, were not ready yesterday to say how much they are paying McMahon, but from the number of horses owned by the company it is probably paying in excess of $600 a year. That make a total of $8,274.

But that is not all. McMahon is allowed in the appropriation bill this year $30 a month for gas and upkeep of his automobile. That is $360 more. He has been getting free garage storage in the police station at Wabash avenue and Forty-eighth street. McMahon lives only three blocks away, and that makes it handy. That is a saving of $10 to $15 a month, say, the total for a year is only $120. It might be added that a hostler looks after the auto at the police station, and that saves more expense. This hostler's salary runs around $1,600, but he does not devote his whole time to the veterinarian's auto, so charges up only a small fraction of it to doc's auto.

Gives Away Fertilizer.

McMahon is a very busy person. In addition to the jobs recited above, he buys horses for the police department and he gives orders regarding the free distribution of manure of the city.

Fequently this fertilizer is hauled away by city teams and occasionally a team makes an enormously long haul to accommodate a friend of the city administration or to enroll a new follower of the Lundin-Thompson organization. More than 1,000 loads of city manure are distributed annually.

McMahon's city pay roll runs about $44,500 a month to pay salaries and wages to his thirty-three subordinates.

Presumably McMahon also drops in occasionally at the Grand Crossing police station. At that place two box stalls are provided for "select" horses. One of these has been loaned when a friend of the administration wanted to take a ride through the park. It is regretted that THE TRIBUNE is unable to print a picture this morning of the "select" horse mounted by a public official stepping it off through a park, but the photographer was just a trifle too late.

Gets Boost in Wages.

McMahon's salary was increased in the last budget. The argument was made that he was "subject to call day and night." Therefore it was made $2,820. The police department then had 162 horses. The same job in the fire department also pays $2,820, but it had 366 horses when the last appropriation was made.

The Consumers company has 800 horses and pays McMahon $4,000 a year. It is evident that the Consumers company and the fire department get their horse service much cheaper than the police department.

The surface lines pays $2 a call for veterinarian service. It gives McMahon a special fee when he is asked to determine the ailment of a disabled automobile, but the company does not think he is as good on injured autos as on injured horses.

16 INDICTED AS VIOLATORS OF DRY STATUTES

Sixteen alleged violators of the prohibition laws were named in federal indictments returned yesterday. Among them was Dennis P. Foley, 4856 Sheridan road, whose home was raided several months ago by Maj. A. V. Dalrymple. He was alleged to have had five cases of liquor in his cellar which had been purchased from the "Watson million dollar liquor ring."

Others named were Edwin Tancl, former pugilist, charged with having forty cases of liquor in his Blue Island saloon; Steve Radnor, Vern H. Lahr, Joseph Kopetz, and George Katchose.

I hereby certify that the foregoing statement of work done is correct

JAMES C. LOYTH is one of the prize winners in collecting money from the city treasury while working at the "Thompson heaquarters," 72 West Randolph street.

He was attached to the payroll as a draftsman, but apparently he was considered four times as valuable as a Lundin-Thompson organization worker than a designer of bridges. Anyway his time sheet for March, 1919, shows that he was held in such high regard just previous to the election at which William Hale Thompson was reëlected for mayor of Chicago. That shows that he spent twenty-two out of twenty-six working days in that month at the "Thompson headquarters." His misleading payroll represents that he was working on the Madison street and Wells street bridge designs and was paid accordingly.

For his services—four days to the city and twenty-two days to the Lundin-Thompson organization—he was paid $100 from the treasury of the taxpayers. Therefore the property owners paid $25 a day for the service they received during the four days. And these were not full days at that. One of them was two and a half hours short of being the regular working period—Loyth quit at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon instead of at 5. Another day was Saturday when the city hall closes at noon.

But the time sheet credits Loyth with having earned $73.70 that month for labor on the Wells street bridge design. At the same time this official record proclaims that Loyth did not do an hour's work that month on this bridge. But Loyth should not be held too strictly to account, because he might have been "fired" off the city payroll altogether if he had hesitated to report to the "Thompson headquarters" when ordered to do so.

On Loyth's time sheet for February, 1919, which was reproduced in last SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE, it was revealed that he was in "Thompson headquarters" thirteen days that month for which he drew pay as being at work on the Twelfth street and Wells street bridges.

CLINNIN TELLS HOW BOCHE USED MAYOR'S TALKS

Urges Defeat of City Hall Ticket.

Joliet, Ill., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Col. John V. Clinnin, who was "over there" at the head of the 130th infantry and knows, tonight told Joliet voters how extracts from Mayor Thompson's speeches were dropped from German airplanes by the kaisers' aviators to influence American soldiers against the cause for which they were fighting.

"During the war extracts from Lundin-Thompson newspapers were published in the American in Europe, 'a propaganda newspaper printed in Berlin and dropped from the sky from airplanes or scattered in 'No Man's Land' to wreck the morale of American soldiers—paper bullets to destroy their souls," said Col. Clinnin. "Shall we trust the future destiny of our beloved state to men of this type, or to those who swear allegiance to the Tammany organization?

Would Beat All Tammanyites.

"I say No! A thousand times No! Let us seek out and defeat every candidate who wears the brand of Chicago Tommany's tiger.

"Elect John G. Oglesby governor and you will not have to fear that your property will be confiscated in taxes. No unseen hand shall guide the ship of state during his administration. Save Illinois from bankruptcy. Protect the home and the fireside."

Tells of Peace Meeting.

Col. Clinnin touched on other parts of the mayor's "war record," telling of how Gov. Lowden was forced to send state troops to Chicago in 1917 to prevent a meeting of radicals opposing the war in this city.

He also reviewed the mayor's political history, charging him with frequent acts of treachery to the Republican party and his candidates.

Hays Refuses to Discuss "Falsified" Charge by Cox

New York, Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Will H. Hays, chairman of the Republican national committee, declined tonight to discuss the charge made by Gov. James M. Cox that the Republican national campaign managers had deliberately falsified in their testimony before the senatorial investigating committee.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN —IN BRIEF—

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Gov. Cox said that in G. O. P. fund quiz either Will H. Hays was a "perjurer" or Fred W. Upham was a "falsifier."

MARION—In a conservatively worded speech, Senator Harding charged his rival with insincerity and demagogic appeals.

ENGINEERS TAKE SLAP AT MAYOR'S UTILITY SCHEMES

Western Society Favors Commission Plan.

The Western Society of Engineers took a stiff slap at the Lundin-Thompson organization and its candidate for governor, Len Small of Kankakee.

A short time ago the Chicago chapter of the American Association of Engineers asked the removal of Commissioner of Public Works Francis and all three city civil service commissioners because of the alleged "spoils politics" in the trial and discharge of several bridge engineers.

The Westen society deals with the plan of the Lundin-Small-Thompson organization to abolish the state public utilities commission—deals with the plan exclusively—no mention being made of the promoters of the program.

Favors Commission Plan.

This oganization of standing favors scientific regulation by a commission. It looks upon the "proposed 'Home Rule'" as phoney, saying that it is only a "proposition to popularize the old system by giving it a good name."

Regarding the old system, the resolutions say in part:

"The old system, like any commercial bargain, not based on costs, resulted in poor service where the rates were too low, extravagance and corruption where the rates were too high, and the worst kind of local 'politics' and practices."

Old System a Failure.

The engineers assert that the old system "has proved a failure after long trial." They say in the resolutions that the "so-called home rule does not contemplate placing the responsibility upon an independent and impartial commission employed to devote its time to such matters, but proposes to continue the handling of public utilities in the old political channels, where partisan interests are in position to exert unduly potential influences."

The engineers also say that the "only thing which has saved any semblance of adequate utility service in Chicago has been the fact that the utility commission" could regulate rates, under the old contract ordinances "still fought for by the city administration."

Another paragraph of summarizing intent reads:

"It is our opinion, therefore, that a successful attempt to continue 'five cent fares' and other pre-war utility rates, regardless of costs, would be nothing less than a calamity to the city as a business and social center."

GOV. COX CHARGES SOMEBODY LIED ON G. O. P. FUNDS

Lauds Peace Treaty in Milwaukee Talks.

BY ROBERT B. SMITT.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Invading Wisconsin today on his "swing around the circle," Gov. James M. Cox kept his fire concentrated on the financing of the Republican campaign.

The Democratic nominee for president declared the testimony before the senatorial campaign fund investigating committee proved that "either Will H. Hays is a perjurer or Fred W. Upham is a falsifier" and intimated that members of the Republican ways and means committee were attempting "to dodge the subpœna server."

Gov. Cox made eight speeches today, [illegible] of them in Milwaukee. He spoke to a crowd of about 25,000 persons at the fair grounds in the afternoon. He was introduced by Gov. Philipp, a Republican, who wanted to show proper courtesy, he said, for the governor of Ohio.

Auto Race Shortens Speech.

The crowd was so large that Gov. Cox could not make himself heard by more than a third of the audience. After he had spoken about forty minutes the crowd, anxious to see the automobile races, scheduled to follow, began to cheer almost incessantly and Gov. Cox had to cut his speech short.

Recognizing the large preponderance of German population in Milwaukee, Gov. Cox drew a vivid picture of starvation conditions in Germany and pledged himself to end the present world chaos by ratifying the peace treaty. He also rapped Senator Harding's offer to accept suggestions from Viscount Grey, former British ambassador at Washington.

"We want a world league of nations, not an English league," he said.

Growing Hague Court's Teeth.

Gov. Cox assailed Senator Harding's proposal to discard the league and put teeth in The Hague tribunal.

"I should like to ask Senator Harding some questions," he said. "In one part of your speech you say this nation will not be made to appear as a welcher because no obligation will be assumed. How do you reconcile this with your program of putting teeth in The Hague tribunal?

"This approaches the very crux of the whole argument and the American people are entitled to know your mind.

"There can be no evasion. It was possible in the senate for you to escape 1,161 roll calls and quorum calls, but you cannot do it either as a candidate or as a president. You must answer yes or no."

Fund Conference Canceled.

Gov. Cox, in a renewal of his attack on the G. O. P. campaign fund, called attention to the fact that the scheduled conference at Marion between members of the Republican ways and means committee had been canceled.

"Before I made my exposé of the Republican slush fund members of the Republican ways and means committee and the captains of the money diggers were unblushingly boasting in liberty loan terms that they were going over the top in exceeding their quotas," he said. "Then came denials from the Republican national chairman that such quotas exist.

"I have since established through official Republican documents the existence of such quotas. I find in today's newspapers formal announcement of the cancellation of a conference between Senator Harding and the members of the ways and means committee."

Says Somebody Lied.

In one of his speeches, addressing himself to Mr. Hays, Gov. Cox said: "If you told the truth on the stand under oath, then Mr. Upham, in his official capacity misrepresented you. This contradictory circumstance shows that you either are a perjurer or Mr. Upham is a falsifier. If the latter be true, then it is your duty to discharge him as treasurer. If you do not do so, then the American people can draw their own conclusions."

IN CHICAGO TODAY

Gov. James M. Cox, Democratic nominee for president, passed through Chicago yesterday on his way to Milwaukee, where he spoke later in the day. He will be in Chicago again this afternoon.

Local Democrats are arranging a reception for Gov. Cox on his return today, although they are not certain of the hour of his arrival. The Chicago Women's Democratic committee, which meets in its headquarters in the Fine Arts building at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, plans to invite all present to attend a reception to Gov. Cox.

VITAL PROBLEMS TO ENGINEERS PUT UP TO CANDIDATES

In a bulletin issued by the National Association of Engineers and sent to its members, the positions of Senator Harding and Gov. Cox on questions of policy of interest to engineers are made clear. The association sent both candidates a questionnaire as to their attitude on establishment of a department of public works, assembling and coördinating engineering enterprises of the government, except military ones, under the department, the appointment of an engineer as a member of the interstate commerce commission, conservation of national resources, the budget system, reclamation of waste lands, and financial assistance to settlers.

Gov. Cox's reply is:

"My answer to every one of the questions you ask is unequivocally, [illegible]"

Senator Harding declared he did not care to enter into "any categorical replies to questionnaires, no matter how worthy they may be and no matter how reputable and high standing is the source from which they come."

He promised, however, to study the questions.

CHIEF FIGURES AT RHODES INQUEST

Richard Jacobson, husband of the "woman in the Rhodes case," who refused to testify at the inquest, and then disappeared just before the state's attorney's operators raided his apartment. The police learned that Jacobson has been a "gun toter."

Mrs. Gladys Virginia Jacobson, who was in his auto with Howard B. Rhodes when he was killed near Evanston. She refused to testify at the inquest yesterday on the ground that she might incriminate herself. She disappeared last night from her usual haunts.

Miss Mary Smith, farmer girl living fifty yards from murder scene, who heard two shots. She will be called as a witness when the inquest is resumed.

"I am not going to," said Mr. Short.

Informed of Her Rights.

"I desire to recall her, for she testified falsely at the last hearing," the coroner said.

Mrs. Jacobson appeared.

"It is your right, I want to inform you," said Mr. Hoffman, "that because of the evidence here that you needn't testify unless you want to. Evidence that you adduce here may be used later in a hearing in the Criminal court. It may be used against you. Have you conferred with your counsel?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you desire to take the witness stand?"

"No."

"Do you refuse to testify?" asked Mr. Prystalski.

"Yes, sir."

"Why?"

"The fact that evidence may be used against her in future criminal proceedings, and for that reason she refuses to testify," declared Mr. Short.

"I had intended to give this woman an opportunity to take the witness stand," the coroner slowly and impressively stated, "and testify to the truth, because she admitted she did not tell the whole truth at the last hearing. We all know that it is her privilege, however, not to testify further if she does not wish to. Let the record show that I warned her of her rights under the law, and she has refused to testify because of fear of incrimination."

JACOBSON ALSO SILENT

"Now, what about Mr. Jacobson?" Attorney Martin Watrous, 38 South Dearborn street, stood up. "Mr. Jacobson desires, if the coroner pleases, if he could shed any light on this——"

"Mr. Jacobson, it is my desire to put you on the witness stand," began the coroner. "Are you represented here by counsel?"

"Yes," replied Jacobson.

"Are you willing to take the stand?"

"No, sir."

"Mr. Jacobson," Mr. Watrous explained, "refuses to testify upon the ground that he is not in any way connected with the accident. If criminal proceedings are instituted his answers might be used against him——"

"In what way could they be used against him if he answers?" the coroner interrupted. "I desire to use him as a witness. I am not making any charges against him."

"If he knew anything about the matter," Mr. Watrous again explained, "he would be very glad to testify. As it is, I desire to have him refuse to testify upon the ground that the evidence may tend to incriminate or be used against him."

"If the man feels that he don't want to testify on the ground that it might tend to incriminate him in this murder case," Mr. Prystalski asserted, "it is his constitutional privilege not to answer. If he feels that what he says might tend to incriminate him in this murder case, he has the same privilege. That is the only thing that can save him from answering. That is the law. If he thinks what he says here might make this jury or the coroner think he is guilty of murder, that is the only thing that can stop him."

"I desire to have him refuse to testify upon the ground that the evidence may tend to incriminate or be used against him," declared his attorney.

"And you believe there is danger of that?" queried the coroner.

"We desire to exercise our constitutional privilege, that's all."

TWO CARS AT DEATH SCENE

By far the most sensational testimony of the day was that of Julius Steif, who declared that there were two cars on Prairie road within a few hundred feet of each other at the time of the killing, and who also declared that only two shots were fired. The introduction of evidence concerning the second car corroborates a theory upon which Assistant State's Attorneys Prystalski and O'Brien and reporters for THE TRIBUNE have worked for several days.

Steif gave his residence as Oakton and Eastbury street, his business as a gas operator employed by the Public Service company at Evanston.

"Did you hear the shooting on Sunday evening, August 29?" the coroner asked.

"Yes, sir," he replied.

"About what time?"

"It was between half past 12 and 1 o'clock."

"Where were you?"

"On the road leading from the gas works."

"Did you see the flash of any guns?"

"No, sir."

Shots Fired Quickly.

"You saw the machine?"

"Yes, sir, I saw the machine on East Prairie road, facing north. The headlights were burning brightly and I wasn't over a mile away."

"Were those shots fired quickly, in succession?"

"One right after the other."

"Did they sound as though one gun might have been a big caliber and one small, or were they both about the same."

"They were about the same."

"How many were there?"

"Two."

"What did you do?"

"I went to the corner, and stayed there at least five minutes. I looked down and saw another car facing north in the road, tail lights my way. They were standing still.

"Both cars were facing north. One was south of me, the other about 100 yards north of me. Both were on East Prairie road. Altogether, they were about 300 yards apart."

"Did you hear anybody scream?"

"No, sir."

"Did you see anybody running away?"

"No, sir."

"Did you figure that these two cars had any connection with each other?"

"I could not tell you."

Saw No One Run Away.

"Now, if any one had passed from one of these cars to the other where would they have gone?"

"They would have had to pass me."

"Sure you didn't hear three shots?"

"Positive."

"Did you hear an automobile horn tooting after you heard those shots?"

"I did not."

"Did you see anybody running from either car in any direction?"

"I did not."

"Did you see anything happen around either of those cars after the shooting?"

"No, sir, nothing happened."

MISS GEIST ON STAND

Miss Rose Geist, 1128 Sherman avenue, the first witness called, testified that in company with Oscar M. Ekstrand, Harry Anderson, and Miss Anderson, she had driven along Prairie road, thence south toward Oakton street. About three blocks from Dempster street, she said, they saw a car coming.

"Who was driving it?" the coroner asked.

"A woman, clothed in white. When she got opposite us she screamed for help," was the reply.

"What did she say?"

"She said: 'Help me, he has been shot!' I turned to Anderson, who was driving the car, and he stopped.

"Was he alive then?"

"Miss Anderson said: 'He is rolling his eyes.'"

In describing the position of Rhodes' body as it lay in the car when met by the Ekstrand party Miss Anna Anderson was more explicit.

"He was lying with his body over on the seat toward the right," she told the coroner.

"Beside the driving wheel?"

"Yes, but away over."

"Who was in the driver's seat?"

"Mrs. Jacobson."

"How was she dressed?"

"She had on a blue waist and a whtie skirt and no hat or coat. Her hair was falling around and her skirt was all full of blood. She said he had been shot and I remember my saying 'How?' She said: 'A man jumped on the running board and hollered "Stick 'em up!" and just as Mr. Rhodes felt for his gun the robber shot him.'"

HARRY ANDERSON ON STAND

Harry Anderson, the third witness, told of his trip in the Rhodes car from Prairie road to the hospital.

"She asked for help and I said: 'Certainly.' I got in the machine and laid Rhodes on my knees on the back of the car there, holding his head with my right hand. When I got in the car I found that the left leg was across the gear shift. I took the leg and lifted it clear over on one side, so that she was able to shift her gears, and then she started out, I holding his head with my right hand so as not to let it bounce against the door."

"What conversation took place between Mrs. Jacobson and you before you got in the machine?"

"The conversation with me was with regard to keeping us out of it entirely. We didn't want anything mentioned about helping."

When Oscar Ekstrand got to the Rhodes car he saw the body "in a reclining position with his head over toward one side of the car and his feet were over close to the clutch."

"Did you make any inquiry as to how this man had been shot?" the coroner queried.

"She said he had been stuck up," Ekstrand replied.

"What about the man on the bicycle?"

"I didn't see him."

"Miss Geist, come here!" the coroner said. "Didn't you say Mr. Ekstrand quizzed a man on a bicycle?"

"Why, yes," the young lady replied, "don't you remember"—turning to Mr. Ekstrand—"when we turned down Oakton street and half a block down we met this man on a bicycle and you spoke to him?"

"I have a dim recollection of it, that is about all," Estrand broke in.

FACTS FOR THE CHIEF

When Harry Webber, a farmer boy, one of the pair searched by Ekstrand on Oakton street shortly after the murder, was called to the stand, it was discovered that Chief of Police Charles W. Leggett didn't even know the name of Miss Emma Hoth, a witness who was the closest to the murder and whose testimony is considered invaluable by the coroner.

"Have you heard any of your neighbors commenting on the crime?" he was asked.

"Well," he said, "my sister says Emma Hoth, a neighbor, said she heard only two shots fired."

"You can get twenty people that heard two shots fired," Assistant State's Attorney Prystalski broke in. "Mrs. Damitt so testified. She said she heard two shots. All of these people have said the same thing."

Miss Emma Hoth's story and photograph and Mrs. Damitt's story and photograph appeared in THE TRIBUNE three days ago.

And, at the conclusion of the fifth day since the slaying, the police were still asking—some of them in significant tones—"Who fired those two .32 caliber bullets through Rhodes' brain?"

HARDING GIVES SUBDUED REBUKE TO COX CAMPAIGN

Implies Rival Surrenders to Demagogy.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Marion, O., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Senator Harding wants America to have the "most effective and dependable navy in the whole world," he told members of a Chicago naval training station band today.

The band gave a concert in his front yard, and he read them a short address. He outlined his conception of what a presidential candidate should do and should not do.

Referring to Gov. Cox's attempt to make campaign expenditures an issue, he said:

"As I see it, I must not drag the attention of the American people into a mire when it is their whole-hearted desire that their attention snould be centered upon the problems which we all wish to face bravely and wisely and together.

Must Not Yield to Demogogy.

"As I see it, I must not, as I seek to gain votes for my party, yield to the temptation which often comes to men who are candidates to make false appeals and appeals which, though they might be successful at the moment, do not serve truth or meet the requirements of our national dignity.

"As I see it, I must concentrate my attention upon construction, and not upon abuse.

"As I see it, I must be patient and tolerant with those Americans who may differ with me.

"As I see it, I owe it to the men and women of America to guard against all pretense.

"As I see it, if I were to stoop to insincerity, to mere clamor, to political expediency, to appeals to special classes, I would be failing in that purpose which I trust shall always be mine."

William J. Burke of Pittsburgh, congressman at large and for years an official of the Order of Railway Conductors, and Daniel Winters, former president of the National Window Glass Workers' union and now a member of their general council, called on Senator Harding today and tendered support.

Repudiates Gompers.

"Mr. Gompers has the right to his preference for president," said Winters, "but he ought to be fair, and, when he declares for one candidate, should add that he has always been a Democrat. He was active for Mr. Bryan and for Mr. Wilson. Mr. Gompers cannot deliver the labor vote, as he has attempted. Labor has always enjoyed its greatest prosperity under Republican control, and under the protective tariff system of the Republican party the American workingman enjoyed the best living conditions in the world, and workingmen know that."

Senator Harding will deliver a labor address next Monday here. On Tuesday morning he will leave for Minneapolis, where he speaks Wednesday at the state fair.

WEST FIRM FOR G. O. P. VICTORY, SENATOR SAYS

Poindexter Predicts Full Control.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Triumph for the Republican party in retaining control of the United States senate in the next congress was predicted today by Senator Miles Poindexter, chairman of the Republican senatorial committee. He returned to Washington from a trip to the Pacific coast.

Senator Poindexter denounced the claim of the Democrats that they would elect a successor to Senator Jones of Washington, Mr. Poindexter's colleague.

"I have made very careful examination of conditions in all states where the senatorial election is at all uncertain," Senator Poindexter said, "and I feel satisfied the Republicans will retain all of the states they now hold and will gain several states now held by the Democrats.

Resents Democrats' Claim.

"I understand it has been said by some Democratic leaders that Washington will elect a Democratic senator, and that Washington and the Pacific coast and Rocky mountain states are for the league of nations.

"This opinion evidently comes from those who do not live in that section and are not familiar with conditions. No one in the state of Washington who is well informed has any doubt that it will go Republican, both for the presidential and senatorial tickets. We will gain a seat in Idaho, in Colorado, and have excellent prospects of gaining seats in Arizona, California, and also in Nevada and Oregon.

"The people of the west remember that during the war, when questions were asked in congress as to the failure of the war administration to produce war supplies, such as ordnance, the answer always was the boast that the war department had expended enormous sums of money. Gov. Cox says in his speech of acceptance that America paid one-third of the entire cost of the European war."

The senator added that the mandate for Syria is "maintained by force of arms," and that the league of nations had not "brought about that comity of action between France and England as to Poland which was expected."

G. O. P. Canvass Shows Victory.

New York, Sept. 4.—[Special.]—The New York Tribune will say in the morning: "Harding and Coolidge will be elected by an overwhelming popular and electoral vote, according to canvasses made under direction of chairmen of Republican state committees in every state in the union.

"The canvass, which was made at the instance of Will H. Hays, while not completed in all states, has gone far enough to cause the officials at national headquarters to predict the election of Senator Harding and Gov. Coolidge by an electoral vote of 346 to 185 for Cox and Roosevelt.

'The canvass made in twenty western states has been completed and six of them which went Democratic four years ago will go heavily for the Republican ticket this fall, the figures show."

'BANZAI! WILSON,' 'OLD PAL JAPAN,' TONE AT BANQUET

Yank Congressmen Hailed at Tokio Dinner.

TOKIO, Sept. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—The entire cabinet and 600 Japanese and American men and women attended the luncheon given in honor of the visiting American congressmen in the Imperial hotel today.

Takashi Hara, the premier, toasted President Wilson, Edward Bell, American chargé d'affaires, and the Japanese emperor.

Addresses were delivered by Senator William J. Harris of Georgia and Representative John H. Small of North Carolina, both dwelling on the innumerable courtesies the American congressmen had received in Japan.

Strong Friend of Japan.

Mr. Harris said he would leave with strong feelings of friendship for and belief in the Japanese people.

"There is not an enemy of Japan but would like to see differences arise between Japan and America," Mr. Harris declared, "but differences must and will be avoided through frank intercourse."

In the course of his address Mr. Small said a Japanese newspaper had asked what the American congressmen were doing here, and the answer to this was, who would not come to Japan if he had the chance?

"We flatter ourselves that any impression we receive will be a distinct contribution to public opinion, which makes for good government," Mr. Small said.

Mr. Small said a newspaper had spoken of America as a menace to Japan, but he declared any one who said that, or proclaimed Japan a menace to America, must be a jingo.

Recalls Old Generosity.

"Japan is a country with a history of 3,000 years," President Oku of the house of representatives said. "The Japanese, consequently, are fond of talking about the past. For instance, the port of Shimonoseki, where you first touched the shores of old Japan, reminds us of a deed of generosity on the part of your country that makes us feel grateful.

"It is my earnest hope that the relations of the two countries will forever be friendly and intimate."

President Oku's allusion was to America's return of the indemnity growing out of the Shimonoseki bombardment incident in 1864.

CONDEMNED.

Be it resolved, That we emphatically condemn the war record of Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago.

The American Legion, department of Illinois, has brought its verdict of guilty against the record made by William Hale Thompson and the unscrupulous and un-American influences which have shaped and still direct it.

The condemnation of the Legion is not a common expression of opinion, such as partisan or civic bodies sometimes bring against public officials. It is the voice of American patriotism giving judgment against all weakness in time of the nation's trial.

We think the Legion's condemnation seals finally the fate of disloyalty as a political policy in this state. The men who offered their lives to their country have exercised their right and their duty to brand it forever for all citizens to recognize and punish. The men who fought the enemy in Flanders and in France, who dared the gas, the machine guns and shell fire of battle, the long marches and weary bivouacs, the many sided sacrifices of the patriot soldier—these men have spoken out against the sleek home staying political profiteers, who, while our men fought and bled under the flag, played for power with the forces of sedition, disloyalty, and defeat.

The Legion has spoken, and no man or woman in Illinois in whose heart there is love of our country and of our patriotic commonwealth will have any doubt of the righteousness of its condemnation.

Is the Lundin-Thompson Tammany war record an issue in this campaign?

It is the foremost of the issues, an issue deeper and more momentous than that of the misgovernment which has run riot where Tammany has held sway. The forces that in the midst of the nation's ordeal did not hesitate to appeal to every influence in the community which could weaken the strength of the nation's arm, its fighting morale, its devotion to unity and duty, are now directing their political strength for the extension of their malign power.

If disloyalty is politically profitable, that profit will be shown at the ballot box on Sept. 15. If it pays to stab the national morale as it braces itself to meet the enemy it will pay on Sept. 15.

The condemnation of the Legion summons every loyal man and woman in Illinois to the defense of the state from the forces which are preying not merely upon the material health of Chicago but upon the moral character of Illinois citizenship.

The memory of our heroic dead summons the people of Illinois, for whose honor and continued safety and welfare they gave the last full measure of devotion. The Legion, guardian of our highest honor and our most glorious tradition, points sternly the issue.

Illinois will rise to that noble challenge in the spirit of its patriotic traditions.

DANGERS IN IMMIGRATION.

Disorders and terrors in Poland and elsewhere in central Europe are stimulating emigration to the United States. Floyd Gibbons reports the presence of hundreds on the streets of Danzig with American passports and the prospect rightfully causes an American some uneasiness. These newcomers will get a physical examination at our ports to see that they do not bring in contagious diseases and they will be otherwise examined, but not to discover what their state of mind is.

They are coming from lands of unrest and of revolutionary action and we should like to know in what spirit they are coming, whether to make use of opportunities in a free land, with respect for its institutions, or whether they are bringing their hatreds and prejudices, their revolutionary spirit, their class consciousness and their contempt for democratic institutions.

We do not want European additions to the elements of unreasoning discontent in this country.

THE THINKING FARMER.

The Illinois Agricultural association is doing an important service to good citizenship in this state. For example, we quote the following from Mr. A. C. Everingham of Hudsonville, one of the farmers who are speaking to farmers under the direction of the association:

"One of the things the farmers of this country must become more actively interested in is the incoming foreigner. We have been too generous in the past. We have let everybody in. We have asked few questions. This must be changed. At the present time the authorities tell us they are preparing for a great influx of foreigners. What shall be required of them?

"Many of us had to live here twenty-one years before we were considered as qualified to vote intelligently. Many of these incoming men have been given the franchise after an incredibly short residence and many more have been allowed to remain here, accumulating fortunes and never even declare their intention of becoming citizens. This must be changed. We will favor the receiving of any one who will honestly declare their belief in the institutions of our country and their intention to qualify as citizens and support those institutions. But we shall demand the return of those who are in open hostility to the government and unwilling to accept citizenship."

It is often said that the solidity of American institutions and the prosperity which has been built up under their influence and protection rests upon the character and intelligence of our farming population perhaps more than upon that of any other class of our people. Fortunately this character and intelligence have always been high, and we are glad that along with attempts to win the farmer to un-American ideas there is a strong movement to organize his great influence in defense of American institutions and principles of progress. The farmer is often an isolated individual. He needs the support of his kind, more cooperation, financially, economically, and politically. He represents the final source of the nation's wealth and power and the rock bottom of its social and political health and stability. We need him always in the formation of our policies and he must be awake to our common problems.

SMITH, TAMMANY YES MAN.

Frank Smith, the Thompson candidate for the United States senate, is trying to persuade downstate Republicans that he is not, as is Len Small, a Thompson and Lundin yes man.

Mr. Smith is willing to be a yes man in Chicago, but he hopes that the citizens elsewhere will regard him as a candidate with merely a casual acquaintance with the Chicago Tammany.

If he could get the Chicago underworld strength of the Thompson organization and avoid the abhorrence of it, he might stand a better chance of winning in the primaries.

Unfortunately for Mr. Smith's attitude of independence, it is true that if he were independent, Thompson would have nothing to do with him. Thompson is for Smith because Smith is for Thompson.

Smith indorsed Thompson's platform, accepted Thompson's ideas, underwrites his utterances, and is what Thompson and Lundin want him to be, or he would not get a vote from the Chicago Tammany.

Thompson is for Smith all over the state because Smith is for Thompson all over the state. He turned from Lowden and went to Thompson to get the votes Thompson could give him in Chicago, and to get them he joined the Thompson organization.

Thus connected he cannot eliminate himself from the Tammany, which is trying to extend itself over the state. He cannot be the independent downstate farmer and banker. He has voluntarily joined up and is in the ranks of yes men, directed by Lundin, with Thompson as the overlord.

These affiliations of Mr. Smith, which he sought, and the agreements to which he subscribed, make it impossible for a respectable Republican who fears and detests the Chicago Tammany to vote for Tammany's candidate for the United States senate.

DID WE KEEP THE LEAGUE FROM WORKING?

A favorite argument on the Cox side of the fence is that the United States kept the league of nations from operating because the United States did not join. The league is not inoperative. Its mandate muscles are in good condition. The only failure up to date was with Armenia. No other failures are recorded in Asia or Africa. The Japanese, British, French, Belgians, Greeks, etc., are proceeding in possession of all territory parceled out by the league.

Its failure was when it might cost something. If that failure is attributed to the United States it must be because the United States, not being busy with mandates, was to undertake such matters as the defense of Poland.

THE REAL ISSUE.

While Mr. Cox is trying to draw attention away from the uncomfortable fact that he is pledged to Mr. Wilson's covenant by sounding the alarum to awake American voters to the danger of their being bought by the Republican party, let us humor him by reverting to a domestic issue.

Considering that Mr. Cox insists upon changing the subject, we'll agree, in view of the present prospects of the covenant, that this issue is more important. In fact, we think it is paramount. Mr. Gifford Pinchot has defined it as follows:

"If Gov. Cox should be elected, which he must not be, we would be ruled for the next four years by a combination of the old southern Democracy and the most vicious political machines in the country: the Democratic machines of New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. What we have suffered already in reckless waste would be merely a curtain raiser to what would follow."

Perhaps Mr. Pinchot exaggerates as to the possibilities of a restored Democratic rule. The war, after all, gave cover to a lot of things that could not be got away with in peace time, even by an administration sewed up with Tammany and the deserving Democrats of the solid south. After all there is a limit to what the public will accept, and we think the outgoing political powers reached that limit.

Nevertheless, the relief to be expected from Mr. Cox's confreres is about what a typhoid patient would get from a relapse. We'll do better without the relapse.

Editorial of the Day

THOMPSONISM IN ILLINOIS.

[Dixon Telegraph.]

The issue in the coming state campaign is whether Mayor William Hale Thompson and his big-city political machine shall be given control of the state of Illinois. Bent on spreading out its tentacles from its Cook county lair until it holds this great state powerless under its sinister influence, the Chicago city hall machine is campaigning to install its hand picked selection of politicians in the various state offices from governor down. Do we of Illinois want to have our government and our political destinies turned over to the tender mercies of the Thompson-Lundin type of Tammany Hall control? We guess not.

This attempt on the life and liberty of the state capitol at Springfield by the Thompson crowd is not a sudden inspiration that occurred to brighten them one day this summer. They have thought of it before and have made moves in the past that they hoped would ease them closer to the prize. They displayed their hand quite openly at the last state convention, but were beaten by Gov. Frank O. Lowden. Their thirst for vengeance and their treachery to Illinois' candidate for the Republican nomination for president was all too evident in the national convention.

Unable to control Lowden or his friends, they are making a desperate effort to win the state offices by boldly putting forth a slate of candidates and pressing them upon the people for nomination.

The Telegraph believes that Thompsonism should be stopped at the Cook county line. We believe that John G. Oglesby should be nominated and elected governor of Illinois and that the best interests of the people of the state, not only downstate but in Chicago as well, will be served by placing Oglesby in the governor's chair at Springfield.

We hope to see the people of Illinois administer a stinging rebuke to Mayor Thompson for his treatment of Lowden in his candidacy for the presidency.

PREVENTING ROPY MILK.

OCCASIONALLY I receive a complaint about ropy milk, another name being slimy milk. Harding and Prucha of the University of Illinois recently wrote a bulletin on the subject. There is more complaint of ropy milk now than there was in the old days when the average milk was much dirtier than now. In the old days the acid producing bacteria present in such large numbers soured the milk before it could become ropy, and the germs which cause ropy milk do not grow in acid milk.

Ordinary pasteurization, such as is practiced, does not always kill the germs of ropy milk to the same degree it kills the acid producers. And, finally, the germs of ropy milk grow at low temperatures. They will grow in milk kept in a fairly efficient refrigerator.

So far as is known, ropy or slimy milk is not unhealthy. It has not been known to cause disease. It does not greatly change the taste of the article. But it is objectionable. Consumers do not like it and dairymen are afraid of getting it in their supplies.

The University of Illinois scientists were called on to investigate the cause of ropy milk coming from a large dairy. They came to the conclusion that the trouble was brought to this milk depot by the product of two farms. They hold that the trouble generally starts on the farm. The milk from a farm where it prevails infects the other milk, the cans, the vats, and machines at the milk plant until presently any bottle put out at that plant is likely to develop ropiness if kept in an icebox for two or three days.

The old farmer method of curing ropiness was to wash all cans, pails, and utensils of every kind with sour milk. This cured it all right, but it left quickly souring milk in the place of ropy milk. In other words, the farmer overgrew the germs of ropy milk by those of sour milk and put up with rapidly souring milk to get rid of the ropy article. But the present day milk consumer objects to the rapidly souring article also. The outbreak investigated was an epidemic in that it spread to all the product. The investigators found that if the milk was pasteurized at 140 F. for thirty minutes all germs of ropiness were killed. If all vats, pans, kettles, pipes, cans, bottles—in a word, everything touched by the milk after pasteurization—were sterilized by steam pressure the pasteurized milk would not become reinfected. On a farm infected by this germ the milk cans and pails should be sterilized by steam under pressure or by chemical disinfectants.

GET BOOKS ON CHILD CARE.

Overworked Father writes: "I have a son 15 months old who is giving my wife and me a lot of trouble. Perhaps you will be kind enough to give us some advice. In the first place, he walks perfectly and has six teeth, but in the last four months he has not slept one night though; sleeps very seldom in the day. At night it is 10 or half past 10 before he falls asleep. He will not fall asleep unless he picks at my wife's eyes and tosses about crying. He eats no meat, mostly potatoes and gravy and farina and milk. He always seems hungry. His unrest gives us very little sleep. Is there some soothing sirup we could give? My wife is failing for lack of sleep and I am very often late at work. Your advice will be appreciated."

REPLY.

Your child is of a nervous temperament, but has been made worse by bad training. You should not give him any kind of soothing sirup. The only remedy for the situation is training. Had you trained him from the beginning to go to sleep without rocking you might have been spared your present predicament. Keep him out of crowds and away from people. The less he is played with or noticed by company the better off you will be. He must be trained to eat definite quantities at definite times. Have your wife get a copy of Read's "Mothercraft Manual" or Drummond's "The Child, Its Nature and Nurture," read it, and follow the advice given there. Drs. Clark of Long Beach, Cal., have an excellent system for child training, beginning with babies in arms.

KEEP BABY AT BREAST.

Mrs. J. H. P. writes: "1. Please tell me how to prepare certified milk? 2. My baby is a month old and does not sleep much. He seems hungry all the time. I have had a doctor see him. The doctor says I have plenty of milk. The baby's stool is curdy and he has much gas on his stomach. 3. I must take herb tea every night to move my bowels."

REPLY.

1. Certified milk is milk that has been produced on special farms and is certified to by a certifying commission. You buy it from dealers who sell certified milk.

2. Keep your baby at the breast. If you are giving plenty of milk, do not wean him. Breast milk is better than certified milk. The fact that you are taking herb tea should not cause you to wean him. Do not feed the baby oftener than every three hours.

WHEN DOCTORS GUESS WRONG.

B. F. C. writes her experiences with nervousness. For ten years she traveled from doctor to doctor. Then, having found that medicine was not what she needed, she spent five years in chasing mental and social treatment for nervousness. Then she found a physician who said she was nervous because she had a cause to be. He operated on her, removed the diseased organ responsible, and within two months she was cured of her nervousness of fifteen years' standing.

REPLY.

Your history is not an unusual one. The diagnosis of nervousness, neurasthenia or hysteria should not be made until a thorough physical examination shows the absence of organic disease, which might be causing the trouble.

AN EARLY RISER.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—[Friend of the People.]—People living next door keep chickens which are a veritable nuisance. The roosters by their early morning crowing make sleep impossible, while rats and flies are attracted to the chicken yard. I would like to know what can be done about getting rid of the above described nuisance.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

INCIDENTAL TO THE WAR RECORD.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—For the information of the ex-service man who has a ballot to cast I wish to state an incident which will bear consideration.

Drexel post of the American Legion last winter sent a committee of which I was a member to the board of education to ask the privilege of using a room or a hall once or twice a month for a temporary meeting place until such time as the organization was financially able to afford permanent quarters. The question was brought to the attention of the close friend of Mr. Davis, who also was close to the mayor, being president of one of the ward Thompson clubs. This man assured the writer there was nothing "they could not do" and that he would put it over so the ex-soldiers could have their quarters at least twice a month in the school.

Our committee were heard by Mr. Davis, who politely informed the writer that as the legion was not of an educational nature we had to pay for the privilege of meeting at the school to the tune of $18.50 per night. Mr. Davis did take the matter up with the board, who advised us the same. Needless to say, the fact that the war was over was uppermost in the minds of those in power.

The days of 1917 and 1918 when we marched away asking nothing but being promised much were forgotten.

Why, may I ask as a voter, was the ex-soldier denied the use of that property for which he had sacrificed so much to protect? They told us we could pay for the use of the hall because the city was broke and they needed the revenue. Who broke this city? We ex-service men want to know.

CHARLES E. LAWSON.

ANALYZING THE LANDLORD'S OVERHEAD.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Under heading "Rents," signed by "Mr. Owner," in which he upholds profiteering landlords, he sets forth an example of one poor unfortunate owner in distress as follows: Expenses three years ago, $3,462; expenses at present, $6,330; increased expenses, $2,868; eighteen apartment building. Divide eighteen apartments, $160 per year, or $13.50 per month. Now, he claims it is necessary to boost rent from $40 to $80 in order to meet an increase of 100 per cent expenses.

If his increased expenses are $13.50 per flat, why is he entitled to $40 more each month? Remember, if you run a business with 20 per cent overhead and your expenses double you must only add 20 per cent more, making 40 per cent overhead, not 100 per cent, as most of you want to do. Fortunately you can't get away with it.

W. O. SMITH.

FEARFUL.

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—After having read your splendid editorial in your issue of this date on the ridiculous demand of the Methodist church in regard to Tia Juana, Lower California, in which the Methodists insist that the state department refuse passports to Americans wishing to go to that place of moisture and mirth (and perhaps more or less deviltry), one is constrained to wonder if any religious body could actually be in earnest in such a matter and still possess any sense of humor whatever. Must the citizens of this country go before the state department or the board of morals of the Methodist church every time they wish to purchase a bag of peanuts or a pound of sugar, and swear that the peanuts will not be used to entice some youth into a gambling den, and the sugar will not be used to make any insidious concoctions for home consumption? Will it be impossible for a man and wife to visit France for the purpose of seeing the grave of a dead son without first asking permission of the worthy Methodists and giving a written oath that they will not visit any den of iniquity where wine is sold? Gosh! I wonder how soon we may expect an order from this self-constituted board of morals to the effect that every man, woman, and child in the country must attend Wednesday evening prayer meeting?

AN AMERICAN.

A FLY IN THE RAILROAD RATE OINTMENT.

Evanston, Ill., Aug. 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Thinking people will be inclined to accept as equitable if unwelcome the increase in freight and passenger rates authorized by the interstate commerce commission, as a matter which they do not understand but to which the railroads must be entitled, in justice because the commission has so decided. Doubt is cast upon the fairness of the decision because along with it comes the authorization for the tremendous increase in the charges for sleeping car accommodations by the Pullman company.

For twenty years or more the Pullman company has been paying dividends to its stockholders at the rate of 8 per cent per annum. Its capital is shown by the record to be $120,000,000, of which more than $70,000,000 consists of stock dividends distributed in addition to the 8 per cent dividends paid. In addition to this increased capitalization on which 8 per cent is paid, the company has accumulated a surplus which, in July, 1920, amounted to more than $20,000,000. The obviously unreasonable advance in the Pullman rates tends to cast doubt on the justness of the advance in freight and passenger rates and must have the effect to create a want of confidence in the commission which may end its usefulness.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Fascinated by seeing "The Horn" become a vacuum cleaner when it was turned toward the city treasury, I had the greatest hopes that it might whisk away garbage in a newly settled section of the Twenty-seventh ward, as both garbage and lucre are described as filthy. There was no such luck.

Twice in the last three months a police person has driven around with a garbage wagon to explain that as there are only six such wagons for the whole ward it was impossible to call oftener. Would it not be wonderful if some form of alchemy would turn "The Horn" into a few more garbage carts?

"Mary Wollaston," Henry Kitchell Webster's new novel, was promised for this week. The next date for its appearance was Sept. 15, and now it has been postponed again to Sept. 22.

It is a real story of real people, all of them restless; of a girl, restless with a longing to make of her life something more actively real than it had been in the days before her brief positive usefulness in the war; of her stepmother, little older than herself, a vivid artist, whose restlessness for the old life of a prima donna nearly wrecks the only real happiness she has ever had; of the girl's father, restless at the shadow of the specter of old age which is lurking just ahead of him; and of a genius, the solvent for all of their restlessness, a youth whose only need of life is that he may hear his music.

It is, first of all, a ripping good story, with excellent pictures of Chicago, Ravinia, and points north. If one cares to look into it seriously he will find an exceedingly honest psychological study of our present lack of calm, and a frank though not unveiled discussion of two essentially modern problems of sex.

In his book on "The Steel Strike and Its Lessons" William Z. Foster, organizer and guiding spirit of the struggle, gives a marvelously clear close-up picture of how a great strike is generaled. In the early summer of 1918 he took over the disorganized forces in the steel industry. The book tells how he brought order out of chaos and a strike out of order. We may have forgotten it by this time, but it involved 325,000 men, extended from New York to Colorado and from Lake Erie to the gulf.. It lasted four months, not including the period of organization. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent on strike benefits. The book sounds more like the memoirs of a general on the western front than like the history of a campaign in a bloodless industrial revolution.

"The Modern Printed Bible" is inaugurated by Doubleday, Page & Co. by the publication of "Saint Matthew." It is the revised version printed like a modern book instead of in verses.

"Contact With the Other World" was the last book published by James H. Hyslop before he died. His final word on the subject of the continuity of life was: "We need an interpretation of the world which will do something to mitigate suffering if we cannot escape it, or to excuse it if we find it a means to an end. The sadness of sunset is only sublime pathos when we are assured of another dawn."

Free milk, prison reform, and the eight hour law for women came as the result of three famous poems. Elizabeth Barrett Browning's "Bitter Cry of the Children" started agitation for the first, Oscar Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Gaol" focused public opinion on the second, and Thomas Hood's "Song of the Shirt," which went like wildfire over England, printed on pocket-handkerchiefs and sung by strolling players, prepared the way for reform measures in the field of sweated industry. Another poem potentially of that provocative kind is William Ellery Leonard's "Lynching Bee," which, together with other poems of Mr. Leonard, has been published by R. W. Huebsch.

Maxim Gorki's "Reminiscences of Tolstoy" which are now appearing serially in the Freeman are the most intimate pictures of Tolstoy which have come to us. A genius interpreted by another genius is rare literature.

A gay dinner party, a sudden, soul piercing shriek, a pistol shot. That's the beginning of the pretty mystery of "The Hand in the Dark" by Arthur J. Rees. And a pretty mystery it is, too, in the sense that it's a "pretty kettle of fish." Mr. Rees, you remember, wrote "The Shrieking Pit," which is a recommendation—or a warning—for "The Hand in the Dark."

"Pic, the Weapon Maker" [Boni & Liveright], is the latest version of the story of "Ab," the prehistoric man. Perhaps it would be more descriptive to say that Pic is the scientific Tarzan.

In southern Europe, in prehistoric times, there lived a race called Mousterians. Of them Mr. George Langford has written a novel. Its scientific authenticity is vouched for by Henry Fairfield Osborn, who admits that they are a little romanticized by the author, but that overromanticization isn't a bad fault, in this case.

It was about "Ab," you remember, that the famous accusation of plagiarism was made against Jack London in his "Before Adam." The two books are strangely alike, but Mr. London was exonerated from the accusation finally. He had never read "Ab," he said, and his sincerity proved his innocence.

For those who yearn for H. C. Witwer's special brand of humor there are two volumes, "Kid Scanlan" [Small-Maynard] and "There's No Base Like Home" [Doubleday-Page]. Mr. Witwer has, like Octavus Roy Cohen, the facile trick of twisting phrases which have long reposed in Bartlett into dashing 1921 models. The title of the second book is an example, as are the chapter headings: "She Supes to Conquer," "The Merchant of Venus," "The Freedom of the Sheets," "A Word to the Wives," and in "Kid Scanlan": "Life is Reel," "Lay Off MacDuff," "East Lynch," and so on ad infinitum. He's really awfully funny sometimes, with a humor that's not above anybody's head.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

ODE ON SOLITUDE.

By Alexander Pope.

Happy the man whose wish and care
  A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air
  In his own ground.

Whose herds with milk, whose fields with bread,
  Whose flocks supply him with attire;
Whose trees in summer yield him shade,
  In winter fire.

Blest who can unconcern'dly find
  Hours, days, and years slide soft away;
In health of body, peace of mind,
  Quiet by day.

Sound sleep by night, study and ease,
  Together mixt, sweet recreation;
And innocence, with most doth please,
  With meditation.

Thus let me live, unseen, unknown;
  Thus, unlamented, let me die,
Steal from the world, and not a stone
  Tell where I lie.

36-inch silk tricolette—a "purchase"—2.45

Tricolette in twelve splendid shades—light, medium and dark—including flesh, navy, black and white; faultlessly knitted—exquisitely dyed—pronouncedly "vogue." All the tricolette is of uniformly firm, heavy quality. 2.45 is but one-third the tricolette price of a year ago. Daylight silk section, second floor.

33-inch all-silk shantung pongee, special, 85c yard

—imported direct from the orient; natural bamboo color; for men's, women's and children's garments.

36-inch wash satin at 1.95

Durable, all-silk wash satin, in ivory or flesh; its shimmering beauty accounts for its popularity; very special.

40-inch satin charmeuse, 2.95

Soft and drapey, in a rich suede finish; highly favored for fall's fashionable gowns. Choose black or navy.

Chiffon velvet, 8.50 to 16.50

36-inch velveteen at $6

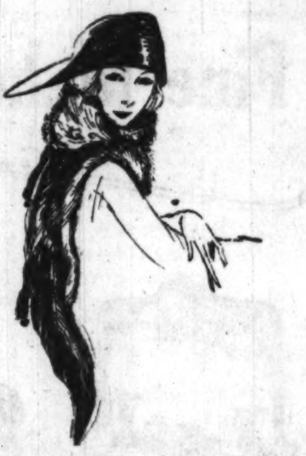
New French silks and velvets, many incrusted with gold and silver thread, interestingly introduced. 40-inch all-silk crepe de chine, in pleasing street and evening tones; very specially priced at 1.85 yard.

The new, smart fur chokers



—cleverly fashioned of favored fur, and desirable for now and for fall and winter. Each becoming choker is in one or more of the season's preferred furs, chief of which are fischer fur, stone marten, mink, sable

In sable chokers you may choose from natural or blended Hudson bay sable, natural Russian sable, or blended Nippon sable; in other furs your selection is equally wide. Fur salon, fifth floor.

Small children's coats, $25

Kiddies' hats, autumn styles, at $10

These of beaver, velour or velvet; semi-dress or tailored models, and many with streamers. The style pictured is in beaver, and typical of hundreds of kiddies' hats equally pretty and becoming. Third floor

54-inch tricotine, 7.35

All-silk duvetyn, $10

Elegant French silk-and-wool duvetyn, 14.50

The season's favored weave for coats and suits; possesses a high silky luster; obtainable in a wide range of modish colors.

Pure silk tuxedo sweaters

Brown, black, navy and other shades

Blouses of fine-mesh net, 8.75

"Sweater blouses" par excellence, and splendidly adapted for suit wear as well. These exquisite blouses are quite as smart without the coat. The vestee and frill, tucked body and snug elbow sleeves, add charm.

"Mandarin" blanket robes

Dark and light combinations

12.75

Corduroy robes at 12.75

1,800 prs. women's silk hose —imperceptible imperfections, not affecting the wear, account for this sale of pure dye silk hosiery, of a nationally known make,

extra special at 1.65

The range of sizes is complete, but we recommend early shopping to insure first choice of unbroken lots. First floor.

3,000 silk-lisle union suits

—the entire surplus of a prominent manufacturer, purchased at a remarkable price concession. Sale figure is less than half price: 1.85

A few garments have slight imperfections, or oil spots, not affecting the wear. Regular sizes only in the lot. Third floor.

5,000 women's emb. h'dk'fs

notably special at 18c

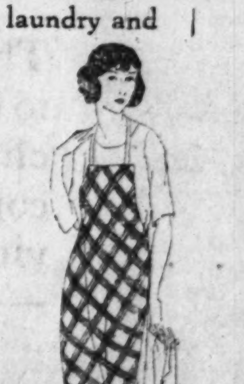
Men's Irish linen h'dk'fs, 50c

These with three styles of initial or plain; all with ¼-in. hem. Prudent shoppers will buy for future use, or for gifts.

Waterproof kitchen aprons



Kleinert's famous aprons for kitchen, laundry and household work; also popular with the high school girl for use in laboratory and domestic science classes.

Regularly $1, now 58c each

Phone orders filled. Notion section, first floor.

These aprons are absolutely waterproof; good quality, fancy gingham, and rubberized. The low sale price will scarcely be duplicated.

Real Irish laces & insertions

A special importation; priced at 95c, 1.95, 2.25, 2.45 and 2.95 yd., according to width.

Hand made filet lace, 65c

1,000 yards real hand made, hand tied, filet lace, 1 in. wide; for trimming waists and lingerie; 65c yard.

Black chantilly flouncing, 2.95

New dress ginghams at $1

Japanese crepe at 75c

Handkerchief linen, colored, $3

34,000,000 PUT IN MELTING POT DURING CENTURY

U. S. Reports on Alloys Fused Into Yanks.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 4.—Thirty-four millions immigrants have entered the United States in the last century. In the same time the population of the country has increased 97,000,000.

Of the 34,000,000 immigrants in the last 100 years nearly one-fourth of them, or 8,205,675, came from England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales. Germany furnished the second largest number, 5,495,539, and Italy the third largest, 4,100,740. Austria-Hungary was next with 4,068,448, while Russia was fifth with 3,311,406. The Scandinavian countries, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, have sent 2,134,414 of their citizens to the United States.

The total of immigration from France in the 100 years has been 523,806, the largest number from that country, 20,126, coming here in 1851. Switzerland has sent 256,707 persons to the United States and the Netherlands 214,506. British North America, including Canada, 843,450; Mexico, 217,256.

The tide from the British isles began to decrease in 1851; that from Germany in 1887. The tide from Italy, Austria-Hungary, and Russia advanced rapidly. The Italian record was 285,731 in 1907; the Austro-Hungarian peak was 338,452, in 1907; and that of Russians 291,040, in 1913. The peak of the Scandinavian influx was 105,326, in 1882.

In only six years, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1910, 1912 and 1913, of the 100 did the total of immigrants entering the country exceed 1,000,000.

'CAP'N' STREETER OPENS NEW FIGHT FOR 'DEESTRICT'

Capt. George Wellington Streeter has decided to give the government another chance to see that he receives justice. Yesterday the fighting claimant to the "Deestrict of Lake Michigan," filed suit in the District court against present owners of the property for $5,000,000. He asked that they be ejected immediately.

"CAP'N" STREETER.

Among those named in the suit are the Chicago Title and Trust company, the estate of Potter Palmer, the city of Chicago, and both Chicago and Northwestern universities.

Wind once tossed the ship of which Capt. Streeter was in command against the property he now claims. Then it was only a sand bank, but the captain made it his home. He claimed it by squatter's rights. Later, according to his claim, he was dispossessed unjustly. Since then he has waged almost constant legal and physical warfare to regain his district. In a letter sent to United States Marshal Bradley he threatens to take forcible possession of the property on Labor day.

BOY, HUNTING A PENNY, HIT BY TRUCK; KILLED

Fifteen year old Peter Dadzinski, 1627 Crossing street, had bought an ice cream cone at 1410 Elston avenue. A penny dropped from his hand and rolled into the street. He ran after it. He was struck by the motor truck piloted by Isadore Pass, 2140 Le Moyne street. He died before a physician arrived. Pass was held by the police.

Physicians at the Montrose hospital are trying to save the right leg of Lawrence Oberbeck, 12 years old, 2537 Cullom avenue. His leg was crushed under O. F. Johnson's automobile last night. Johnson is being held by the North Robey street police.

LAURENCE ABERBECK.

The boy was on the sidewalk at Cullom and Campbell avenues when the automobile, driven by William Weyerstrahs, who lives at the same address as Johnson, 4151 Maplewood avenue, tried to turn the corner.

The machine jumped the curb, knocked the boy down, ran over him, and smashed into the grocery of W. S. Arnold. Johnson drove the boy to the hospital, but, the police say, made no report.

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury in the death of 9 year old John Wintry, 2967 Lyman street. He died of injuries caused by an automobile driven by Morris Dennen, 817 South Ashland avenue.

J. B. Mitchell, 609 Dempster street, Evanston, drove his automobile into that of Charles De Lee, 5028 Ellis avenue. He told Judge Sheridan E. Fry he had had a nip. The judge fined him $200 and costs.

Wife of Penna. R. R. Director Killed by Auto

Westerly, R. I., Sept. 4.—Mrs. Flora Sheldon Bush, wife of Samuel Prescott Bush, of Columbus, O., was killed by an automobile at Watch Hill tonight. Mr. Bush is president of the Buckeye Steel Casting company, and a director of the Pennsylvania railroad.

360,000 PUPILS EXPECTED IN CITY SCHOOLS SEPT. 7

18,000 Increase Makes Space Big Problem.

Eighteen thousand new pupils will be registered in the public schools of Chicago when they open Tuesday morning, according to Superintendent of Schools Peter A. Mortenson. The total attendance is expected to be in the neighborhood of 360,000. Of these, 40,000 will be high school students.

The increase over last year's attendance brings two problems of much importance before the board, which will meet Wednesday to consider them. The first is lack of space and facilities to accommodate the students, and the second is a shortage of text books. Mr. Mortenson and his subordinates have been working on a building program throughout the summer, and the superintendent will present their plan to the board Wednesday.

Useless Sites to Be Sold.

"The plan has been most carefully worked out," Mr. Mortenson said yesterday. "It will recommend the sale of numerous pieces of property which, through influence, former school boards purchased.

"Some of these sites are wholly useless for school purposes, many of them abutting on railroads and many in districts and localities far from proper for schools. The plan will also include a comprehensive scheme for the enlargement and remodeling of present buildings."

Reason for Book Shortage.

The school book shortage has been brought about because of the enforcement of old price contracts and failure of publishers to print surplus copies. The handicap will be speedily removed, Mr. Mortenson promised.

Twenty-five new teachers of physical education have been added to the roster of instructors, providing one teacher for every elementary school having an attendance of 1,500 or more.

TOBIN TELLS OF SPECIALTIES IN COUNTY SCHOOLS

County Superintendent Tobin announces that organized play, health, vitalized education, community centers, horticulture, and community music and speaking are the subjects of educational specialties that will be developed in the 1920-'21 program for the county schools. Tuesday will see the opening of 300 county schools, with an enrollment, according to Supt. Tobin, of 60,000, an average of 200 to the school.

MOONEY STARTS NEW CRIME WAR; 50 MEN JAILED

Catch by Four Squads Fills Two Stations.

Chief of Detectives James L. Mooney last night started his drive to rid the city of crooks. Four squads formed at the detective bureau, with Chief Mooney, Lieut. Michael Hughes, Lieut. Edward Grady, and Sergt. Michael Grady in command, started on their roundup at 8 o'clock. By 10 o'clock the cells of the bureau were filled with fifty prisoners, mostly suspects taken in connection with recent crimes. The squads are still sending in prisoners, and the cells of the South Clark street station are being used to hold the overflow.

According to Chief Mooney, last night was the most favorable time to start the drive, because the suspects could be kept in jail until Tuesday without being able to get out on writs of habeas corpus. Monday is Labor day, and there will be no courts in session until Tuesday. The chief said by Tuesday the police could collect their evidence against those implicated in recent pay roll robberies and burglaries.

Two "midget" bandits climaxed a day of robberies yesterday by locking Steven Cucar, a bartender, in the icebox of a saloon at 4607 West Chicago avenue and robbing the place of $1,580.

The money had been taken from the bank to cash the checks of workmen in the vicinity. Cucar said one of the robbers was about 4 feet 8 inches tall and the other 5 feet 4 inches.

A man answering the description of the taller bandit walked into the dry goods store of Fred S. Shapiro, 205 North Kedzie avenue, at noon, held up the proprietor and a customer, and escaped with $400.

The homes of D. Redder, 7626 North Ashland avenue; J. E. Berkson, 5414 Michigan avenue; L. R. Flock, 1307 East Sixtieth street; William Schreiber, 4718 Ingleside avenue, and George Pilzer, 944 Argyle street, were looted. Redder's loss is $3,500; Berkson's, $3,500; Flock's, $1,500; Schreiber's, $3,500, and Pilzer's, $1,500.

CHICAGO TO HAVE "RED FIRE" WEEK IN POLITICAL WAR

All Camps Are Ready for "Whirlwind Finish."

With bands blaring in the loop, noonday meetings in the downtown theaters by the score arranged for, and great massmeetings and "demonstrations" prepared by the political stage managers, the primary campaign swings into its "whirlwind finish" stage tomorrow.

The first big event of the week is the harmony picnic and massmeeting at Riverview park tomorrow afternoon and evening. This will mark the first appearance in the city as a candidate for governor of Lieut. Gov. John G. Oglesby, the national Republican choice. He and the other candidates of the anti-Thompson Republicans for state and county offices will be in the receiving line at the picnic which is being arranged for by the Republican organization of the Twenty-third ward, of which Attorney General Edward J. Brundage is the head.

Following the picnic the lieutenant governor and the other candidates on the national Republican state ticket will devote their entire attention to Chicago, speaking at noonday meetings starting Tuesday, and at more than 100 night meetings in the various wards.

Gov. Lowden also will speak in the city for the Oglesby ticket. He will make his first address Tuesday noon at a meeting in the Colonial theater.

City Hall Clan Will Be Busy.

The Thompson candidates for the state offices will also be busy in Chicago during the week. They also have arranged noonday meetings at which they will appear. Congressman Frank L. Smith, the Thompson candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, began his Chicago campaign last night, speaking at the North Side Turner hall, 820 North Clark street, and other north side places.

Mayor E. N. Woodruff of Peoria, who is a candidate for governor, not allied with any of the factions, will also campaign in Chicago during the week. He is billed to make his first Chicago speech at noon Tuesday at a meeting in Powers' theater.

Other candidates, supported by no organization, also intend to try for some of the limelight. Col. B. M. Chiperfield, Republican candidate for United States senator; Barratt O'Hara, Democratic candidate for governor, and Capt. Oscar Carlstrom, Republican candidate for governor, all of whom served during the great war, have banded their forces together and announce a meeting at the Woods theater tomorrow noon.

Hoyne and Igoe War Gets Hot.

On the Democratic side the activity during the week promises to be confined to the fight for the nomination for state's attorney, for which Michael L. Igoe is battling State's Attorney Hoyne. Both camps were busy yesterday. From the Igoe camp came a statement from the candidate claiming victory. Statements also were issued by Anna L. Smith, woman's national committeeman from Illinois, and Francis J. Sullivan, brother of the late Roger C. Sullivan, declaring for Igoe and denouncing Hoyne for his opposition to Robert M. Sweitzer at two mayoralty elections.

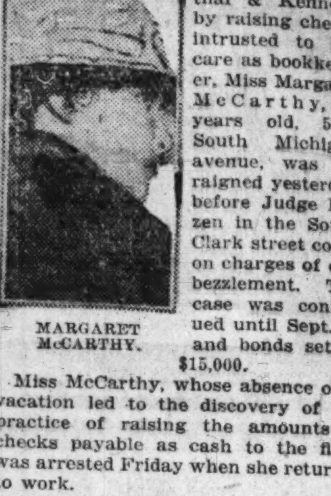
The Hoyne camp countered with an announcement that the opposing Democratic factions in the Thirty-second ward had united for Hoyne and that both would support him at the primaries. The announcement featured a statement from Frank J. Walsh, naval officer of the port of Chicago and former clerk of the Criminal court, declaring for Hoyne.

Women to Hear About the League.

Richard Goldsmith, who was one of the assistants of President Wilson in the negotiations which brought about the league of nations, will speak of the league at a meeting of the Chicago Democratic women's committee to be held at 3 p. m. today in the headquarters in room 407 Fine Arts building. After the meeting the women will hold a reception for Gov. Cox.

Eight hundred volunteer workers will start their drive for the collection of Chicago's share of the Republican national campaign fund this week. A dinner for the workers will be given Wednesday evening at the Hotel Morrison.

GIRL REFUSES TO TELL HOW STOLEN $7,000 WAS USED



MARGARET McCARTHY.

Still refusing to tell what she did with $7,000 which she admits stealing from the law firm of Moses, Rosenthal & Kennedy by raising checks intrusted to her care as bookkeeper, Miss Margaret McCarthy, 32 years old, 5838 South Michigan avenue, was arraigned yesterday before Judge Hazen in the South Clark street court on charges of embezzlement. The case was continued until Sept. 17 and bonds set at $15,000.

Miss McCarthy, whose absence on a vacation led to the discovery of her practice of raising the amounts of checks payable as cash to the firm, was arrested Friday when she returned to work.

At her home two friends, old women, told the police Miss McCarthy's mother is dead and that she lived with them, quietly and without callers. They asserted they had seen no evidence of the money she admits stealing.

EX-SERVICE MEN URGE OGLESBY IN WARTIME TERMS

"Our Verdun is Springfield; our slogan, 'They shall not pass.' Our zero hour of attack is the opening of the polls Wednesday, Sept. 15, and our objective is the nomination of John G. Oglesby for governor of Illinois."

This is an extract from the appeal for members of the Former Service Men's John G. Oglesby for Governor club which is being sent out from its headquarters in the Monadnock block. Le Roy W. Crawford is president, P. B. Davis secretary, and Col. John V. Clinnin, Col. R. R. McCormick, and H. L. Hart of Chicago, George A. Paddock of Evanston, and D. E. Williams of Moline are among its members. The club is circulating Lieut. Gov. Oglesby's pledge to the service men, which follows:

"Illinois furnished over 350,000 soldiers, sailors, and marines in the world war. The debt we owe them will not, can never be paid. I believe in their fair mindedness. I believe in it so completely that, if elected governor, I hope to be able to follow the decision arrived at in the proposed referendum vote of the legionnaire in my recommendation to the legislature."

Lawyers Ask Court to Bar Bonding Company

A petition asking that the Chicago Bonding and Insurance company be prohibited from acting as surety in Probate court cases was filed in Probate court yesterday by Attorneys Samuel J. Andalman and Louis I. Cohen. They allege that certain bonds scheduled by the company are worthless and beneficiaries of the estates involved are without protection.

FEW CANDIDATES DOWNSTATE OUT FOR THOMPSON

Legislative Aspirants Are Against Tammany.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—The Thompson-Lundin slate is running in the Republican state primaries without the open support of a member of the Illinois Republican delegation in congress from the downstate districts and without the aid of more than ten of 140 candidates for the Illinois legislature in the thirty-two senatorial districts outside of Cook county.

The possible exceptions to this statement are Uncle Joe Cannon in the Kankakee district, which is also the home district of Len Small, the city hall candidate for governor, and Congressman Rodenberg in the East St. Louis district.

"Uncle Joe" is on record at the recent Kankakee fair as having said that he is for Mr. Small on personal grounds and because of old time political alliances, but against the Thompson platform. With a real fight on his hands for renomination, the former speaker is now reported to be intensely neutral on everything in state politics except as to the Small-Oglesby matter.

Rodenberg for Smith.

Congressman Rodenberg is for Frank Smith for United States senator and openly so. It is the political belief expressed here that Col. Smith would not have entered the senatorial fight rather than the Republican contest for the governorship had it not been for the advice given to him by Congressman Rodenberg.

Edward E. Miller of East St. Louis, former secretary to Congressman Rodenberg, is the Thompson-Lundin candidate for state treasurer against George Keys of Springfield. The belief is politically prevalent that Mr. Keys wins in a walk at the coming primaries and that Mr. Miller will be in position to win out in the primaries of 1922 for the same office.

The Rodenberg district, therefore, is counted as for Smith and Miller, and further than that figures are not available. Mr. Rodenberg has a primary fight for renomination brought on by John J. Brenholt of Alton, son of the former state senator and president pro tem. of the senate, and himself a member of the present constitutional convention.

Copley Has Troubles of His Own.

Congressman Copley in the Joliet-Aurora district has enough troubles of his own to keep him strictly neutral. He is opposed by Frank A. McCarthy of Elgin, a member of the last house of representatives. The Kane county organization, due to a set of circumstances that developed in the April state convention, is more deeply involved in the effort to nominate Justus J. Johnson for clerk of the Supreme court in the Ottawa district than it is in anything else in the primaries.

Arthur E. Snow of Ottawa, now the acting clerk of the court, was defeated by one vote for the nomination in the state convention and after the supreme court decision overturning the old primary act, became a primary candidate against Johnson. Mr. Copley is now understood to be taking no sides in the state fight against what might have been expected earlier in the proceedings.

AMERICAN LEGION NOTES

Cavill post of Dalton City, Ill., will hold a picnic at Woodbine park on Sept. 9. A sham battle will be a feature.

Attorney Frank Comerford, special prosecutor for the state, who obtained convictions of William Bross Lloyd and other Communist party leaders recently, will summarize his final address to the jury for members of Bell post next Thursday night at 311 West Washington street.

Eaton Priddy post will meet next Tuesday evening at the Del Prado hotel, Fifty-ninth street and Blackstone avenue. Delegates to the state convention, Messrs. Lutz and Sullivan, will present their report.

A reunion of the 310th field signal battalion will be held on Monday at the Post tavern in Battle Creek, Mich. B. Thad Lindley, 520 Westminster building, has charge of arrangements for Chicago members of the battalion. A charge of $6 covers the all day program.

Leaves Wife's Rings in Pocket; Presser in Jail

The other night Mrs. S. J. Nicholas, 1613 North Richmond street, handed her husband her diamond engagement ring and the plain gold band on the same finger. He put them in his trousers pocket. Next day he took the trousers to the cleaners, and forgot about the rings. When he returned to the presser's he found the colored presser had vanished. The "pay roll" squad, under Sergt. Michael Grady, went to the presser's home. They found the diamond ring in the presser's shoe, the wedding ring in his hat band. That's how come Allen Storrs is under arrest.

TRAIN KILLS MAN, GIRL IN AUTO.

La Porte, Ind., Sept. 4.—Leon Cawby, North Judson, Ind., and Miss Ida Traester were killed today when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Grand Trunk train at Haskill station.

WAG DOFFS WIG; LOVE'S LABOR IS LOST, LADS CRY

Chester, Pa., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—A hotel man, a policeman, a justice of the peace, and twenty or more of Chester and Eddystone youths are trying to explain today how they happened to be taken in by a pretty "dancing girl" here with a carnival company last week.

In fetching gowns the dancer was seen with the boys night after night. They bought candy and sodas until some of them "went broke" in their efforts to outdo their rivals.

The climax came at an early hour this morning, when the proprietor of the hotel at which the dancer was stopping told officers he wanted "that woman" taken out of his place.

"Come with us," cried the cops.

Nevertheless the dancer was taken to the office of Justice of the Peace Maitland for an early morning hearing. The "judge" imposed a fine.

"But why?" insisted the prisoner, "what have I done?"

"You are a bold, bad woman and you have brought disgrace upon a respectable hotel," was the reply.

"Who said I was a bad woman, a good woman, or any other sort of a woman," said the prisoner, yanking off "his" wig.

Maitland discharged his prisoner.

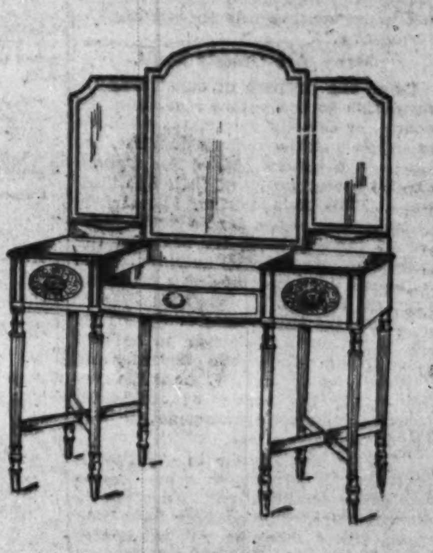
YOU like to buy furniture; maybe you don't like to pay the price of it; but that's another story. There are probably half a dozen—or more—places in your home where a new piece, a chair, a table, a davenport or a dressing table, would fit beautifully. Or you may have the problem of installing a complete new outfit.



If you had all the money you want it's likely that one of the first ways you'd spend it would be for some nice furniture. The pleasure of buying such goods lies in the beauty of the wares; and in the utility and comfort which are represented by furniture.

Usefulness and the decorative value are a combination that isn't so very common in the things you buy. When you add permanence, use but not consumption, you get the real reason for the pleasure in buying furniture.

And the prices? Well, good furniture isn't exactly low priced nowadays; we price it as low as we can; it has to be priced on the basis of what it costs, and it costs more than it used to. We might try to explain why it costs more; there are many reasons; the fact remains.

But if you divide the cost of real quality—Scholle quality—in furniture by the number of months, years, even decades, that it serves you, with beauty and comfort, you'll find that it isn't very expensive.

We have here a lot of the kind of furniture you'll enjoy buying and having; it is priced for your benefit as much as for ours. We'll be glad to sell it to you if you care to have it. Our satisfaction insurance goes with it.

L. V. L. REPORT WARNS AGAINST BAD CANDIDATES

Women Are Urged to Aid in Picking Good Men.

Fear that there may be a falling off in the personnel of the general assembly if voters do not exercise care at the primary, is expressed in the report on primary candidates made by the Legislative Voters' league yesterday. The hope that the newly enfranchised women will aid in preventing the selection of unfit candidates is emphasized. The report follows:

"Candidates for the general assembly will be nominated at the primary election to be held on Sept. 15. As 153 house members are to be elected in November, and as the Republican and Democratic senatorial committees in the various districts throughout the state have made provision for the nomination of only 170 candidates for the house, the membership of the fifty-second general assembly virtually will be determined at the September primary.

Urge Care in Selections.

"This fact makes it exceedingly important that the voters should give immediate attention to the selection of fit legislative candidates. Unless they take advantage of the opportunity offered them by the direct primary, to nominate fit candidates there will necessarily be a falling-off in the personnel of the general assembly, which of recent years has shown gradual but marked improvement.

"It is earnestly to be hoped that the newly enfranchised women voters, who for the first time have a voice in the selection of legislative candidates, will aid in preventing this threatening deterioration.

Many Are Grossly Unfit.

"For the purpose of furnishing information to the voters regarding the fitness of the 472 candidates who are in the field in the various districts, the Legislative Voters' league has made a careful investigation of their qualifications. This investigation has shown, as in former years, that a great number of the aspirants for seats in the legislature are not well qualified, while many are grossly unfit and a few have criminal records.

"From the entire number the league has listed such as appear to be best fitted to serve the public efficiently and faithfully at Springfield. This list contains only the names of candidates whom the league recommends or who seem most acceptable.

"We do not assume to say that it includes all candidates who possess legislative qualifications. In some instances no recommendations have been made, either because fit candidates were lacking, or because satisfactory information on which to base a recommendation has not been obtainable.

Here Are the Recommendations.

First District.

[Parts of Wards 1 and 2.]

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

William H. Brinkman, 3119 Indiana avenue.

Benjamin M. Lucas, 2336 South Dearborn street.

Mr. Brinkman is in the real estate business. He is ending third term as a member of the house with a fair record. Mr. Lucas is an insurance agent. He formerly served one term in the house with a creditable record.

HOUSE—Democratic. One to be nominated. No recommendation.

Second District.

[Parts of Wards 10, 11, 12, 13, 18, and 19.]

SENATE—Republican.

SENATE—Democratic.

Francis A. Hurley, 2253 Warren avenue.

Mr. Hurley is a lawyer who served two terms in the senate with a good record.

Charles H. Mussman, 2041 West Thirteenth street.

Francis M. Tuite, 327 South Ashland avenue.

Mr. Mussman is a superintendent in a manufacturing concern. He is capable and industrious. Mr. Tuite, an auto mechanic in the city garage, is intelligent and active.

HOUSE—Democratic. Two to be nominated.

Samuel E. Weinshenker, 1107 South Ashland boulevard.

Charles A. Secor, 1905 Warren avenue.

Mr. Weinshenker, a lawyer, is ending first term with a fairly creditable record. Mr. Secor sells second hand automobiles. He served in the U. S. navy during the war and seems better qualified than other new candidates from that district.

Third District.

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

Adelbert H. Roberts, 3405 Calumet avenue.

Morris Lewis, 3633 Forest avenue.

Mr. Roberts, a lawyer, is ending first term with a highly creditable record. Mr. Lewis, a private secretary, has a good reputation.

Fourth District.

[Ward 30 and parts of Ward 3, 5, 29 and 31.]

SENATE—Democratic.

Al F. Gorman, 5436 South Morgan street.

Mr. Gorman is ending his third term with a record which has reflected credit upon the district. He amply deserves renomination.

HOUSE—Republican. One to be nominated. No recommendation.

HOUSE—Democratic. Two to be nominated.

James P. Boyle, 5448 South Union avenue.

Thomas J. O'Grady, 835 West Fifty-fourth place.

Mr. Boyle, county supervisor of roads, is ending first term, during which he made a creditable voting record. Mr. O'Grady is in the printing business. He has actively opposed some of the worst elements in his district.

Fifth District.

SENATE—Republican.

James E. MacMurray, 4932 Lake Park avenue.

Mr. MacMurray, head of a company which manufactures steel goods, is a man of character and ability.

SENATE—Democratic. No recommendation.

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

Sidney Lyon, 5250 South Michigan avenue.

Joseph E. Bangs, 6018 Kimbark avenue.

Mr. Lyon, a lawyer, is ending his second term with a good record and deserves renomination. Mr. Bangs, a teacher, formerly was assistant state superintendent of public instruction. He is well qualified for legislative service.

HOUSE—Democratic. One to be nominated.

John F. Healy, 6120 Rhodes avenue.

Mr. Healy is in the real estate business and apparently has fair qualifications.

Sixth District.

SENATE—Republican.

James J. Barbour, 1408 Juneway terrace.

Mr. Barbour, a lawyer, is ending first term with an excellent record.

SENATE—Democratic. No recommendation.

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

Ralph E. Church, 617 Haven street, Evanston.

Emil A. W. Johnson, 2131 Potwyne place.

Mr. Church, lawyer, is ending second term with a thoroughly good record and should be renominated. Mr. Johnson, head of a department in the superior court clerk's office, is ending first term with a creditable record.

HOUSE—Democratic. One to be nominated.

James H. Frawley 1438 Addison street.

Mr. Frawley is employed in the county treasurer's office. His candidacy offers Democratic voters of his district an opportunity to get better representation at Springfield.

Seventh District.

[The towns of Thornton, Bloom, Rich, Bremen, Orland, Lemont, Palos, Worth, Lyons, Stickney, Proviso, Leyden, Elk Grove, Schaumberg, Hanover, Barrington, Palatine, Wheeling, and Northfield, and parts of the towns of New Trier, Niles, Norwood Park, and Maine, all in the county of Cook.]

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

Howard P. Castle, Barrington.

Mr. Castle, a lawyer, is a man of character and ability and is ending first term with an exceptionally fine record. The situation in district makes it advisable for public-spirited members of his party to cast three votes for him.

HOUSE—Democratic. One to be nominated.

John W. McCarthy, Lemont.

Mr. McCarthy, a lawyer, has made a good record during his two terms.

Ninth District.

[Parts of Wards 4, 5, 11, and 12.]

HOUSE—Republican. One to be nominated.

David E. Shanahan, 2722 Throop street.

Mr. Shanahan is ending his thirteenth term as a member of the house and his third consecutive term as speaker of that body. He had a large part in obtaining the important constructive legislation enacted by the Fifty-first general assembly and unquestionably should be returned.

HOUSE—Democratic. Two to be nominated.

Thomas A. Doyle, 3549 Lowe avenue.

Joseph Placek, 2347 S. Kedzie avenue.

Mr. Doyle, an insurance agent, is ending first term with a creditable record. Mr. Placek owns a saloon and restaurant. He has made a fair voting record during his three terms.

Eleventh District.

[Parts of Wards 9, 29, 31, and 32.]

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

William H. Cruden, 10204 Walnut street.

Edward B. Lucius, 7520 Stewart avenue.

Mr. Cruden is in the insurance business. He is completing first term with an excellent record. Mr. Lucius, a lawyer, also has made an excellent record during first term.

HOUSE—Democratic. One to be nominated.

Peter J. Gibbons, 6312 S. Marshfield avenue.

Mr. Gibbons, an automobile salesman, is decidedly to be preferred to his principal opponent.

Thirteenth District.

[Ward 8, parts of Wards 7 and 9, and that part of town of Calumet outside Chicago.]

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

C. A. Young, 7531 Coles avenue.

Mr. Dahlberg, a lawyer, is finishing third term with an excellent record. Mr. Smith, a lawyer, seems to possess unusual qualifications for legislative usefulness. Dr. Young is a dentist. His record during his third term was creditable.

HOUSE—Democratic. One to be nominated. No recommendation.

Fifteenth District.

[Parts of Wards 10, 11, and 20.]

HOUSE—Republican. One to be nominated. No recommendation.

HOUSE—Democratic. Two to be nominated. No recommendation.

Seventeenth District.

[Parts of Wards 10, 19, and 20.]

HOUSE—Republican. One to be nominated.

Edward J. Smejkal, 560 Bunker street.

Mr. Smejkal, a lawyer, is ending his ninth term. During the last three sessions he has served creditably as chairman of the appropriations committee, the most important committee post in the house.

HOUSE—Democratic. Two to be nominated.

Charles Coia, 817 Forquer street.

Mr. Coia, a city paving inspector, is ending first term with a fair record.

Nineteenth District.

[Ward 34, parts of Wards 12, 13, 14, and 35 and the village of Berwyn and town of Riverside.]

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

Solomon P. Roderick, 3310 Douglas boulevard.

Thomas D. Fitzgerald, 2953 Warren avenue.

Mr. Roderick, a lawyer, is ending third term with a decidedly creditable record. Mr. Fitzgerald, chief clerk in the traffic department of a large manufacturing concern, has decided force of character and seems well qualified to be a legislator.

HOUSE—Democratic. Two to be nominated.

James T. Prendergast, 4426 Washington boulevard.

John F. Berry, 3855 West Polk street.

Mr. Prendergast, a soap manufacturer, has shown himself to be a useful and dependable member during three terms and should be renominated. Mr. Berry, custodian of the records and files of the County court, is intelligent, industrious, and seems otherwise well qualified.

Twenty-first District.

[Parts of Wards 14, 17, 33, and 35.]

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

Frederick J. Bippus, 4908 West Huron street.

John J. Maloney, 3317 Walnut street.

Mr. Bippus, a real estate man, is ending third term with a creditable record. Mr. Maloney, secretary and treasurer of an automobile inspection bureau, served with the 132d infantry in France and apparently is well qualified.

HOUSE—Democratic. Two to be nominated.

William E. Golden, 5331 West Adams street.

Mr. Golden, a deputy clerk in the County court, is well recommended and seems capable of serving the public acceptably.

Twenty-third District.

[Parts of wards 15, 16, 33, and 35, and the village of Oak Park.]

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

William G. Thon, 2210 Cortez street.

Mr. Thon, a lawyer, is ending third term with an excellent record. He has served the public so well that voters are urged to "plump" three votes for him to insure renomination.

HOUSE—Democratic. One to be nominated.

Thomas P. Keane, 2705 Iowa street.

Mr. Keane, a deputy in the county clerk's office, is finishing first term with a good record.

Twenty-fifth District.

[Wards 27 and 28 and parts of wards 26, 33, and 35.]

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

Frank P. Caviezel, 2518 North Kedzie avenue.

James H. McFarland, 4763 Manor avenue.

Theodore R. Steinert, 2112 Powell avenue.

Mr. Caviezel is connected with a trade publicity bureau. He served in the Fiftieth general assembly, and showed legislative ability. Mr. McFarland, a lawyer, seems to be well fitted for legislative work. Mr. Steinert is chief clerk in the office of the county recorder.

HOUSE—Democratic. One to be nominated. No recommendation.

Twenty-seventh District.

[Parts of Wards 16, 17, and 18.]

HOUSE—Republican. One to be nominated.

Thaddeus Kotlowski, 662 Fay street.

Edward Walz, 541 West Lake street.

Mr. Kotlowski, an expert machinist, is intelligent and forceful. Mr. Walz, a saloonkeeper, is ending second term with a fair voting record.

HOUSE—Democratic. Three to be nominated.

James M. Donlan, 1065 West Madison street.

Joseph Petlak, 1600 West North avenue.

Mr. Donlan, a retired manufacturer, is ending third term with a fairly good record. Mr. Petlak, a saloonkeeper, is ending second term with a fair voting record.

Twenty-ninth District.

[Parts of wards 21 and 22.]

HOUSE—Republican. One to be nominated.

John R. Peterson, 1111 Larrabee street.

Mr. Peterson, a former alderman, now deputy clerk of the Juvenile court, is preferable to his principal competitor.

HOUSE—Democratic. Two to be nominated.

James H. Daly, 1149 North Franklin street.

Mr. Daly, night delivery manager for the Western Union Telegraph company, is well recommended.

Thirty-first District.

HOUSE—Republican. Two to be nominated.

Carl Mueller, 2142 Lincoln Park, west.

James A. Steven, 2448 North Clark street.

Mr. Mueller is in the real estate business. He has made a creditable record during his fourth term in the house and formerly served two terms in the senate. Mr. Steven, a lawyer, is finishing first term with a good record.

"I WANNA SEE THE CIRCUS, DADDY" LEADS TWO TO GLAD REUNION

"I wanna go to th' circus, daddy," pleaded Willie Burkett, 3½ years old, in Judge Cooper's branch of the Superior court yesterday. Preparations were being made for a hearing of habeas corpus proceedings brought by the child's mother, Mrs. Ethel Mae Burkett, to regain his custody. The proceedings were being fought by the husband and father, Spann S. Burkett, a telegrapher, 821 Cornelia avenue.

WILLIAM BURKETT.

The judge and attorneys were striving to effect a reconciliation.

"We're goin' to see clowns and everything," chattered Willie.

"Come on, I'll take you both to the circus," said the father finally, addressing his wife.

Only Willie witnessed the scene that followed. Attorneys were instructed to have the proceedings dismissed and the reunited three went to the circus.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

The laying of the corner stone of the new St. Peter's Lutheran church at Seventy-fourth and Michigan avenue was announced on Sept. 3 as having taken place that day. The ceremony will take place today at 3 o'clock.

L. F. Sbertoli was reported as indorsing Judge Crowe for the state's attorneyship. He denies having done so.

In Friday's Inquiring Photographer, THE TRIBUNE printed the following answer of John Cameroun, 1278 Victor avenue, referring to the release of MacSwiney, lord mayor of Cork:

"He should not be released. If he were released all other political prisoners would have to be given their liberty. He has committed a crime against the British government and should be punished for it."

Mr. Cameroun explains that this was his answer: "The man should not be released just because he starves himself. It is not up to me to judge whether he is guilty or not guilty."

FELIX DIAZ GETS NEW REVOLUTION GOING IN MEXICO

Big Strike Ends; U. S. Citizen Still Held.

Mexico City, Sept. 4.—Revolutionary activity by followers of Felix Diaz, nephew of former President Porfirio Diaz, has been begun in the vicinity of Misantla, Vera Cruz, according to Jalapa dispatches.

Diaz, who led the revolt which deposed Madero and also rebelled against Carranza, has not been seen since that régime was overthrown in May, and it has been understood he had reached an agreement with the president de facto authorities.

Reports state that Diaz refuses to recognize the "Agua Prieta plan," repudiates the present government, and declares he will fight to resore the constitution of 1857.

Travelers from Teziutlan, Puebla, and Jalacingo, Vera Cruz, tell of renewed rebel operations, but are uncertain whether these operations are conducted by Diaz or Gen. Candido Aguilar, former governor of Vera Cruz and son-in-law of Carranza.

Leaders of striking mill workers and tobacco factory employés decided yesterday to call off the strike which affected 30,000 or more workers in Mexico City and the federal district, and ordered the strikers to work, following a promise from provisional President de la Huerta to assure a just settlement.

A detailed statement of the government's efforts to release W. A. Gardiner, American, and Bertie C. Johnson, a British subject, kidnaped two weeks ago by Pedro Zamora, Jalisco bandit, has been forwarded to the United States embassy by Gen. P. Elias Calles, secretary of war.

How Miss Morgan secured a position paying $25 a week—

Miss Morgan had a fairly good position but she was not satisfied. She wanted to move up! She knew what she could do if the opportunity ever came to her. But somehow, there seemed nothing ahead to strive for in the work she was then doing!

Part of the time she served as telephone operator and part of the time in the general office doing clerical work. None of the important men in the business ever saw her—few if any, knew her by name. She felt, to use a homely expression, "lost in the shuffle."

One Sunday morning she happened to read an advertisement on The Illinois School of Filing. It appealed to her as worth investigation so she sent for the free book—"Filing as a profession for women." It gave her an insight into filing which she had never had before. It answered all her questions—it helped her reach her decision.

She could not afford to give up her old position so she studied at night.

As soon as she had completed the course she obtained a position at $25 a week. Today she is the most delighted girl you ever saw.

She now feels that she is doing something worth while—that, in filing, she has a profession—that she is no longer "lost in the shuffle," but that she really amounts to something.

I asked Miss Morgan the other day what she thought of The Illinois School of Filing.

"I think," she replied, "it is a wonderful school. It did so much for me that my two sisters are also taking the course. I wouldn't be surprised if they get even better positions than I have."

10,000,000 Miles a Day by
MAXWELL
Shows the Importance of Its Special Steels

There are now over 400,000 Maxwells in service the world over, and if each Maxwell traveled only 25 miles a day its daily use would run into 10,000,000 miles.

Consider the importance the special steels in a Maxwell must play in such mileage.

They lighten the burden on engine and tires and reduce the use of "gas" and oil and minimize repairs.

Because they have great strength and make possible light weight construction. Thus useless weight is eliminated and, made to Maxwell's own formulae, no other steels are just like them.

The public at large is always a safe and sure barometer, and the fact that six years ago the public bought at the rate of 5,000 a year and today buys at the rate of 100,000 a year tells its own story.

Why Men Stick to This Car

THERE are men in this city who have driven motor cars for years, but who have never owned any car but the Hupmobile.

They see the performance of other cars—and they are satisfied that their Hupmobiles do better.

They are familiar with the tire, oil and gas mileage their friends get from higher priced cars—and they know their Hupmobiles do better.

These men stick to the Hupmobile through thick and thin for a very simple reason.

The Hupmobile serves them well. It gives them extraordinary performance, and really unusual economy.

We will be proud of the opportunity to give you a demonstration of such a car. A phone call will bring a Hupmobile to your home or office for inspection.

Immediate delivery on the Roadster, Touring car and Coupe.

This is Frances and that is Frederika. No, that is Frances and this is Frederika. Aw, shucks! What's a name between twins? For Frances and Frederika are the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bennett of 4304 North Paulina street.

Both commuted daily for four years from Ravenswood to Evanston; both bought fountain pens, carried check books, joined the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, and became popular Northwestern university co-eds. Both have just left for Tiger, Colo., to be schoolmarms.

Frances is to teach reading, writing, and arithmetic; Frederika is to teach geography, history, and—or is it just the other way round? At any rate, the Bennett twins are to be the entire faculty at Tiger.

PUBLIC BACKS GEN. DYER IN INDIA TROUBLE

Papers Start Funds to Show Confidence.

BY HENRY MERCER.

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CALCUTTA, Aug. 15.—Following the example of the London Morning Post, several English newspapers in India have started funds for Gen. Dyer as a mark of confidence in him and approval of his conduct in the Indian massacre, and the European association has sent a strongly worded petition to Prime Minister Lloyd George urging that the whole case, which resulted in his dismissal, should be reviewed.

Indian feeling is running high in this connection and the condemnation of Gen. Dyer, instead of quieting public opinion, has stirred up the trouble afresh. The action of the newspapers in collecting funds and of the European association in its petition have added no small amount to the general unrest.

Most of the European population is decidedly in favor of Gen. Dyer's action and consider that it probably saved India from a widespread rebellion.

Not an Isolated Case.

The unfortunate and regrettable incident at Amritsar and the resulting casualties—300 killed and above 1,000 wounded—resulting from Gen. Dyer's order to fire on the crowd was not an isolated case but only part of a widespread feeling of unrest throughout India and in stopping this with a strong hand it is not too much to say that Gen. Dyer saved India from a serious rebellion.

As a counter blast to the action in Gen. Dyer's support has come a proclamation of a general strike planned to be called throughout India among the Mohammedan population. The Khilafat are apparently divided on this matter. In fact, serious discussions are taking place in their ranks and the national congress is in the throes of great troubles and dissensions.

National Congress Split.

When congress joined hands with the Moslem league it was felt that a great victory had been gained by the Nationalists. The league had not previously been eye to eye with the Hindus; in fact, it was originally formed to prevent Hindu encroachment upon Mohammedan rights and privileges. The men who are now taking the lead in the congress have ideals totally different from those of the Hindus.

Here is one of the rocks on which the two parties are split. The Hindu extremists are very anxious to get rid of the British, but they see that any British withdrawal will be followed by Mohammedan supremacy and they have no desire to be ruled by either Afghans, Turks, or Indian Moslems.

S-5 SINKS AGAIN IN BEING TOWED TO PORT, REPORT

Crew Arrives at Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 4.—The forty members of the crew of the S-5, who were snatched from death by the narrowest margin from the sunken submarine early yesterday morning, arrived tonight at the Philadelphia navy yard. They were transferred from the battleship Ohio.

Unofficial reports were that the men are suffering more or less from the chlorine gas they inhaled while only the stern of the little vessel was above the surface of the water.

Three Men in Sick Bay.

Three of the six men are in the sick bay. They are Joseph O. Savage, seaman, Eleco, Pa.; Jacob Akers, seaman, Warn Cliff, W. Va., and Robert Igdanes, mess attendant, Philippine islands.

Lieutenant Commander Charles M. Cooke Jr., commander of the S-5, is still aboard the Ohio, where, it is understood, a naval court of inquiry is being held.

It was unofficially reported today the S-5 again broke away from the battleship Ohio, which was towing it, and sank in 150 feet of water, some distance off the Delaware capes. Vessels which were accompanying the Ohio marked the spot with buoys, it is said.

Daniels for Decorating Heroes.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 4.—The two men who drilled through the hull of the S-5 to liberate the crew of the disabled submarine should have naval decorations, Secretary of the Navy Daniels said tonight. He also indicated he was considering decorations for many of the S-5's crew.

The two men mentioned by Daniels are W. R Grace and R. A. McWilliams, engineers on the Gen. Goethals, who drilled a hole through which the entombed men could be brought to safety.

"If I find that I have not the authority to award such decorations in the present case," said the secretary, "I will ask congress for such authorization. Also, I want to mention those brave fellows in the submarine, who, almost suffocated, drilled holes through the upturned end of the craft, able to work only two minutes at a time because they were so weak from bad air."

Daniels made the statement after reading official reports of the accident sent him by the commandant of the Philadelphia navy yard. This report told how the S-5, riding off the Delaware coast Wednesday afternoon, started a practice dive. The valve in the air intake failed to work, the submarine filled with water, and one end settled to the bottom in 165 feet of water.

SOUTHERN INDIA STARVING, SAYS BAPTIST REPORT

New York, Sept. 4.—Economic conditions in India now are the worst in the last forty-five years, according to a survey by the American Baptist Foreign Missionary society, made public here today.

The report, prepared by the Rev. W. L. Ferguson, describes a state of "unrest, with political and social disorders such as India has not known for centuries, if ever."

"Conditions in south India have equaled the worst ever known to the inhabitants of that poverty stricken country," it continues.

"Our mission stations, besieged, day and night, by throngs of hungry people crying for food, were able to offer only slight aid, the appeal was so great. Men and women, through sheer weakness, staggered about like drunken people. Suffering was intensified by lack of drinking water, while an epidemic of cholera took great tolls of human life.

"Our missionaries provided relief to the best of their ability and for months over a hundred children were fed."

This Emblem Is Your Protection

"The National Association of Specialty Salesmen" was founded by 42 delegates from 14 states who met in Chicago, Illinois, week of April 5th.

This emblem is a guarantee to you—Mr. or Mrs. Buyer—that the man wearing it in the lapel buttonhole of his coat is right—because all members are pledged to the squarest kind of a square deal all down the line. It guarantees further—

That the house he represents is right.
That the goods he is selling are right.
That the price is right.

It says to the buyer or prospective buyer: "This man will not misrepresent his goods to you; he will treat you courteously and fairly.

Therefore, any man or woman, in the office, factory or home, is perfectly safe in doing business with him."

Only reputable salesmen handling a legitimate line of goods, are eligible to membership.

How often have attractive offers been made you by salesmen selling household and office appliances, insurance, real estate, pianos, talking machines, farm lighting plants, food products, etc., which you wanted to buy but was afraid to because you didn't know "who" the salesman was?

The National Association of Specialty Salesmen emblem is your safeguard to buying in the future, because, with this powerful organization of "square-deal" salesmen at your service, there is no longer an excuse for being swindled or defrauded.

This association makes it as safe for you to buy from its members as it is to buy from your corner grocer or your neighborhood druggist.

Be a safe buyer—look for the emblem. If a doubt exists, ask for the salesman's credentials—he'll gladly show them. Then place your order with absolute confidence.

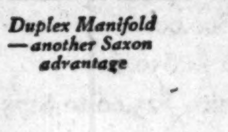
Duplex engineering

—a two-fisted blow at carbon

The Saxon patented Duplex Manifold deals a two-fisted blow at carbon.

You know that the present low-grade gasoline cannot be fully vaporized by ordinary carburetion. And the tiny drops of liquid fuel which pass thru the ordinary manifold are a constant cause of carbon.



Duplex Manifold —another Saxon advantage

Saxon

Duplex Engineering finds the answer to this problem in Double Carburetion and Duplex Wall Construction—exclusive patented features of Saxon's Duplex Manifold. Drops of unvaporized gasoline are sifted from the stream of vapor rushing to the cylinders, and held in the grill of the Duplex Manifold until completely vaporized. As a result, the tendency toward carbon is greatly reduced and unusual power is secured from the low-grade gasoline sold today.

This is one of the many patented features which make "Duplex" the only word which accurately describes the Saxon of today. When you see these features in our showroom, and hear them explained, you will realize why the Saxon is at least two years ahead of present standards.

Upon request we will gladly send you "Brass Tacks," an interesting and informative booklet containing the story of Duplex Engineering

Because you pay only for food this splendid Chicken dinner costs you only 85c here. At other high class restaurants the price would be from $1.95 to $2.65.

The items we serve for lunch and dinner are served throughout the day and night. You can get a full dinner, or a light lunch here from 11 in the morning until midnight.

Certified milk for the kiddies from the Arcady Farms, 15 cents a bottle.

Sensible people do sensible things. The richest men are as a rule the most frugal. They acquired their money by hard work and they won't throw it away no matter how much they have.

In the North American Restaurant the other noon I saw a bank president, a cashier, a well known merchant, a big real estate dealer and several others of wealth and standing. They were waiting on themselves and saving the big cost of service.

They were eating the best food in Chicago and paying only for the food. The big room was cool and inviting. The linen was snow-white and the silver glistening with cleanliness. The only way things differed from other high class restaurants was the fact that there were no waiters.

When they paid their bill they departed without tipping. There was no one there to tip. They knew they had saved from 50 to 70 per cent on their food and to a business man, in such times as these, that is worth considering.

The business of the North American has increased so rapidly since this plan was established that we are sorry we did not begin it years ago. But sometimes we don't reach Common Sense until events compel us to recognize it. And this is beyond question the Common Sense idea. It will grow in popularity like the proverbial snowball.

Because of our Common Sense plan of asking you to wait on yourself we serve a big portion of the finest Chicken Salad for 50c, fresh Lobster Salad for 60c, Fresh Shrimp Salad for 40c. These prices include our famous Thousand Island Dressing, which we have also put up in pint containers for home use at 75c a pint.

The North American is a delightful place for unescorted ladies.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Chicago's White Sox broke their losing streak after dropping seven straight by winning the second game of yesterday's double header with the St. Louis Browns after the visitors had copped the first in ten innings. The score of the Brown triumph was 6 to 5 and that of the Gleason tribe 5 to 2.

Fourteen hits for a total of twenty-seven bases were made off Eddie Cicotte in the overtime contest. These included a four base knock into the right field bleachers by Smith in the tenth round. It was the blow that terminated the combat. Prior to that the Browns had made three triples and two doubles off Cicotte in spite of some sensational support in which Jackson and Strunk performed stellar feats.

Sox Robbed of Runs.

The White Sox knocked out one Brown pitcher in the third round of that game, but were unable to score enough runs to beat out the visitors, largely because of four double plays perpetrated by the Browns where they did a lot of damage. One of them palpably robbed the Gleasons of a run that would have won the game in the last half of the ninth.

The score then was tied. Jackson singled with one out. Felsch smashed a line drive toward right field. Gedeon stretched himself and pinched it on the fly, doubling up Jackson before he could get back to first. If that smash had been a foot higher Jackson would have scored the winning run on it before Tobin could have corraled the pill. Burwell, who succeeded Bayne with nobody out in the third inning, was hit hard, but all four of the double plays came off behind him and saved his bacon.

Williams Wins Second.

Claude Williams was the man who checked the slipping Sox by holding the Browns down to two runs in the second game, while the Sox were more fortunate than in the first encounter because they bunched hits on Deberry in the third chapter for enough tallies to win. At that they had to whale out five safeties, including a double, to score their three markers. They had the bags full with only one out in that half, when another Brown double play snuffed out the rally.

Williams was hit for nine safeties, which was only one less than the Gleasons made off Deberry.

Jackson's Playing Sparkles.

Jackson gave an exhibition of left fielding that probably has not been surpassed for all round brilliance. He captured eleven flies during the day. In the first game he gathered in a foul from Williams' bat so close to the stand that he landed on top of the bull pen when he finally stoped running. In the second game, when the Sox were playing for Sisler to hit to right, he went far into center field and made a staggering catch of a drive which the Brown slugger tried to knock through the gap in left center.

Earlier in the same round Mr. Joe made a one handed stab of a liner from Gedeon and, without stopping, threw to the plate in time to nail Billings, who went in from third, but the umpire would not allow the double play.

In spite of their errors in the first game the Browns were not far behind the Sox in brilliant fielding with which the contests shone from start to finish. Sisler led the sluggers with six hits, including two triples. Felsch made four in spite of being jobbed out of two by Kenneth Williams and Gedeon and out of a home run by the wind, which blew a drive out of the park foul by a few feet.

Today's Question.

Which do you prefer, baseball or football?

Where Asked.

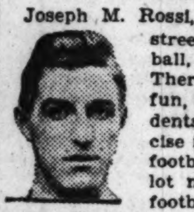
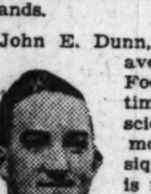
The Answers.



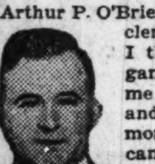
Joseph M. Rossi, 600 North Wells street, cashier—Baseball, by all means. There is just as much fun, less danger of accidents, and more exercise in baseball than in football. It is a whole lot more popular than football and a cleaner sport. There never was a game invented that could compare with baseball.

J. J. O'Mara, 4325 Jackson boulevard, engineer—Baseball is by far the better game of the two. It is a game everybody can enjoy and play, while football is a game that everybody hasn't an opportunity to play and not every one understands.



John E. Dunn, 370 North Hamlin avenue, salesman—Football for mine every time. It requires more science and develops more brawn and physique than baseball. It is more exciting and a great deal more interesting. It is a red blooded man's game.

Louis Hutt, 3741 Forest avenue, chief deputy clerk—Baseball all the way. It is the finest game ever produced. Football is not one-two compared with baseball. I have not missed a game in five years. I'm sure it is a wonderful game, both to the spectator and to the player.



Arthur P. O'Brien, 3520 Fulton street, clerk—I prefer baseball. I think it is a cleaner game and it appeals to me more than football and other games. It is more on the square and can't be faked like a football game. And besides you take more chance of being hurt or injured in a football game than you do in a baseball game.

NO. 46 FOR RUTH AS YANKS SPLIT BEFORE 33,000

Boston, Mass., Sept. 4.—Babe Ruth made a new world's record for home runs in a single season when he knocked out his forty-sixth in the second game with Boston today after driving his forty-fifth in the first game. New York took the first game, 5 to 3, and Boston the second, 6 to 5.

Ruth's homer in each instance came with no one on base. Both went into the right field bleachers, the first being made off Jones in the third inning of the first game and the second off Bush in the sixth inning of the second game.

Breaks All Known Records.

Ruth now has broken all known world's records for circuit drives in a single season.

Last season he broke "Buck" Freeman's major league record of twenty-five in a season by driving out twenty-nine. This, however, was not a world's record, for Perry Werden, playing with Minneapolis, then in the Western league, made forty-five four base hits in 1895. Werden was a first baseman, and, like Ruth, was unusually large physically. Most of his home runs were made in the Minneapolis park, however, which had close right and left field fences. He seldom drove the ball over the fence on foreign fields.

In 1901 Catcher Roth of the Evansville Central league club made thirty-six home runs.

Homers in Every Park.

Ruth this year has made at least one home run in every ball park in the American league, although he has, of course, made more in New York than in any other city.

New York batted Jones hard in the first game, but was held scoreless after he retired at the end of the sixth. In the second game New York overcame Boston's three run lead in the sixth and added two runs in the ninth, but the Red Sox came back in the last session with the three runs needed to win. Mays pitched the second game for New York. Scores:

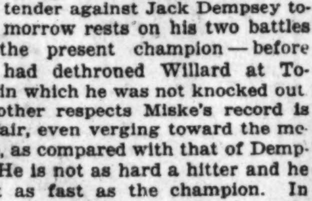
In the Wake of the News

DEMPSEY VS. MISKE.

BILLY MISKE'S chief claim to rating as a championship contender against Jack Dempsey tomorrow rests on his two battles with the present champion—before Jack had dethroned Willard at Toledo—in which he was not knocked out.

In other respects Miske's record is only fair, even verging toward the mediocre, as compared with that of Dempsey. He is not as hard a hitter and he is not as fast as the champion. In actual physical strength he is probably equal to, or possibly superior to, Jack.

Miske battles, or did battle before his temporary retirement from the ring for medical attention, with his left extended, coming in with his right—tactics not as perplexing as the weaving, alert, double-barreled attack of the champion.



The St. Paul battler has never been knocked out. He falls into clinches and has shown himself an adept in keeping close to avoid punishment.

Miske's two previous battles with Dempsey, in which he stayed the limit each time, have been widely exploited for publicity purposes in support of his chances tomorrow, and his camp folowing even has claimed he was entitled to at least a draw on each occasion.

In view of this controversy The Wake here reproduces the opening paragraph of the stories describing those 1918 battles as they appeared in THE TRIBUNE at the time:

> St. Paul, Minn., May 3.—[Special.]—Jack Dempsey was a clear winner over Billy Miske in the St. Paul auditorium tonight in a fast but featureless battle. There was not a suggestion of a knockdown or a drop of blood, but the battlers stepped fast throughout all the ten rounds.
> Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 28.—[Special.]—By adopting a policy of holding, Billy Miske, the hardy young Minnesotan, was able to live through six rounds with Jack Dempsey at the Olympia A. A. this afternoon and tell the tale at the finish. It was the third appearance of Dempsey here and the first occasion that an opponent was not stopped. Dempsey could not do to Miske what he did to Battling Levinsky and Porky Flynn in the same ring in the last three weeks.

There are two points to be considered in tomorrow's battle which might have a bearing on the result. Dempsey undoubtedly is better than when he beat Miske two years ago. He is not at an age to go back physically, despite a year's absence from the ring. But what will be his mental attitude? Against Willard he was like a bloodhound straining at its leash. He was keyed for the climax of his pugilistic career. Will he force the milling as at Toledo? That always has been his style. The Wake wonders whether Jack will adopt the more cautious tactics which champions sometimes adopt with the title.

The other consideration is whether Miske has improved and how much, with the gain of fifteen pounds in weight since he last fought Jack.

The Wake does not think Miske will stop Dempsey. If Dempsey fights as at Toledo, he will stop any opponent in the world. If the bout goes the limit, Dempsey should win on points.

MARKET LETTER.

IN last week's market, the rails moved strongly and confidently. It was a notable contrast to the days of government control. Then the rails scarcely moved and rolling stock scarcely rolled, but the stockholders were rolled.

Industrials were uneven with a tendency to improve. Boomday buyers are un-even too, but are improving, in fact, able to sit up and take notice. Deflation, including bank accounts, has proceeded in an orderly manner. While sugars are sour, and cotton soft, The Wake thinks a mildly bullish position advisable.

Westinghouse and New York Air Brake would seem a logical buy during the campaign oratory. Swift International looks like meat at the price. Montgomery Ward and Sears are recommended for male orders, Soo for intending divorcees, and Chicago Nipple for infants.

Just a reminder: Boxing is illegal in Illinois, so several thousand Chicagoans will lose hours of sleep and take thousands of dollars in money to Benton Harbor tomorrow.

Evansville Mayor Stops Riot at Baseball Scrap

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 4.—Only for the timely intervention of Mayor Bosse, a riot would have started in the sixth inning of today's Evansville-Moline game. After being put out of the game by Umpire Weir, Pitcher Beck of Moline attempted to throw the ball out of the park. Instead, it went into the stands, striking a small boy in the face. The crowd, misinterpreting Beck's act, was on the verge of surging upon the field, but was held in check by the mayor, police, and players.

Gov. Coolidge Appoints Boxing Commission

Boston, Mass., Sept. 4.—Gov. Coolidge today named Carl A. Barrett and Eugene Buckley, local newspaper men, as members of the state boxing commission, of which Col. A. F. Foote, commissioner of public safety, is chairman. The executive council adjourned this afternoon without taking action on their appointment, so that under a ruling of the attorney general on the new boxing law there appeared to be no chance of holding bouts arranged for Labor day.

DEMPSEY-MISKE BATTLE MAY BE STRATEGY BOUT

Headwork of Combatants Important Factor.

KEARNS THREATENS TO CALL OFF FIGHT

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 4.—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, tonight declared "there would be no fight Monday between Dempsey and Billy Miske unless Jim Dougherty of Philadelphia referees the bout." His statement followed announcement by Chairman Bigger of the state boxing commission that Dougherty could not referee, because he was not licensed in Michigan.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Securing an advantage and holding it by strategy and headwork, fundamental principles in all branches of sport, will be a dominant factor in deciding Monday's contest between Champion Jack Dempsey and Challenger Billy Miske in Floyd Fitzsimmons' arena.

To secure this advantage either fighter must fathom a weakness in the other's defense. This will be accomplished by trying every blow which either knows, and, when it is found, to keep using it until a big lead has been established. Then strategy and headwork will be employed to hold the advantage by making a careful fight.

True Also in Baseball.

Baseball games are won in this manner. Certain pitchers are weak in handling bunts, as may be the third baseman. The bunting game is used to gain an advantage and then hold it by playing careful ball. Once a team gets the advantage of three or four runs, no attempts are made to cut runs off at the plate. On the contrary, the batsmen are retired, the winning team always working on its advantage.

Football games are won in the manner in which Monday's battle may be determined. One of the first duties of the quarter back or the player who directs the team's attack is to use all straight plays in his repertoire. When a weak spot is found he is instructed to hammer it until a score is made. After this advantage is gained the smart leader always will call for a punt when the oval is in his own territory and never take any chances of having the score tied as the result of a fumble.

Where White Made Mistake.

One of the best examples of a fighter not using the proper strategy was in the recent Charley White-Benny Leonard fight decided here July 4. White had the fight won for eight rounds. He had established such a lead that Leonard's only chance for victory was a knockout. Instead of working on his large margin White attempted to carry the fight to the lightweight champion and was knocked out in the ninth session.

Had White been content with his advantage and permitted Leonard to do all the forcing the Chicagoan would have been credited with a popular ten round decision over the king of the lightweights. It simply was a lack of headwork on White's part, an essential qualification to boxing which so many fighters lack.

Brains Behind Fighters.

Dempsey and Miske have had the experience to know these points. Their managers, Jack Kearns for Dempsey and Jack Reddy for Miske, are two of the foxiest seconds in the game, and it is almost a certainty neither will permit his man to take chances if he has gained a commanding lead early in the battle. At the same time neither manager is foolish enough not to send his man out if he is being beaten. If this is the case then the winning fighter must resort to strategy to avoid damaging blows.

Miske realizes he has the big opportunity of his career and has taken every precaution to be in the best of shape. He has worked faithfully on the road. This training has consisted of wind sprints, short jogs, and fast walks over a five mile course. He has that spring in his movements which plainly shows he will take advantage of any opening left by the champion.

Idleness May Affect Champ.

Dempsey looks fit, but it remains to be seen whether he has the reserve to come back if being punished. His long layoff and its consequent effect of making a fighter lose his judgment of distance may be a factor in tomorrow's battle.

They wound up their training today, and from now until they are called into the ring will dry out. By this is meant that sweets will be taboo and only food of a nourishing sort will be given either man. They are pronounced fit and ready by their managers.

That each fighter has a wholesome respect for the other was shown today when neither manager would announce the men who will be in the fighters' corners. All precautions will be taken to prevent pepper from being thrown on the towels or a foreign substance into the water pails. The drinking bottles have been sterilized and put safely away.

There is little about ringcraft which either does not know, but the fighter who gains an early lead and holds it by careful boxing combined with headwork should be the winner if the bout goes ten rounds.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Thousands of fans who dote on glove wielding are cluttering up the twin cities of Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan. They are thronging here because Monday afternoon Champion Jack Dempsey tosses off the bath robe, hears the gong, and battles Billy Miske, his St. Paul challenger, in his first bout since he took the title away from Jess Willard at Toledo July 4, 1919.

If all these people—and, of course, the great majority of them hail from Chicago—were forced to remain here over night, they would have to take their sleep on the hoof. Chicago isn't the whole works, however, by any means; Minneapolis and St. Paul, Miske's home, and Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Detroit, and even New York, are sending the gents who can't see anything but boxing.

Capacity of Arena 18,000.

If we can guess correctly, it will be a huge crowd that wends its way through the turnstiles at Floyd Fitzsimmons' ball park. Capacity will mean that a few more than 18,000 fans will sit down and watch a card of four ten round heavyweight bouts run off, with Dempsey and Miske shining in the feature number.

The arena is set, the advance sale of tickets has been large, and part of the gang is here, with the rest to follow. The double holiday, Sunday and Monday, gave many the opportunity to come early.

Just what the gate will run can't be estimated with any degree of accuracy. A full house would mean nearly $200,000. The optimistic fellows look for it to run that big. There are those who believe a conservative guess would be between $125,000 and $150,000.

Both Boxers in Shape.

These two men whose powers of attraction are making this pot of gold show possible are waiting for just one thing now, and that is for the gong to sound. No one need be fooled into believing that Dempsey and Miske aren't in fighting condition. They were in that kind of shape several days ago, and both would have preferred to get it over then, instead of waiting for tomorrow.

Are they confident? Well, listen and find if it rings in the proper tone:

Jack Dempsey: "I'm ready. Let's go."

Billy Miske: "I never was better in my life. Let's go."

These two fellows who uncork the chin popping stuff tomorrow aren't of the type that finds it worrisome business to wait for the gong. Dempsey, of the two, is perhaps the more eager to get the business of tomorrow finished, but that is because he is loaded with nervous energy.

Bill from St. Paul hasn't any nerves at all—at least one wouldn't think so for he travels contentedly along what he seems to think is a path of roses. He's an optimist for fair.

Dempsey Picked to Win.

It is hard to see where Miske has a good chance to score a victory and 'n stall himself as new heavyweight champion of the world. This Dempsey person with the knockout wallop in either fist stands as solidly in his way as a skyscraper. Dempsey will fight Bill his one best way, shifting and hooking lefts and rights to the head and body. Of course, any one knows what is likely to happen if one of those hooks connects.

Without anything from Miske to confirm or throw out the contention, we'll say that Bill's best chances would appear to be in a careful, clever display which might land him a points winner if the bout went the limit of ten rounds. No decision, aside from the verdict of the critics, will be given, as the idea of appointing a referee to give a verdict has been passed up.

Champion Excels in K. O.'s.

If there is a knockout it should be put over by the champion, for Dempsey's record bears out this contention. He is going to win by a knockout, he says, and just as quickly as it can be put over. Few look for Miske to send over the wallop that would dethrone the champion.

There is one thing that should not be overlooked, and that is that speed is going to count when champion and challenger get together. All the world knows that Dempsey is fast for a heavyweight, but probably some folks don't know that Miske, too, is a remarkably speedy gent himself for a fellow who weighs 193 pounds.

Name Referee Tomorrow.

The name of the man who will referee this championship battle between Jack Dempsey and Billy Miske probably won't be announced until within a few hours of time for starting the battle. A conference at which an effort was made to select the official was held this evening, but stumbling blocks aplenty appeared, with the result the meeting adjourned without a decision.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—After "Babe" Adams apparently had wild pitched away a perfectly good ball game today, "Lefty" Tyler was pounced upon by the Pirates in the eighth inning, and they walked off with a hard fought contest, 3 to 2.

It was a tough game for the Cubs to lose, but the Pirates combined a pass, a triple, and a sacrifice fly for the two tallies which decided the contest and started the Bruins and Pirates back to Chicago with honors even in the two affairs thus far this series.

Even in defeat the Chicago entry made a strong bid for a tie score in the ninth when O'Farrell tripled with two out, Cooper pitching, but Pinch Hitter Tom Daly, operating in place of Tyler, was unequal to the task and died on a slow grounder to Whitted.

Ball Bounced Off Chin.

The Pittsburgh huskies nicked Tyler for a run in the first inning. Cutshaw whacked a grounder that rolled up Tyler's arm and off his chin into right field for a two base hit. Southworth drove him over the plate with a single to right. After that both Tyler and Adams pitched clever ball until the seventh, when Adams grew wild.

Friberg opened the fat inning with a single. O'Farrell could not help him any, but Tyler poked a single back of second. Adams threw the ball into the dirt, and it rolled to the distant stands, letting Friberg count and advancing Tyler to third. He finished the circuit on Flack's sacrifice fly.

Bigbee's Triple Harmful.

This lead appeared sufficient until the eighth, when Lee was sent to bat for Adams and coaxed a pass after running the count to three and two and fouling off four. Bigbee smashed a triple between Flack and Paskert. Cutshaw lifted a long sacrifice fly to Paskert, and Bigbee fetched home what proved to be the winning run.

Pittsburgh almost registered in the sixth, but fast work by Paskert choked off a run at the plate. Cutshaw singled and was forced by Southworth, who stole second and hiked to third on O'Farrell's high throw. He tried for the plate when the ball hopped away from Paskert, but he recovered and made a perfect throw to the catcher, and Southworth was nipped on a close play.

NOTES OF THE CUBS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 4.—The Cubs and Pirates set sail for Chicago tonight. They play at the north side tomorrow and then return here for morning and afternoon contests Labor day.

Nicholson made merry at the expense of Tyler today. He collected one-third of the Pirates' nine hits, but none contributed towards run making.

Wednesday is an off occasion on the Cub schedule. So they will not grow rusty, an exhibition game has been booked at Altoona, Pa. After that they proceed to New York.

NOTES OF THE SOX

St. Louis again today.

Jackson and Felsch made four hits in the two games. Strunk, Schalk, and the two Collinses made three apiece.

The White Sox kept even with the Yankees, who broke even with Boston but lost ground to the Indians, who walloped the Tigers.

Pitcher Al Dahlin, obtained from the Erie semi-pro field during the Sox eastern trip, has been released to the Nashville club.

The crowd numbered more than 25,000 and, judging by the rooting, a considerable minority of those present had wagered on the Browns to win both games.

Schalk went against the screen in front of the stand after Tobin's foul in the eighth inning. There were Browns on second and first and two out at the time.

Felsch struck out in the first inning of the second game, then threw his bat viciously. It struck John Collins, who was waiting to bat, and knocked him groggy. But after a few minutes to regain his wind Shauno continued in the game. Pretty soon it will be necessary to screen the dugout to protect the Sox from accidents.

Englewood Christians in Finals on No-Hit Victory

Blackburn of Englewood Christian pitched a no-hit, no-run victory over Zion at Hamilton park, placing his nine in the finals for the Lutheran league pennant. He fanned eighteen. Hitting by Atwill and Roller also featured.

Woodlawn Baptist qualified for the finals by beating Olivet institute, 7 to 2, at Lincoln park before a big crowd. The features were home runs by A. Urqhardt and W. Olson and the team work of Woodlawn. Score:

EX-MAROON GRIDIRON HERO NOW CANDIDATE FOR MUNICIPAL JUDGE

Yep, it's "Wallie" Steffen who is a candidate in the Republican primaries for a place on the ticket for Municipal judge. Of course, he is Ald. Walter P. Steffen now, serving his third term in the city council as representative of the Twenty-third ward. Readers of this page, however, will remember him better from 1902 to 1908.

Steffen, who was one of the greatest athletes ever developed in the Chicago high schools, was born in Chicago and started his athletic career at old North Division, where he was captain of the famous teams of 1902-3-4. He piloted the North Siders to victory over Brooklyn Poly, champion of the east, 80 to 0, and it was Wallie's snaky runs and "straightarm" which was responsible for many of those 80 points.

Entering the University of Chicago, Steffen was a member of the baseball, track and football teams, and strange to say, never gave the coaches any worry about eligibility as he was a brilliant student. He was captain of the eleven in 1908 and was picked as All-American quarterback by Walter Camp. Following his graduation he assisted Coach Stagg for three years during the football season.

PADDY DRISCOLL HITS IN 2-1 WIN FOR PYOTTS OVER LOGAN SQUARES

Paddy Driscoll's hit in the twelfth inning, with Blank on second base, gave the Pyotts a 2 to 1 victory over Logan Square yesterday in one of the greatest slab duels ever staged on a local semi-pro diamond. Blank reached first by being hit and was advanced on Seifert's sacrifice.

Driscoll's bingle was the third of the game for the winners, who scored their other run in the first inning when Blank lifted the first ball pitched over the fence. From then until one was out in the tenth not another hit was made off Ed Stack, who opposed Grover Baichley on the mound. Baichley also allowed only one hit in the first nine innings, an error by Daubert and an out, which followed, accounting for Logan Square's only run.

HAMLIN BEATEN BY JACKSON FOR PARK NET TITLE

Jackson Park clinched the championship of the Public Parks Tennis association, and qualified to represent Chicago in the annual intercity public parks national championships at St. Louis early next month, by sweeping all five matches against Hamlin Park in the closing team contest of the season at Jackson yesterday. The winners did not even lose a set.

The play attracted an interested gallery, which applauded the special mixed doubles match between Miss Vorda Mican of this city and Ben Parks, Oklahoma City champion, against the champions of the state of Wisconsin, Miss Marie Qualey and George O'Connell, both of Chicago. Miss Mican and Parks won, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4. Following are summaries of the team match:

SINGLES—George O'Connell, Jackson, beat H. Wolff, Hamlin, 6—2, 6—4; W. Peterson, Jackson, beat E. Kilner, Hamlin, 6—1, 6—; R. Levey, Jackson, beat A. Steinmetz, 6—, 6—2.

DOUBLES—O'Connell and Lloyd M, beat Wolff and Kilner, 6—3, 6—4; Levey and Peterson won by default.

Style Rules Us All

We may pretend indifference to style, but after all we feel comfortable when our clothes are in style and a trifle self-conscious when they are out of style.

There are seasons of extremes and seasons of conservative styles. This is the year of easy, graceful lines rather than the form-fitting, militaristic models of last season. The waist line is lower—the vent is shorter—the coats hang freely from the shoulder.

This change is welcomed by every regular fellow. He likes comfort with his style; and another thing—here is a coat that will not be noticeably passe next year.

You are sure of quality—of all-wool fabric and fine tailoring—you are confident of full value, and you have the endorsement of the greatest style authority in America when you invest in a suit of Society Brand Clothes.

FREEDMAN REGISTERS VICTORY BY A SHADE OVER MICKEY DONLEY

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

At East Chicago, Ind.—Sailor Freedman beat Mickey Donley [10.] Ollie O'Neil knocked out Jack Kennedy [5.]

His willingness to fight, while his opponent devoted himself chiefly to orderly retreat, earned a slight shade for Sailor Freedman over Mickey Donley of New York in the feature of two bouts at the East Chicago avenue yesterday.

In the other mill, Ollie O'Neil of South Chicago, knocked out Young Jack Kennedy of Gary in the fifth round. They are 117 pounders. O'Neil drew blood from Kennedy's nose in the second round, and the sight so sickened a little girl of about 15 years that she fainted. She was carried from the arena.

Three mills were carded, but Bud Christian refused to battle Bud Perrill when the latter appeared so heavy he wouldn't even climb the scales. This was a sad shock to the slim crowd that turned out.

No Cause to Boast.

Freedman's victory was nothing to warrant boasting. He used about every illegal trick known to the ring game, but stayed just enough inside the line to keep from being disqualified. He jabbed Donley with his elbows and mauled him with his arms, butted blood from the Donley sneezer in the tenth round, and otherwise did about everything but knee the invader from the east.

But Freedman was willing to fight. He pushed matters from the first gong to the finish. True, he was equally to blame with Donley for the clinching which occupied about four-fifths of the entire mill. But the sailor seemed satisfied at long range if Donley would stand up to him. Donley was out to leg it, however, and leg it he did throughout.

Shakes Up Visitor.

Freedman won two rounds off by himself, the fifth and the tenth. In the fifth he registered twice with solid lefts to the Donley face from long range. Those jolts shook up the eastern lightweight, and for a brief flash it seemed Solly might stop his foe. But Donley wasn't badly hurt.

Freedman rushed Mickey to the ropes to start the tenth, then butted his classic head against Mike's nose, drawing blood. That roused Freedman to greater efforts. He chased Mike into a corner, where he whaled him with considerable frequency, using a straight left that drew claret in more consistent flow.

Freedman Always Leading.

Neither had anything in the other eight rounds. Freedman was always leading, but led chiefly into clinches. Donley gave a good account of himself at close quarters. He slammed Mr. Solly merrily and often with rights and lefts to the stomach, varied with an occasional short jab to the jaw. But Freedman found the Donley jaw often with both hands during these mixups. There wasn't enough damage done either way to warrant giving either battler a shade.

The youthful Ollie O'Neil showed a lot of stuff against Gary's Young Kennedy. Ollie has his foe measured from the start. He fited a clever left into the Kennedy countenance with great regularity and an earnest quota of steam. Varying this with solid rights and lefts in the midsection, O'Neil had Kennedy ready for the hay when the fifth started. Kennedy went down once for a nine count, and the referee reached nine of his count on a second knockdown before calling it enough.

Charley White Wins from Harvey Thorp in 10 Rounds

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Charley White, Chicago lightweight, fighting his second bout in six days, won decisively from Harvey Thorp of Kansas City in ten rounds. The largest crowd that ever saw a boxing contest here turned out for the show.

Johnny Kilbane Signs for Singing and Dancing Act

Cleveland, O., Sept. 4.—Johnny Kilbane, featherweight king, will try to knock 'em dead in the theater instead of the ring for a few months. Johnny announced he has signed articles for a singing and dancing part in a musical act. The champion is said to be skilled in both dancing and singing.

JOHNSTON AND TILDEN MEET FOR NATIONAL NET CHAMPIONSHIP

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 4.—William M. Johnston, the playing through singles champion, and William T. Tilden II., the hero of Wimbledon, won their places in the final of the thirty-ninth national championship tournament on the turf of the West Side Tennis club today. Each accomplished victory in the semi-final by his own characteristic methods, which afforded the gallery an exemplification of two distinct types of tennis.

BILLY JOHNSTON.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Johnston, playing the fastest sort of hitting game, filled with highly speculative rallies, defeated G. Colket Caner, Massachusetts state champion, in four sets, 6—3, 4—6, 7—5, 6—3. Caner was at the pinnacle of his game, frequently conquering the title holder in the rallies and worrying him considerably in the early sets.

Tilden Plays Long Range.

Tilden elected to test the variety of strokes with Wallace F. Johnson, the Philadelphia star and No. 5 of the ranking list. This brought about a duel mostly at long range. Tilden, who has twice stood up as runner for the title, came through by the tally 14—12, 6—4, 6—4.

Caner displayed rare good judgment backed by skill of the highest order as he fought through his battle with Johnston. The champion experienced a taste of speed and stinging volleys that he had not looked for. The one thing that Caner did which had the lithe little Californian in trouble was to gain his position at the net. Overanxious to dislodge his opponent, Johnston did not time his shots properly, his errors of nets and outs at critical stages costing him the second set.

Champion at Disadvantage.

It was by the greatest exertion that the champion steadied to his driving in the third and fourth sets. In these he forced position and made use of his terrific forehanders for the points. Throughout the match Johnston was at a disadvantage, as Caner towered 6 feet 3 inches and his commanding reach did not afford Johnston much margin as he shot for the side lines.

Johnston mastered his rival, who played so ably, by his ability to earn his points by driving for place. The stroke analysis shows this, as the champion's total for the match was 45 points earned, to 29 for Caner. As to errors of outs and nets, the two were almost evenly balanced, Johnston's lost points of this description being 94, to 93 for the big Harvard man.

Tilden Seeing Slow.

So different in character was the Tilden contest as to cause it to appear slow by comparison. Tilden and Wallace Johnson employed every conceivable variety of chop, cut, and spin to the courts. Most of the time they held to positions on their base lines, attempting to force openings. It was only after a long deuce set that went to twenty-six games that Tilden began to speed up. He finished going more nearly at his usual gait and up to the net in the rallies.

Tilden, like the champion, earned his points, although he threw away a great number by errors. Tilden won a total of 46 points on placements, while Johnson's was only 17. The total of Tilden's nets and outs was 112, against 101 for his opponent.

The final for the championship with William Johnston holding two legs on the trophy, will be played Monday at 3:30 p. m. Other events will be decided earlier in the day.

NATIONAL SINGLES SEMI-FINALS.

William T. Tilden, II., of Philadelphia, defeated Wallace F. Johnson, Philadelphia, 14—12, 6—4, 6—4.

William M. Johnston, San Francisco, defeated G. Colket Caner, Boston, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3.

MARK TO MRS. MIDAS AS SHE WINS HONORS IN WOMEN'S TOURNEY

Mrs. Lee W. Mida of Marquette gave a fine finishing touch to the women's city open championship staged under the auspices of the Marquette Park Woman's club through the week. She won the title by defeating Mrs. Frank X. McNellis of Garfield, 12 and 11, and lowered the record for the course to 83, the previous mark being held by Miss Grace Saunders, the Marquette champion, at 89.

Mrs. Mida was not especially strong on the outgoing round, taking 47, but after the turn she made four of the nine holes in men's par, and had a birdie on the short fifteenth. Her card:

Out	4	4	7	4	6	6	5	6	5—47
In.	4	4	4	4	4	2	4	4	6—36—83

Miss Lee Fogelson of Marquette was the medalist with 94. Miss E. Hurson of Garfield won the second flight, Mrs. Roudot of Garfield being the runner-up. R. D. Stevenson won the class A handicap at Oak Park with 83—10—73, W. G. Oliver, 89—18—71, winning in class B, and I. B. Glendennen in class C, with 100—26—74. Qualifiers for the veteran's trophy were: A. F. Milliken, C. S. Petittt, F. E. Crandall, P. V. Castle, D. B. Ford, A. T. Evans, Dr. Copeland, T. E. Roberts, I. N. Conard, H. W. Austen, I. B. Glendennen, G. D. Webb, E. R. Blanchard, T. H. Jones.

RIDGE.

Results in the second round for the Ridge championship were: J. K. Lamb defeated H. M. Ferrers, 1 up; H. C. Olmstead defeated H. A. Mix, 3 and 2; C. S. Pillsbury defeated A. S. Young, 2 and 1; M. Le Bosquet defeated A. H. Whitley, 3 and 2.

First flight—C. Peters defeated F. H. Schultz, 2 and 1; E. R. Smith defeated L. W. Senneff, 4 and 3; E. L. Baker defeated G. M. Lawrence, 3 and 1; H. Parnell Waller defeated C. G. Weaver, 2 and 1.

SOUTH SHORE.

Finishing 1 up in a closely contested match, C. F. Wiley bested Eustace Vynne in the finals for the club title.

At the end of the first eighteen holes in the Labor day Marathon match against par, H. E. Wilkins, W. J. Hughey, and D. T. Campbell were tied, 1 up.

The ball sweepstakes was contested at match play against bogey. W. T. Blew, M. P. Fitzmaurice, H. E. Wilkins, F. R. Jenkins, H. E. Neisz, and I. C. Humphrey checked out even and split the spheres six ways.

FLOSSMOOR.

At the end of the first eighteen holes in the seventy-two hole marathon, which will be concluded Labor day, F. H. Warren, 81—7—74, led in class A; J. E. Stokes, 89—16—73, topped the second division players, while J. L. Bobo, 98—24—74, was in front in the class C brigade.

J. N. McDonald led the field in the qualifying round of the club championship contest with a low gross of 79, and will be paired against W. B. Hart, 84, in the first match round. Other qualifiers and pairings were: S. H. Lyons, 80, vs. Fred Gardner, 85; A. C. Levis, 90, vs. D. A. Crawford, 89; C. F. Grimes, 84, vs. S. H. Fields, 90; I. W. Lincoln, 87, vs. T. J. Watkins, 90; A. G. Erwin, 83, vs. G. G. Dowdall, 90; L. L. Northrup, 87, vs. F. H. Warren, 81; R. B. Kraemer, 83, vs. C. E. Foust, 87.

SHOOTING as well as in the palmy days of his youth, Ralph Hoagland won the low gross prize in the event played over the number 1 course at Olympia Fields. His card of 37—38—75, was one over par, and contained three birdies. His card and the par figures:

Hoagland—
Out	5	3	3	5	5	3	3	4	6—37
Par—Out ..	5	4	3	5	4	3	4	4	5—37
Hoagland—
In	5	5	4	4	3	4	4	5	4—38—75
Par—In	5	4	4	4	3	4	4	4	5—37—74

G. Talmadge had low net with 85—13—72. It was impossible to hold the approaching and putting event, as there were 675 players out, while members and guests to the number of over 2,000 were present for the carnival events. Qualifiers for the president's trophy were:

S. J. Chadwick, 71; J. Pettigrew, H. E. Herrick, 72; P. K. Groves, 78; H. L. Fairfield, R. H. Dubois, 76; J. A. Osborne, E. A. Ecke, F. Kruse, 77; R. T. Larrabee, D. C. Luse, 78; E. Hageman, W. C. Beek, V. A. Kugeman, E. M. Peter, O. C. Hornbeck, 80.

GRAND BEACH.

Miss Catherine Walsh, a 16 year old Chicago player, won the women's championship title by defeating Miss Lucile Bomer of Grand Beach, 2 and 1, in the deciding contest.

CHICAGO.

C. M. Hoof, 91—18—73, and Leonard A. Busby, 97—24—73, placed the Saturday Silver cup in escrow. Paul Wilder, 81—7—74, and R. K. Caldwell, 88—14—74, tied for third place.

GLEN VIEW.

Homer W. Chandler, with 90—21—69, won first prize in the club handicap competition. A. Bentley, 86—14—72; C. H. MacDowell, 89—17—72, and R. M. Torrence, 86—14—72 tied for second prize.

BOB O'LINK.

G. S. Parker, C. E. Stenning, and F. M. Terry finished one, two, three in the blind bogey event at Bob O'Link. Winners in the ball sweepstakes were: Class A, M. M. Townley; class B, H. W. Redman, C. L. Harter, C. E. Karstrom, W. H. Arthur, C. B. Rogers, A. V. Konsberg; class C, F. B. O'Hara, R. Wolfe, A. C. Allyn, T. J. Wardell, J. M. Elliott, H. B. Lyford.

BELMONT.

In the second round for the Belmont trophy, F. M. Bell defeated J. P. Hankey, 2 up; C. Heinzen defeated R. Bergh, 6 and 5; R. J. Kerr defeated L. A. Bentley, 5 and 4; O. H. Fleming defeated F. B. Gallagher, 2 and 1. Mr. Fleming, who returned yesterday from New York, says the Engineers' course, over which the amateur championship is to be played, needs more adjectives than he has at his command to describe its difficult character.

EXMOOR.

Brad L. Eldredge shot the first nine holes at Exmoor in 33 and, finishing with 40, led the qualifiers in the club championship with 73. Pairings for the first round: Eldredge and W. E. Egan, E. S. Barber and C. A. McWhinney, R. A. Bard and A. S. Warren, E. P. Price and J. M. Tuttle, S. S. Boynton and M. S. Flinn, Trigg Waller and H. F. Straw, E. H. Seeman and H. A. Towner, D. McMurray and C. W. Lobdell. Winners in the handicap: Class A, B. L. Eldredge, 73-1-72; class B, E. S. Barber, 85-16-69; class C, C. R. Crane II., 92-18-74; class D, G. S. Fernald, 101-24-77.

INDIAN HILL.

F. E. Miller, with an excellent card of 39—41—80, topped the fiel dat Indian Hill in the qualifying round for the championship. His card was: Out, 5, 4, 5, 4, 5, 4, 4, 5, 3—39; In, 3, 6, 5, 3, 5, 6, 5, 2, 6—41—80. Championship pairings are: Miller and F. J. Bershbach; C. L. Strobel Jr., and N. L. Hoyt; R. H. Ripley and R. O. Lord; W. S. Anderson and H. A. Gardner; R. S. Laird and M. E. Schoenthaler; A. D. Edwards and A. E. McCormic; N. L. Hoyt, Jr., and M. P. Noyes.

Second flight—C. W. Ritchey and F. D. Montgomery; G. Leslie and G. Kelley; B. G. McLeod and R. Hammill; G. T. Olson and F. P. Butler; D. Fuller and J. W. Scott; J. C. Harding and H. B. Torraday; H. S. Coffin and H. V. O'Brien; W. S. Miller and C. C. Adams.

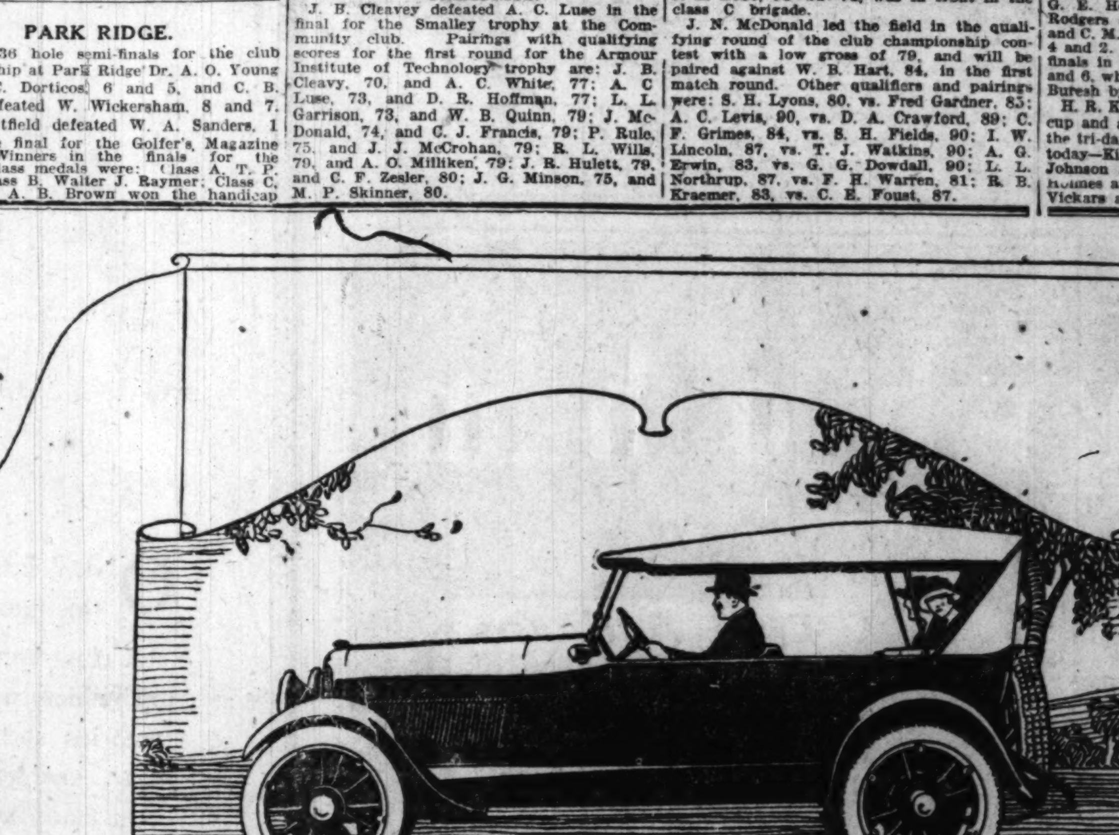
WESTMORELAND.

Close matches marked the semi-finals in the championship at Westmoreland, C. Brown defeating Dr. E. H. Raedel, 1 up in 19 holes, and C. A. Bush disposing of J. D. W. Archer, 1 up. In class B, T. C. Moulding defeated J. I. Zook, 3 and 2, while F. Burnaby defeated G. E. Hecker by the like margin. A. K. Rodgers defeated C. Kirk, 1 up, in class C, and C. M. Haugan eliminated M. A. Mummert, 4 and 2. C. D. Buresh won his way into the finals in class D by defeating F. C. Stiles, 7 and 6, while F. A. Rockhold advanced to meet Buresh by a victory of 3 and 2 over H. Hill.

H. R. King, with 81—11—70, won the Peace cup and also had the low qualifying score in the tri-day event. Pairing for the final round today—King and Grumm, Burnaby and Reed; Johnson and Haugan; Rodgers and Matlock, Holmes and Kalkhurst, Nicols and Goodwillie, Vickars and Brown, Marsh and Burnaby.

PARK RIDGE.

In the 36 hole semi-finals for the club championship at Park Ridge Dr. A. O. Young defeated C. Dorticos, 6 and 5, and C. B. Rogers defeated W. Wickersham, 8 and 7. E. J. Whitfield defeated W. A. Sanders, 1 up, in the final for the Golfer's Magazine trophy. Winners in the finals for the monthly class medals were: Class A, T. P. Hodge; Class B, Walter J. Raymer; Class C, R. Kane. A. B. Brown won the handicap



PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

A RIDE in the five-passenger "Glenbrook" model is an experience not soon forgotten. It affords a demonstration of power and smoothness that is a revelation to the average motorist.

From five to twenty-five miles per hour—in nine seconds flat. That is the standard performance of this keen-spirited car. Such acceleration means a vast reserve of power for the steepest hills and soft, clinging sand.

Take just one ride in rolling country with the "Glenbrook"—and watch the speedometer on the grades.

ARMOUR IS STAR AS LAKE FOREST WINS POLO TITLE

Scores 6 Goals, Beating North Shores, 16-4.

In one of the fastest games of polo seen at Lake Forest this year the Onwentsia four defeated the North Shore team yesterday, 16 to 6. Onwentsia played its best polo of the season, Armour, Raider, Johnson, and Seaverns being at top form and never failing in the pinches.

Laurance Armour played the best game of his career, scoring six goals and taking them all down the field for four others that were driven through by his mates.

Hold Visitors at Bay.

Onwentsia, led by Capt. Raider, never gave the North Shore team a chance to get started. The visitors were always dangerous, but the Lake Forest four kept them crowded all the way with the exception of the sixth period, when Frank Berank broke loose and scored a goal, while Onwentsia was unable to break through the North Shore defense.

Second Goal for Berang.

Berang continued his good work at the beginning of the seventh period and scored another marker for his team, but then the North Shore was smothered by Onwentsia with a flock of four more goals, which killed all hope of ever overtaking the home team. Lineup:

Onwentsia [16].		North Shore [6].
L. H. Armour	No. 1	Frank Berang
B. H. Raider [Capt.]	No. 2	E. Byfield
Col. Johnston	No. 3	Frank Hayes [Capt.]
G. W. Seaverns	No. 4	H. Lorber

CANUCKS MAKING YACHT CUP BID

New York, Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Alexander C. Ross, the Canadian yachtsman, who informed the New York Yacht club that he intended to challenge for the America's cup through a Nova Scotia yacht club, is in this city, and when seen today said:

"The people of Canada are enthusiastic about the challenger for the America's cup, the money to build which I expect to raise by popular subscription. I have heard from all sections of the dominion, and the enthusiasm is greater than I expected. I do not think it will be difficult to raise far more than needed to carry the project through, and even now, while I am here telling members of the local Canadian club of my ideas, plans for a campaign are being prepared in Montreal."

George Hankel Wins Race Over 5 Mile Track in 28:00

George Hankel won the five mile scratch race, which was the feature of the field day at Logan Square park yesterday. His time was 28 minutes flat. He won from a field of twenty-five starters.

BLUE GILL DAYS AND WAYS.

That September is one of the prime months for blue gill fishing is one of several compensations for those who must take their vacations late. From this, however, it must not be taken that this finest of pan fishes is a one month proposition, for he is not—blue gills are willing to bite in any month of the year.

The angler in northern latitudes, winter weary and anxious to be out with the first few warm days, can nearly always depend upon the blue gill to rise to the occasion—and to his lure; to the summer and autumn vacationist he is an institution, while those who fish through the ice in the winter find the blue gill doing business at the same old stand.

Not only is the blue gill an all the year round proposition but, with the exception of the black basses, he is the most widely distributed of the sun fishes. In most lakes and quiet streams from western New York and Pennsylvania to Minnesota, south to the Rio Grande and Florida, this doughty little fish is the standby of anglers, young and old, as well beloved of the veteran as of the juveniles. I have heard expert anglers, who have gone through the game from minnows to tarpon, speak most enthusiastically of Sir Blue Gill.

The blue gill is the blue bream, dollardee or copper nosed bream of the south and the blue sun fish of the text books. His gills are not blue, but his gill covers and cheeks are bluish and his gill cover flap is velvety black without the light border common to other sun fishes. He is generally paler than other members of his family, but coloration varies considerably as is to be expected of a species so widely distributed. He is always a handsome fish, the large specimens from deep water, with their copper colored bellies, being especially pleasing to the eye.

No particular type of tackle is required for blue gill fishing. The usual outfit for still fishing consists of a long cane pole, linen or cotton line, and a No. 8 hook. Either a sinker, about a foot above the hook, or a bobber adjusted to the depth of water to be fished, is used as fancy or local custom dictates. A three foot gut leader is advisable for general blue gill fishing and in very clear water, such as is often found in the vicinity of weed beds, a leader is almost necessary to success.

Fine, but not necessarily expensive, tackle adds greatly to the pleasures of blue gill fishing. A springy rod of bamboo, wood or steel, about eight feet in length, and a reel will give one a better understanding of the blue gill's gameness than just yanking them in with a stiff pole, although there is no objection to the latter method if you prefer it.

In any event the blue gill puts up a dandy fight; he does not rush the bait, but takes it rather quietly, but as soon as hooked he starts to run, turning his body sideways to the pull of the line and keeping up the fight longer than the rock bass and some of our other pan fishes. I believe that he is considered the gamest of all small fishes by experienced anglers.

Little need be said of the blue gill's table qualities; except when taken from shallow, weedy ponds he has few superiors in this respect. The United States bureau of fisheries considers him of "unsurpassed table qualities," while Jordan and Evermann state that he is equalled only by the yellow perch among fresh water pan fishes. In the markets the blue gill always finds a welcome and he is easily the most important of all the sun fishes from the commercial standpoint.

Fortunately the blue gill is prolific. As is the custom of his tribe he builds a nest in the spring which he is able to defend against all comers except men and boys with grab hooks. It is only in recent years that the blue gill and his smaller cousins have had any standing in the eyes of the law and the protection they now receive is hardly adequate.

Taking them during the spawning season should be discouraged and the size limits should be local rather than state-wide. We know lakes in the middle west but a few miles apart where the average and maximum sizes of blue gills varies 50 per cent.

As soon as the spawning is finished in the spring, blue gills travel about in schools and the secret of successful blue gilling lies in locating them. They move from place to place, following warm currents during the cold periods and cold ones in mid summer.

In very warm weather they are often found around spring holes or in deep water, but generally blue gill fishermen anchor their boats so as to fish the "drop off" or shelf, at or near the edges of weed beds. Often a school may be located by drifting with the wind and trolling slowly with a long line and hook baited with a worm.

Local conditions have much to do with the movements of schools, but generally a resident will tell you where to anchor for blue gills, even though he may refuse to tell you where his best bass "holes" are located.

Small shiners are the prime blue gill baits in large bodies of water with the night crawler or other plump earth worm a close second; the worm is usually the most taking in small lakes, ponds or quiet streams. For autumn blue gill fishing, the grasshopper and cricket are favorites with many old timers. No. 10 trout flies, with or without a tiny spinner, have accounted for many a nice string of blue gills; try 'em along about dusk.

Lipton, Starting Home, Says He'll Try Again

New York, Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Before sailing today on the White Star liner Baltic, Sir Thomas Lipton told a reporter he would challenge for the cup again, and ten months would have to elapse after the challenge was accepted before there could be another race, which he thought would be in 1922.

NOTES OF THE CUE EXPERTS.

Dave McAndless, former amateur champion, defeated Al Taylor, billiard instructor at the University of Michigan, 300 to 246, in a balkline event which featured the opening program at Emmett Haight's room at 6750 Stony Island avenue. Taylor, who was defeated by McAndless in their last 1 200 point game, has challenged for another, which will be played this week.

Ben Saylor, the veteran billiardist, who passed through Chicago recently, says that young Jake Schaefer is playing phenomenal billiards at San Francisco and is now better than his famous father. The coast fans are picking young Jake to defeat Willie Hoppe.

YANKEES SPLIT WITH BRITISH IN LONDON GAMES

Empire Shows Strong in Relay Events.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The British empire and the United States divided honors at the post-Olympic meet at Queens club today, each winning five events. Three of Great Britain's victories were won by relay teams, representing the whole empire; the high jump, by an Englishman, and the other, the 120 yard hurdles, by a Canadian—Earl Thompson, the Olympic champion.

The mile relay, in which Rudd, the South African, spurted to a spectacular victory by three yards after a nip-and-tuck contest, was the prettiest event of the day.

Lincoln Star in Javelin.

The Americans gave an exhibition of javelin throwing, J. C. Lincoln, New York Athletic club, covering 196 feet 10 inches; Brutus K. Hamilton, University of Missouri, 164 feet 8 inches, and Everett L. Bradley, University of Kansas, 160 feet 10 inches. The Americans also gave an exhibition in pole vaulting, E. E. Meyers, Chicago A. A., and E. J. Jenne, Washington State college, both clearing twelve feet.

The enthusiastic spectators cheered both sides. At the conclusion of the meet the Union Jack and Stars and Stripes were flown side by side.

Paddock Is Improving.

Charles W. Paddock of Los Angeles, the 100 meter Olympic champion, whose inability to take part in the meet today caused much disappointment, is reported much better this evening. The attending physician, however, thinks he should remain in bed for another day or two. It was at one time feared that Paddock was developing pneumonia.

MAN O' WAR SHATTERS WORLD'S TURF RECORD FOR MILE 5 FURLONGS

New York, Sept. 4.—Man o' War, champion 3 year old colt, made a new world's record for a mile and five furlongs race today when he won the Realization stakes, an old turf classic, at Belmont park.

He ran the distance in 2:40 4-5, as against 2:47 3-5, the old track record. The world's record for the distance was 2:42 2-5, made by the English horse, War Mint, carrying seventy-eight pounds, at Hurst Park, England, in 1912.

Man o' War ran at the prohibitive odds of 1 to 100 on, and his only opponent was Hoodwink, at 100 to 1. Man o' War, carried 126 pounds and Hoodwink 116.

FIRST OLYMPIC ATHLETES BACK

New York, Sept. 4.—The first of America's successful Olympic athletes to return home arrived here tonight on the United States army transport Matoika. About half of the Olympic rifle team, headed by Col. William Libbey of Princeton, N. J., and several members of the Olympic bicycle team also were aboard.

Frank F. Loomis, who set a world's record of fifty-four seconds flat for the 400 meter hurdle race, was accompanied by three other members of the Chicago Athletic association, his brother, J. G. Loomis, Sherman G. Landers, and Bernard Bennett. R. W. Harwood, pole vaulter of the Boston A. A., was another returning athlete.

WEST SIDE "Y" TENNIS.

The star local youngster, Ralph Rice, will play G. G. Johnson for the West Side Y. M. C. A. tennis title in the finals at 2 o'clock tomorrow. The doubles honors also will be settled. Semi-finals were played yesterday as follows:

Singles, semi-finals—G. G. Johnson beat Sam Fogelson, 6—2, 7—5. Ralph beat Ciriaco Lallana, 6—0, 6—3.

Doubles, semi-finals—R. Rice and S. Fogelson beat G. G. Johnson and C. A. Alverson, 6—2, 3—6, 6—4. C. Lallana and A. Valentine won by default from G. Zollars and L. Caskey.

PREP GRIDDERS READY TO START FOOTBALL DRILL

City and Suburban Boys Begin Tuesday.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Football candidates in the city high schools will assemble this week in answer to the first call of their respective coaches, schools in both the city and Suburban High school circuits being scheduled to open on Tuesday. For a week or two the work will be mainly a conditioning procedure, but the preps are slated to start active competition by the last week in the month.

This year for the first time in the history of the city league's participation in football one eleven is all that will be permitted to represent an institution. It may be either a heavyweight or lightweight outfit, but a school may not enter two teams in the league.

The rule was made to do away with the evil of excessive training down, which in some cases in past years resulted in boys' fasting for days in order to make the weight limit for a lightweight team, then finishing the season fifteen or eighteen pounds heavier than other lightweight players.

Vardon and Ray Win Again at Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 4.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, British golf stars, in a return exhibition match here today defeated William Creavy and Ernest Ford, local club prof., 4 and 3, in a thirty-six hole contest. Vardon and Ray appeared here earlier in the week, winning two exhibitions from local golfers.

INQUISITIVE FANS

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—The score is tied in the last half of the ninth, with a man on third, and the batter drives the ball into right field. The runner on third scores the winning run. The batter has touched second base and headed for third before the ball is returned to the infield. The shortstop plays on the runner, who gets back to second safely. What would you credit the batter with? A FAN.

Answer—A single was all the batter could get according to section 3a of rule 85.

Gary, Ind.—[To the Editor.]—Runners on second and third. The pitcher throws to the shortstop to catch the runner on second napping, but the umpire rules him safe. A dispute arises with the arbiter. The ball is thrown to the third baseman, who conceals it under his arm. The coacher at third base walks over to the third baseman and takes the ball from under his arm, walks to the bench, and instructs the base runners on second and third to score, which they did, and the umpire ruled them safe. The latter claimed he did not call time. Do these runs count? C. H. S.

Answer—Umpire should have sent the runners back to their bases on account of coacher's interference, because the ball was still in play if time had not been called.

R. H. W., Chicago—You were sole judge whether or not the catcher interfered with the batsman and if the manager did not abide by your decision you should have forfeited the game to the opposing team.

Plano, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—Batter four balls, the catcher missed the ball, and the runner went to second base claimed he was allowed to take as many bases as he could get without being out. The umpire at the plate claimed he was entitled to first base only, and the umpire on bases claimed he was entitled to second base. The runner held second and made the game end 5 to 4 in favor of the Moulders. Your decision will be appreciated. E. D. McNAMARA.

Answer—Umpire at the plate was wrong, as the runner was entitled to as many bases as he could take.

Maibohm

True Artisans mould the coaching of Maibohm cars. The permanent beauty of old school coach work, with square doors which swing on long hand-wrought hinges, gives an everlasting charm to this car whose rugged chassis seems to improve with use. Imagine these appointments in a car of light weight, flexible valve-in-head power range, low maintenance cost, and then marvel at the moderate price of Maibohm—the lightest good six made.

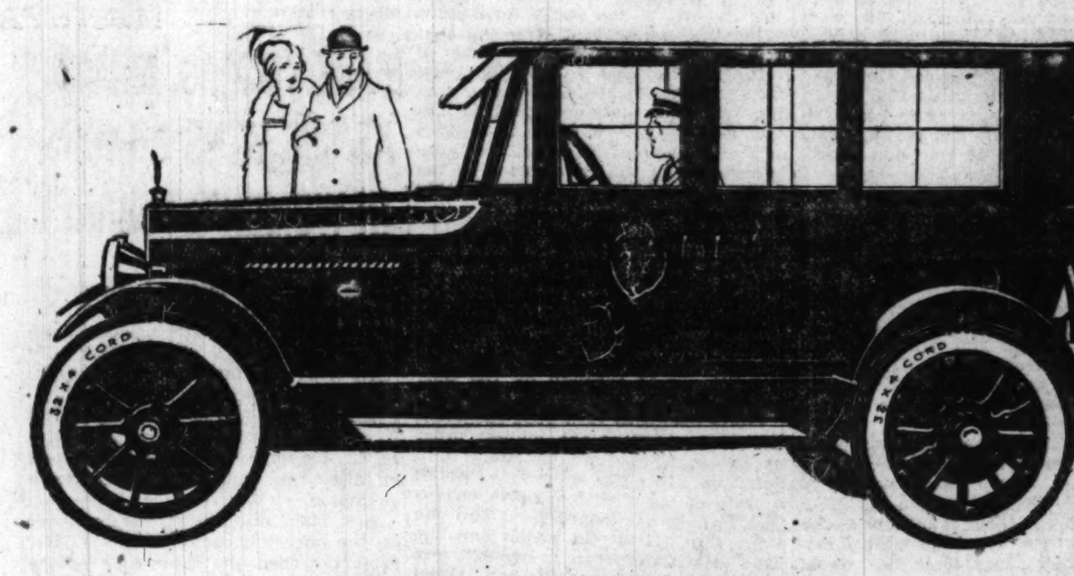
A Rare Sedan Opportunity



ONLY Lexington can now offer this unusual value.

A close connection with body and top builders, as well as with nine other factories specializing in motor car parts, enables Lexington to effect great manufacturing economies.

You get the benefit now—both in the greater value at a substantial saving, and in the higher quality and finer workmanship possible only when everything that enters into the car is under one expert management.

We caution you not to delay. Consider the good business of getting this Sedan now—the value you get, the saving you make, and next year you will not be driving an out-of-date type of car.

The success of this Sedan in the hands of owners is without a parallel. It is lighter and easier handled. Its economy of gas and tires is remarkable. No car anywhere near the price has a finer appearance. In performance it fears no competitor regardless of price.

$300

At its present unraised price, this Sedan at only $300 more than the Lexington Thorobred Sport Model is an extraordinary value. For this small sum you get all the advantages of a Sedan that sets the 1921 style.

Improvements found on no other car make it easier and safer to drive. The Moore Multiple Exhaust System in conjunction with the Lexi-gasifier increases power and saves gas.

The perfect appointments of the interior of this Sedan delight the heart of the most fastidious woman. The head lining is of heavy velour and the upholstery of soft Spanish leather.

There is a great institution behind this car—an institution that is building its greatness upon the enthusiasm of owners—an institution that has developed the manufacture of better grade cars to a fine science, eliminating costly waste and inefficiency for which owners usually pay.

Our allotment of these Sedans is limited—this opportunity is limited. We invite you to call or write at once.

'OUTLAWS' SLUG FIREMAN IN WAR ON RAILROADS

Sabotage Imperils Lives of Passengers.

Another fireman on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad was badly beaten up early yesterday morning when the "outlaw" switchmen renewed their warfare on the regular employés of the road. Several other minor clashes occurred in the freight yards.

The latest victim in the campaign of sabotage was John Jana, who was slugged at Kedzie avenue and Lake street. Although the assault occurred at one of the busiest corners on the west side, a transfer point, and was witnessed by a number of pedestrians, the sluggers escaped and the Warren avenue police reported their inability to make any arrests.

The incident occurred only a few hours after the railroad executives had issued a statement reciting the many acts of violence and sabotage which have occurred during the week and criticizing the inaction of the city and federal authorities to whom numerous complaints have been made.

"Outlaws" Defy Police.

The members of the two "outlaw" unions, the Chicago Yardmen's association and the Chicago Enginemen's association, who participated in the runaway strike six months ago and whom the roads refuse to take back, have openly defied both the rail officials and the city authorities with the ultimatum that "the roads will be glad to take us all back and restore our seniority rights before we are through."

The situation has become so serious that the lives of the passengers on the roads are being endangered nightly and, according to railroad men, is likely to result in open warfare between the regular employés and the "sab cats" with a consequent tieup of traffic unless ample protection is afforded the workers.

More Guards Watch Tracks.

The force of private detectives employed by the St. Paul line has been increased in size and details of police were scattered along the right of way last night to guard the entrances to the elevated tracks. Every precaution possible was taken to prevent the terrorists from carrying out their threats of Saturday night at a meeting in Gazzolo's saloon, at Western avenue and Madison street, to "turn a few more engines loose tomorrow night."

Three or four engines have been seized by the "outlaws" and turned loose to run wild through the freight yards since the renewed warfare started, and on Monday night a locomotive on the Rock Island road narrowly escaped collision with a passenger train.

150 COLLIERIES IDLE, BUT MANY VOTE TO RETURN

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Anthracite production was at its lowest today since the inception of the insurgent "vacation," 150 collieries being in idleness and 140,000 workers away from work, but the back to the mines movement has been so definitely set in motion that union leaders and operators expect a complete breakdown of insurgency next week.

Two thousand men of the Lehigh Valley Coal company, which has been hard hit by the strike, last night voted to return.

The announcement that President Wilson referred the miners' request for a reopening to Secretary Wilson met with favor here, as the miners believe Secretary Wilson, who is an old miner, will give proper consideration to their case.

Much depends on the president's answer, and if he says "yes" there is bound to be an immediate return to work. Union officials fear he will not make answer while so many men are on strike in defiance of his wish.

$40,000 Daylight Holdup in N. Y.; Merchant Slugged

New York, Sept. 4.—Forty thousand dollars—including a $10,000 bill and more than $20,000 in jewelry—was stolen in a ten minute daylight robbery by two gunmen, who beat Philip E. Smith, wealthy merchant, into insensibility in his office here today.

The bandits entered Smith's establishment in West Fifty-third street, just around the corner from Broadway, backed him against the wall, beat him with their revolvers, ransacked the place, and fled.

20 MORE ARMY MEN TO AID IN SCHOOL MILITARY TRAINING

[L. Smith Photo.]

Capt. F. L. Beals, who is in charge of the military training in the Chicago high schools, announced yesterday that Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood had promised to assign eleven commissioned officers and twenty-four sergeants to assist him this term. This is an increase of six commissioned officers and fourteen sergeants. There will be an officer for each division and a sergeant in every school. The government also has promised to issue new uniforms, spiral puttees, and barrack caps instead of campaign hats. Last year 40,000 enrolled for the training. This year, it is estimated, there will be 60,000.

FEW EMPLOYES RETURN TO WORK IN B. R. T. STRIKE

Reported Effort to Wreck Train Near Creek.

New York, Sept. 4.—[Special.]—The strike of the B. R. T. lines settled down to a test of endurance today. Only a handful of employés returned to work in response to the ultimatum of Receiver Garrison. A further slight improvement in service took place, but the surface car operation remained 75 per cent below normal and subway and elevated about 50 per cent of normal.

Receiver Garrison denied that the men who had returned to work numbered 800, as was reported last night. Another B. R. T. official was hopeful that men would flock back before Tuesday noon, which was named in the receiver's ultimatum as their last chance to return to their old jobs and recover their seniority rating.

Apparent Effort to Wreck Train.

An apparent attempt to wreck a train on the West End line near the Coney Island creek was reported this morning. A track walker discovered a plate, which had connected two tracks, broken out of place on a curved embankment at 1:15 a. m., where the loosened rails might have resulted in derailment and a serious wreck. Several trains had evidently passed the spot in safety.

An iron bar eighteen inches in length was found inserted between the track and the guard rail.

One Death from Violence.

The first death due directly to strike violence came today when Frederick Friedman, 17 years old, died in the Kings county hospital. He was a passenger in a Sea Beach train attacked by stone throwing strikers last Tuesday, and his skull was fractured. The condition of John W. Fairbanks, motorman of the train, who had a broken skull, was tonight unchanged.

The highest mark in trolley car operation was reached today at 2 p. m., when 510 cars were in operation. During the rush hour service in normal times the surface cars number from 1,400 to 1,600. Twenty-seven of the more important lines had service, out of a total of seventy-seven trolley lines, several of which are short and unimportant.

When It Pays to Quit.

Crowds which went to the baseball games and made other trips were interested, as the strike breaking conductors and motormen ran their cars on a co-partnership basis, their citizens' clothes sagging with the weight of metal divided among them.

When an official was asked at the B. R. T. offices if he supposed that any of the strike breakers would ask to be retained after the strike, he replied:

"Probably very few. To tell the truth, we expect that most of them will quit when we begin to ask them to turn in the fares."

COOLIDGE NAMES TREASURER AFTER INCUMBENT QUITS

Boston, Mass., Sept. 4.—Gov. Coolidge today appointed James Jackson, former chairman of the New England Red Cross division, as state treasurer, to succeed Fred J. Burrell, who resigned while under investigation.

Pending confirmation, the governor named Secretary of State A. P. Langtry, former Attorney General Bruce Wyman, and John R. Macomber of this city as a committee to run the treasurer's office.

The resignation of Mr. Burrell was the principal topic of discussion in political circles today. Burrell, who was elected on the Republican ticket last November, resigned as a result of a disturbance in the party that followed repeated allegations that he had solicited advertising from banks for an agency which he conducted.

MADE STEEL MAN OF A PROFESSOR; WILL WED HIM

Miss Phyllis Mark, daughter of Clayton Mark of the Chicago Malleable Iron company, will be married on Sept. 27 to William Wyman, it was announced recently. Mr. Wyman, it was learned, was formerly a college professor. Miss Mark, after they became close friends, persuaded him to enter the steel business. The friendship then developed into love.

WIDOW OF HERO WHO ENDED LIFE IS OFFERED AID

The body of John D. Hoar of the Princess Pat regiment, who asphyxiated himself in his apartment at 2940 Prairie avenue because the loss of his legs incapacitated him from earning a livelihood for himself and bride, was taken back to La Salle, Ill., yesterday for burial.

The widow said she had no money for funeral expenses. Mrs. Fred R. Hunt, 6431 North Hermitage avenue, offered to have the body of the soldier buried in her own family lot in Rosehill cemetery, and agreed to pay the expenses.

"I had two boys in the war, and both came home safely," said Mrs. Hunt. "I was so grateful for this that I would be more than willing to do what I could for this soldier who gave so much to his country."

Other offers which were received were from persons willing to give money or otherwise assist in burying the body.

At the inquest the widow testified briefly. She was not questioned at length, as she sobbed violently during the inquest. She told of her husband's melancholy and despondency over his crippled condition, but said that she did not know he contemplated ending his life.

NAVY APPROVES PAY BOOST FOR 286,000 PERSONS

None to Get Less than 5 Per Cent Raise.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 4.—A 5 per cent wage increase was awarded to all classes of civil employés of the navy today by Secretary Daniels. The new scale will go into effect "on the nearest pay day to Sept. 15."

The increase, based on the difference in the advance in cost of living and the congressional bonus authorized since the last readjustment of wages a year and a half ago, affects more than 286,000 naval employés.

Several classes of employés, including practically all the clerical forces and four mechanical trades, will receive increases considerably above the general 5 per cent advance.

Given Half Days Off.

Outside of the increase, the most important provision of the new schedule is a reduction of working hours to four on Saturday, the year round, the employés to be paid for the half day's work at the hourly rate.

While the basic 5 per cent increase does not meet the demands of the employés, which ranged from 25 cents an hour as a minimum general increase to 45 cents for mechanics, the board's report to the secretary declared the scale of pay in the naval establishment was found to be "5 per cent higher, bonus considered, than the wage scale of any other inrustry" without the present increase.

Clerks Are Recognized.

In regard to clerical forces, the board said:

"It is found that the clerical force has been receiving, as compared to the skilled mehanics in the employ of the navy, relatively too low a wage for the duties and responsibilities required of them." Now no clerk will receive "less than the maximum pay of the laborer."

WAITER FALLS TO DEATH.

John P. Lee, a waiter employed in the restaurant in the Northwestern railroad station, died in the Robert Burns hospital yesterday of injuries suffered Friday night, when he fell through a skylight of a poolroom at West Madison and Halsted streets.

Rapid Progress in Construction of Rosehill Mausoleum Addition

The practical and far-sighted business man prepares for every emergency in life. No doubt, upon investigation, you will wish to consider this most important subject.

This addition consists of twenty-two beautiful MEMORIAL ROOMS arranged to meet family requirements.

Erection of the walls is going on rapidly and every effort is being made to complete the building at an early date.

We have found from experience that no building can long endure severe climatic changes without provision for heating, ventilating and proper care.

These features have been provided in our Mausoleum, the perpetual maintenance of which is safeguarded by a Trust Fund exceeding $125,000.00.

As the number of rooms available is limited, an early selection is advisable. In the present building there remain but few family sections and single crypts.

A representative will be at the Cemetery each day to show visitors through the Mausoleum and give further details.
Trust Funds which assure permanent upkeep of Rosehill Cemetery now aggregate $1,400,000.00 and are increasing daily.

LABOR'S MIGHTIEST TASK

WITH the advent of its annual holiday, Labor now faces its mightiest task. It must make THRIFT the keystone of its arch if it hopes to face the uncertainties of the morrow with a heart in which fear and worry have no place.

And yet, how easily will Labor solve its problem of making THRIFT paramount!

Two reasons make this so. First, that Labor, under the harsh spur of war, learned how to save its money and thus insured victory for our cause. And second, Labor today is learning that safe, conservative investments ALWAYS are best for its savings and surplus funds.

Today, hundreds upon hundreds of men who work with their hands are placing their savings through H. O. Stone & Co. in First Mortgage Real Estate Serial Bonds.

Such bonds they know to be SAFE, because secured by First Mortgages on improved Chicago real estate. Banks, insurance companies, and other large investors buy them as a conservative, non-fluctuating source of revenue. The fact that H. O. Stone & Co. invests its own funds in these bonds before offering them to its clients is the strongest possible proof of their safety. Every possible safeguard is thrown around them by H. O. Stone & Co. to make them the ideal investment for those who wish safety, conservatism, strength, and the highest interest return consistent therewith.

Thus is Labor today making provisions for the uncertainties of the morrow. You should investigate these bonds as a form of investment for your funds. We have a plan by which you can purchase them on small monthly payments.

WORK UNDER WAY ON BIG CATHOLIC SCHOOL AT AREA

$10,000,000 University to Cover 1,000 Acres.

"St. Mary's of the Lake university will be the biggest Catholic undertaking ever handled personally by an archbishop—and Archbishop Mundelein, who conceived the idea of making Chicago the great Catholic educational center of the middle west, is handling practically every detail of the project at Area. He is a natural born builder and has the orderly mind of a constructionist."—Joseph W. McCarthy, architect of St. Mary's of the Lake university.

BY AL CHASE.

Work is now under way on a magnificent new addition to Chicago's great group of world famous educational institutions—the $10,000,000 St. Mary's of the Lake university at Area, a Chicago suburb two miles west of Libertyville.

This great school, destined to make Chicago the Catholic educational center of the middle west, according to Joseph W. McCarthy, architect of the new university, is to be completed in from five to six years.

Some idea of the size of the project will be gained when it is known that it has a 1,000 acre campus—which means it is many times greater in area than the University of Chicago, Northwestern university, or any other educational institution in the Chicago district.

Archbishop's Idea.

Archbishop George W. Mundelein is the brain and sinew back of the big project. It was he who conceived the idea of building a great Catholic institution near Chicago, which would be the means of grouping all the Catholic educational activities into one great unit. And after getting his idea under way he kept right on doing the piloting. He keeps in close touch with Architect McCarthy and supervises everything that is done. Every sketch is given his personal study and o. k. before it is put into brick and stone.

It was the archbishop's idea to have the entire group designed in the New England colonial style of architecture. with red brick and white stone trimmed buildings, and to have a harmonious, orderly group of structures. It also was his idea to have a campus big enough to care for the future growth of centuries instead of merely fifty or a hundred years.

The university will have a two years' philosophy course and a four years' theology course, making a six years' course in all. It will receive its students from the Quigley Preparatory seminary. About seventy-five priests will be ordained annually. When completed it will care for about 550 students and a faculty of fifty.

Work is now under way on the philosophy unit, comprising eight buildings, to cost $3,000,000, comprising a chapel, lecture hall, dormitory, convent, refectory, storage house, power house, and infirmary.

The next unit will be the theology group and the last the administration unit, comprising the library, administration building, gymnasium, and auditorium. There will be twenty-three buildings when the university is completed.

Will House Religious Orders.

Several religious orders, the Dominican, Jesuits, and others, ultimately will have quarters on the campus. De Paul university and other Catholic educational institutions in Chicago and vicinity will become affiliated with St. Mary's, in time making it the mother body of all Catholic school activities in this district.

Although St. Mary's is talked of as a new institution, it is really the bringing back to life of a famous old Catholic school. Bishop Quarter, the first Catholic bishop of Chicago, founded St. Mary's of the Lake university a year or two after his arrival in Chicago in 1844. It flourished until the civil war and then lapsed, although the charter was never revoked. The old charter has been used for the big new university up in Lake county.

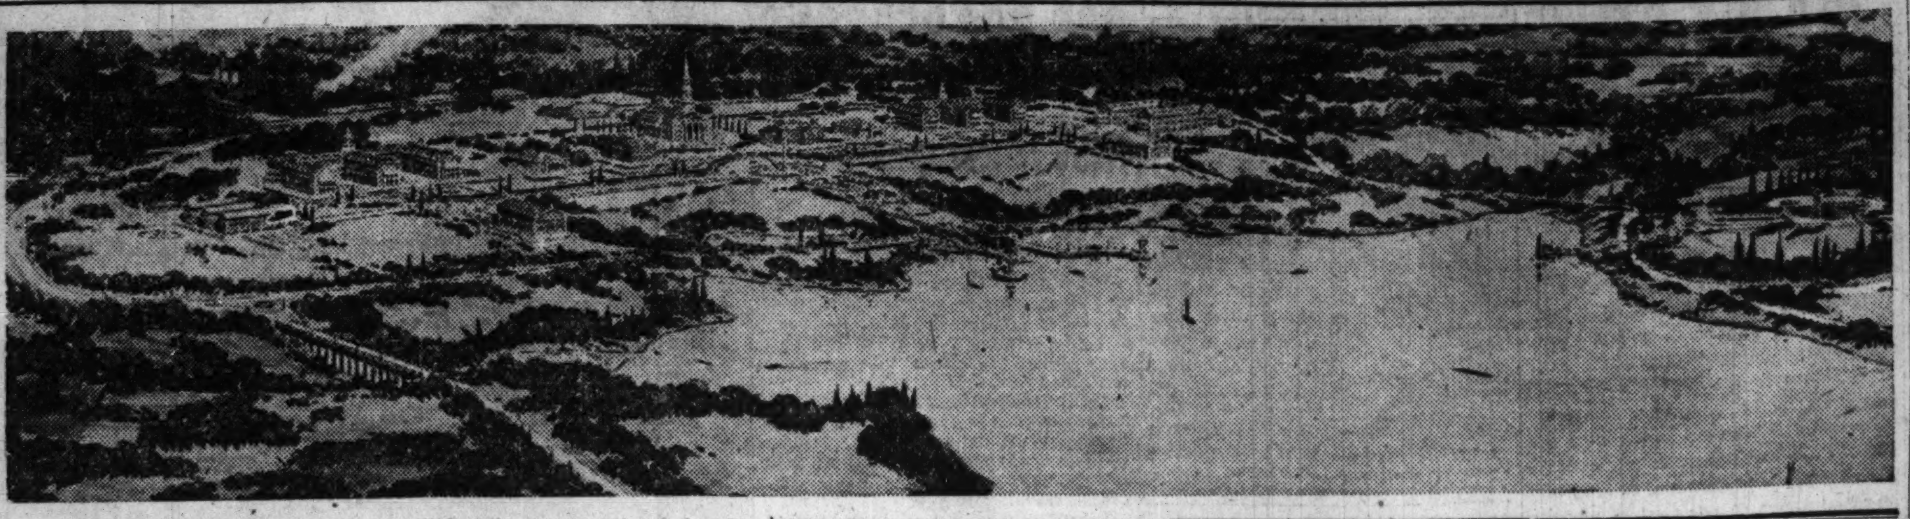
ADDRESS B O 518, TRIBUNE



A CHAPEL which is practically a replica of the Congregational church at Lyme, Conn., will be the keynote of the group of buildings of St. Mary's of the Lake university, now building at Area, designed by Architect Joseph W. McCarthy. All of the structures will face east and overlook the mile by a mile and half lake. The administration building will be just south of the chapel and the library just north, both being adaptations of Independence hall, Philadelphia.

Still farther south and north will be twin lecture halls. The big three winged buildings south and north of the lecture halls are to be dormitories. All of these buildings face east on the broad avenue running north and south in front of the group.

At the south end of this esplanade will be the convent building and at the north end will be the faculty house. The gymnasium will be just in front of the south dormitory and the auditorium will be across the avenue and in front of the north dormitory.

A broad series of terraces will slope down from the chapel to the boathouses and lake. There will be a large bathing beach. The service buildings, laundries, greenhouses, power houses, etc., will be at the southwest corner of the campus. Ground was broken for the new university on June 10. Franklin H. Coney, structural engineer, and G. W. Hubbard, mechanical engineer, are associated with Mr. McCarthy.

1,111 ACRES TO BE SUBDIVIDED IN DU PAGE COUNTY

Here's Dupage county with two big subdivision deals. John S., Henry C., and Howard Phipps of New York, who have owned 911 acres of land just west of Clarendon Hills, on the Burlington, at the station of Greggs, for thirty years, have sold 580 acres of it to Arthur T. McIntosh through Raymond E. Herman for a reported $175,000.

The remaining 331 acres will be taken over later. Mr. McIntosh plans to subdivide the entire 911 acres into lots and one-half, one, and five acre tracts. The property is on both sides of the railroad and west of the Hinsdale Golf club.

The other Dupage county deal is farther north. Charles W. James of Charles W. James & Co. has bought from Waldemar Schoene of Elmhurst, through Hipple & Clarke, two parcels of land, with a total of 200 acres, between East Lombard and Westmore on the third rail electric interurban, at a reported $400 an acre. Mr. James will subdivide at once.

Leases Film Row Corner for 10 Years—$320,000

Moses A. Levy has leased from Ralph Olmstead the two story building at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Tenth street for ten years from Nov. 1 at a term rental of $320,000. The owner will spend about $150,000 in remodeling the building. The Hool Realty company represented Mr. Olmstead and Robert White & Co. the lessee.

Mr. Levy has since leased a portion of the space to the Goldwyn Distributing corporation at an annual rental of $19,200. Other deals for the balance of the space are pending. The entire building will be used by film companies.

BOOK SHOP FOR MADISON STREET

Madison street, between Clark and Wells, is rapidly chirking up. Now it's going to have a book shop. The Charles T. Powner company, which operates two large second hand and new book stores in the loop, has leased a 19x100 shop and basement in the remodeled Vogelsang restaurant building at 173-181 West Madison street, from John Vogelsang, through E. F. Keebler & Co., agents for the building, for ten years from Sept. 1, at a term rental of $100,000.

This is on the site of the proposed Blackhawk hotel, which Mr. Vogelsang has postponed erecting for at least ten years. The Powner company's other book shops are at 37 North Clark street and 26 East Van Buren street.

Insurance Company Plans West Side Office Building

Belief that the Ogden avenue extension and the Randolph street widening are going to make the district about Union park a business center with a future has led the Public Life Insurance Company of Chicago, an Illinois corporation, to purchase the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Sheldon street, 75x131, as the site for a $150,000 building to house its general offices, now at 108 South La Salle street.

Architect Paul Gerhardt will draw plans for a six story building, but work is not expected to start until conditions improve. The site is occupied by three old residences which were not considered in the purchase. The property was bought from Dr. J. R. Davey and D. K. Nathan for a reported $25,000 cash.

B. F. Nicholson represented the Public Life Insurance company and W. S. Booth of Percy Q. Cook & Co. represented the sellers.

BUBBLY CREEK'S FUNERAL TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY

Taps for Bubbly Creek. Chicago's most notorious and also most highly scented bit of waterway is going to be buried at last. Services will be held, with appropriate music and speeches, next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

At that hour Charles G. Wacker, head of the Chicago plan commission and members of the sanitary district, armed with spades, will dig up the first bit of earth in old man Bubbly's grave. And then a big steam shovel will take a hand in the ceremony and dirt will fly.

The digging will be to make a temporary channel to accommodate the alleged waters of Bubbly Creek until a big conduit can be laid in the dry bed of the creek. The old creek will then be filled in and Thirty-ninth street will be opened up from Halsted street to Ashland avenue—a first step in the big lake to zoo project by which Thirty-ninth street will become one of Chicago's great thoroughfares.

Both Gov. Lowden and his honor have been invited to come and wield shovels, but Chairman J. F. Cornelius chairman of the publicity committee, was pessimistic about their coming.

"They probably would wield 'em all right," he said, "but not on the surrounding real estate. I don't believe they'll come."

A big parade will tour the central manufacturing district and other parts of the south side, starting from Western avenue and Thirty-ninth street at 1:30 p. m.

Charles G. Mollan of J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. and president of the West Thirty-ninth Street Improvement association, is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Warning!

If you don't hang a sign "closed for the day—gone to the big show" on your office door next Thursday and beat it for the Ravisloe Country club you're going to miss the best annual outing the Chicago Real Estate board ever had—if present plans go through.

The real estate board's special train will leave the Randolph street station of the Illinois Central at 10:40 a. m., stopping at Van Buren two minutes later; at Hyde Park (Fifty-third street station) at 10:52; Sixty-third street at 10:57, and arriving at Homewood station at 11:41. Motorists are advised to go straight out Western avenue to the club—paved all the way.

Be sure and advise Secretary Herbert A. Cole if you're going so as to make the work of the committees easier.

Portage Park

MANISTEE CO., MICHIGAN

One Night's Ride From Chicago

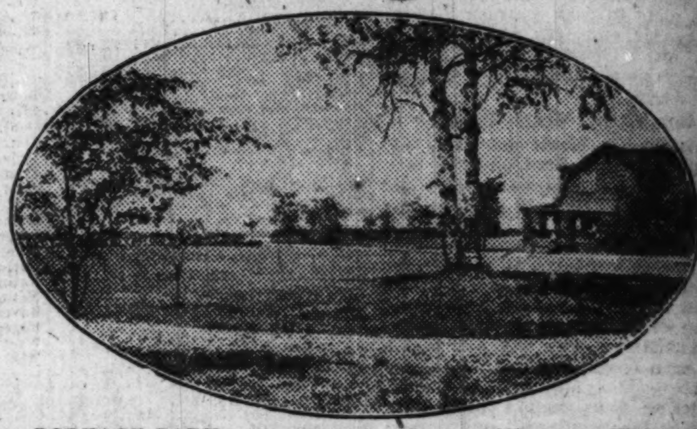
Nature's Most Favored Spot

Pleasure or Profit

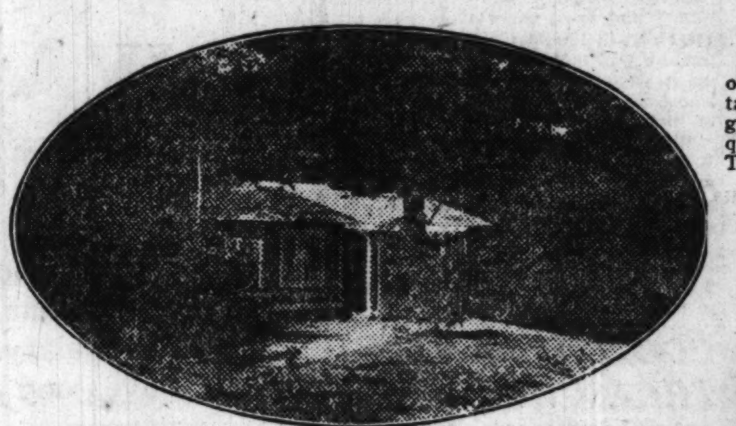
In a Summer Cottage — In a Paying Oil Well

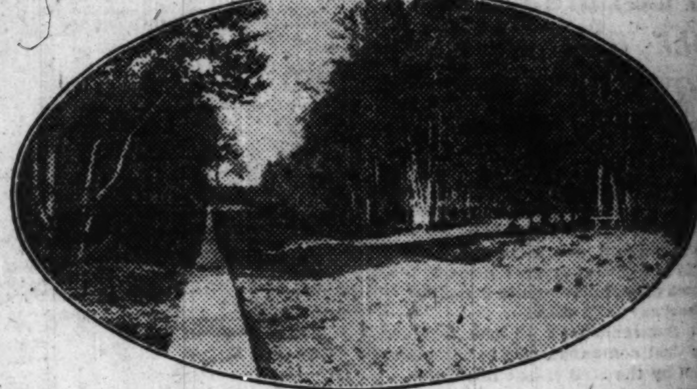
Michigan is a State of beautiful lakes. The most attractive is Portage Lake, four miles long and two wide. It opens directly into Lake Michigan. Lake steamers entering through the Government built Channel find here a land-locked harbor par excellence. It is fed by springs. No streams wash sediment into it. Its limpid waters are ideal for bathing, boating and fishing.

Lying along and around PORTAGE LAKE, washed by its waters on one side and by Lake Michigan on the other, is PORTAGE PARK, with its hills and woods, its fruits and flowers, its grassy stretches and beautiful scenery. Blessed by a most desirable climate, it is a Natural Summer Paradise.



PORTAGE PARK covers an area of over 1,000 acres. Thousands of dollars have already been spent to supplement its natural advantages. There are automobile roads, a well-kept golf course and playgrounds, miles of plank and cement walks, an excellent hotel, an adequate dock, many beautiful cottages and other attractive features. These improvements are constantly under way.





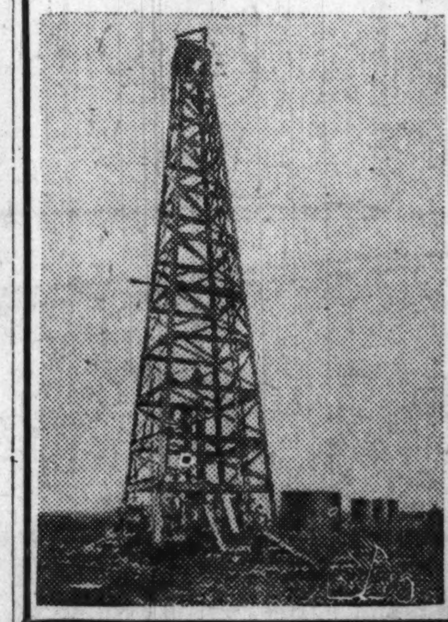
PORTAGE PARK is in Manistee County, famous for its productive orchards and small fruit farms. Growing wild throughout the Park are found raspberries, elderberries, strawberries and juniper berries. Many of the lots offered have valuable timber and will support profitable fruit trees.

ARTESIAN WATER, pure, cool and sparkling, in many sections of PORTAGE PARK bubbles forth with a pressure sufficient to raise it to the second story of buildings.

MANY EXCELLENT PEOPLE delight to spend their summers at PORTAGE PARK. The hotel and cottages are inhabited by business and professional men of the highest type. Many professors from our colleges and universities make this their summer home.

Names of the excellent neighbors you will have at Portage Park furnished on request.

PORTAGE PARK can be reached by boat, rail and auto. Beautiful drives extend from it in all directions. The steamers of the Michigan Transit Company touch at Portage Park and Onekama, a thriving village on PORTAGE LAKE. Some of the finest fruit which reaches your table is raised nearby and loaded through the warehouse at Onekama for the Chicago markets.



Mineral Resources

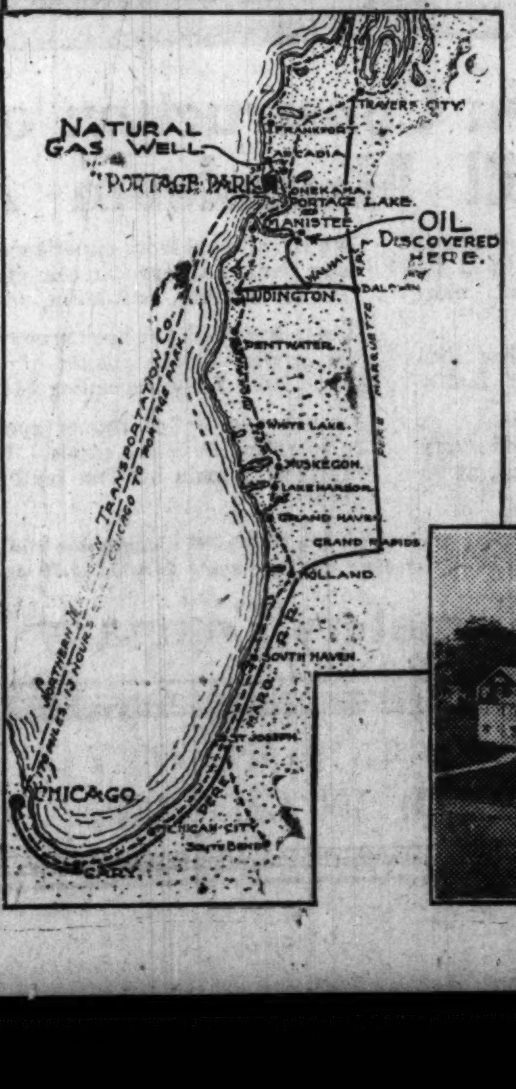
As though she could not do enough for this wonderland of beauty and abundance, Nature seems to have stored beneath its surface minerals of enormous value.

EVIDENCE: In Portage Park is a gas well drilled about six years ago to a depth of only 600 feet. It produces gas under good pressure. Nearby gas comes from an artesian well in such volume that it can be lighted and makes a considerable blaze. At Manistee, ten miles away, are many excellent salt wells. Oil has been found there.

At East Lake, about twelve miles away, oil was found several years ago. Right now a producing well there is capped, while oil companies are obtaining leases as rapidly as possible. County records show this. In fact, the indications are all present and there is reason to believe that oil and other minerals underlie PORTAGE PARK in paying quantities.

A Test Well

On the strength of these encouraging prospects and the advice of experts the Company will drill a deep test well on the land now offered for sale, with the expectation of discovering oil. In accordance with the terms of the contract each purchaser of a lot or tract will participate in all profits thus secured.



How You Share in the Enterprise

Purchasers of summer home sites in PORTAGE PARK have paid as high as $1,000 for a single lot and are more than satisfied. You are now offered neighboring lots at a much lower price and with speculative features which we believe unique and greater than anything of a similar nature ever proposed.

To the first one hundred purchasers who acquire lots within the next 30 days we will furnish a lot in this finest of all summer resorts approximately 50x125 feet in size (some lots bordering on boulevards are irregular in shape) for the sum of $125; larger tracts in proportion. WITH EACH $125 PURCHASE YOU ACQUIRE AN UNDIVIDED INTEREST IN AND TO THE OIL AND MINERAL RIGHTS ON A TRACT OF APPROXIMATELY 500 ACRES, OF WHICH YOUR LOT IS A PART. Consider these facts:

1. The lot alone is now more than worth the price as a summer resort cottage site. Will increase in value as improvements are made.
2. Many of the lots carry timber worth the total purchase price.
3. The owner of each lot has an interest in any and all OIL or other minerals underlying the whole surrounding tract. Prices on lease rights alone run into fabulous figures when OIL is discovered. Make your own calculations of possible profits.
4. You can't lose any way you look at it. TO ABSOLUTELY INSURE YOUR INTERESTS, the Company must make the test well within a time specified or pay you a cash penalty. This is covered by contract. Even then you own the lot free and clear.
5. You are dealing with a thoroughly responsible company managed by men who have been in business for a lifetime. They own and operate lake boat lines and great warehouses and have other extensive business interests. The development of Portage Park goes forward with the same business-like precision that characterizes all of their other enterprises.
6. This calls for quick action on your part. When this first block of 100 lots is snapped up the price on the balance will be much higher. Thirty days is soon past. These lots will go like the proverbial "hot cakes." Send in the coupon below before you lay this paper down.

RESERVE SHOWS GROWING CROP CREDIT DEMAND

The increasing demand for credit as the crop moving season advances, together with the call for funds for autumnal business, is evidenced in the statements of the federal reserve banks, issued yesterday. The consolidated statement of the twelve institutions shows a sharp increase in loans and a rather large expansion in note circulation. The loan expansion is chiefly presented by borrowings on commercial paper.

That the banks are making every effort to meet legitimate demands for credit is shown from the fact that purchases of bills in the market declined only moderately. Ordinarily the banks curtail such purchases rather decidedly when loans advance sharply. In meeting the demands of last week the reserve position was rendered somewhat less favorable than in the preceding week. Further evidence of the need for funds lay in a moderate decline in deposits.

Loans Up $77,800,000.

Total loans to the member banks increased $77,800,000, those on government obligations advancing $18,062,000 and those on commercial paper expanding $59,738,000. Bills bought in the market declined $8,464,000, so that total bills on hand increased $69,336,000. With the expansion in loans, the member banks increased their reserve account by $24,-000,000.

Federal reserve note circulation expanded $28,912,000. Gross deposits declined $26,800,000, government deposits receding 11,449,000. Total earning assets increased $75,264,000. Finally, gold reserves declined $9,515,000 and total reserves receded $9,870,000.

The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and note liabilities combined fell to 42.6 from 43.2 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, fell to 46.6 from 47.7 per cent in the preceding week.

New York Loans Jump.

The statements of the New York and Chicago federal reserve banks were in line with the consolidated report. The New York bank increased its loans to the member banks by $55,302,993, but rediscounted $47,500,000 of this increase with other federal reserve banks. Loans on government obligations expanded $28,-000,967, while loans on commercial bills increased $26,317,026. With the loan expansion, the member banks increased their reserve account by $1,735,599.

Federal reserve note circulation expanded $10,674,270 and gross deposits increased $9,502,716. Gold reserves increased $2,987,894 and total reserves expanded $5,019,984. Total earning assets increased $3,121,664.

The ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined was 38.6, compared with 38.5 per cent in the preceding week.

High Records in Chicago.

The Chicago federal reserve bank report showed considerable increases in both loans and note circulation, both items attaining new high records. Rediscounts now total $448,654,996 and note circulation is $551,714,080. Total loans increased $10,090,641, those on government obligations receding $3,006,940, but those on commercial bills expanding $13,-097,581. Bills bought increased $2,997,-031, so that total bills on hand expanded $13,088,611.

Note circulation expanded $7,785,165. Despite the increase in loans, the member banks reduced their reserve account by $1,283,657. Total deposits increased $3,229,667, this being accounted for principally by an increase in government deposits of $7,973,519. Total gold reserves increased slightly, but total reserves declined somewhat. The increase in total earning assets was $13,074,611. The bank added $491,662 to its undivided profits.

The ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined fell to 42.36 from 43.02 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, fell to 45.62 from 46.58 per cent in the preceding week.

Clearing House Banks.

The New York clearing house banks further increased their excess reserves by $11,709,770, making this item now $25,-942,820, but this improvement was the result principally of an increase of $8,764,-000 in their reserve account of the Federal Reserve bank. Loans declined $21,-972,000. Net demand deposits receded $21,323,000, but time deposits increased $2,756,000. Government deposits declined $25,431,000.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The Texas company is understood to be considering an additional offer of stock, which probably will be offered to stockholders in January at an attractive price. It is reported the increase will be 20 to 30 per cent of the present outstanding stock, which would mean about $26,000,000.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Sept. 1, 1920, by 197 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $1,058,682,000, compared with $1,051,350,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,058,682,000, compared with $852,115,000 reported by twenty-three clearing houses for the corresponding week of last year.

Failures and liabilities are still on the ascending scale, the total for August—833, with $26,201,733 of liabilities—being 5.8 and 21 per cent, respectively, heavier than for July; 42 and 329 per cent, respectively, heavier than in August a year ago, and as regards the number, the largest reported in any month since October, 1918. As regards liabilities, the August total is, with the exception of June, when failure liabilities were swelled by a heavy raw silk trade suspension, the largest reported since December, 1915.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

Hog receipts the closing day of the week at 2,000 were among the smallest on record, almost too small to establish quotations. With good shipping orders prices advanced 10@25c, the day's top at $16.25 being the highest since Aug. 9. About half the regular packers were out of the trade.

The week's arrivals of 10,000 hogs, barring the strike period last April, were smallest since last September. The estimated average weight of 253 lbs was 1 lb lighter than previous week and 3 lbs lighter than a year ago, when they were unusually heavy.

Better grades of corn fed steers closed at the highest point since January, with a top during the week of $18. Poorer grades of cattle, including butcher stock, closed largely 50c lower for the week. Lambs closed $1.00@1.50 lower than previous Saturday, with sheep off 50@75c.

Tomorrow—Labor day—will be a holiday at the Chicago stockyards. Everything arriving that day will be counted in with Tuesday's receipts, which are estimated at 28,000 cattle, 32,000 hogs, and 30,000 sheep.

Planning Ahead

Regardless of conflicting opinions, and the present aspect of prices in some lines, there is no question but what this country is in for a well sustained period of manufacturing activity, and that, before long, a large percentage of plant owners will require more capacity to turn out their product.

Under these circumstances, it is the part of wisdom for such concerns to consider now the preparation of building plans from an engineering standpoint, so that they will be in a position to take immediate action, and avoid the delays that will otherwise be experienced.

Also where financing is required, it can be more promptly accomplished with definite plans in hand.

We recommend to far-seeing manufacturers, therefore, that they take up now the study of probable requirements, with a view to having plans prepared for eventual plant extensions.

This is a field of labor in which the value of our services has been thoroughly demonstrated, and if you are the man responsible for next year's production, it will be well for you to have a talk with us.

WHEN BUYING AN APARTMENT BUILDING

Find out if the Construction was supervised by a registered Architect. A properly Constructed building will pay larger dividends.

This apartment building pays 30% net on the $30,000 cash equity asked on the $80,000 price. AN INVESTMENT OF THIS CHARACTER WOULD BE A PROFIT TO YOU. The above building is located on the North Shore within two blocks of the Howard Ave. Express Station of the N. W. L. There are 12 Four Room Apartments; 3 Five Room Apartments and 5 private garages. The building is three years old. We will gladly show this apartment building to you at any time.

A shrewd Real Estate Investor looks first to the Architecture and the efficient construction of the building built or purchased.

Mortgage Buyers

Here Is a Self-Evident Example of "Opportunity"

When the highest type of First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds, originally made to net 6%, are being offered to net 7%, it should require no argument to convince investors that here is something particularly choice.

But when, in addition, these are Bonds made at valuations which have since materially increased, then every right thinking Mortgage Bond investor should purchase or reserve as large an amount as possible.

Particularly so when 7% interest on better First Mortgage Bonds may be only temporary.

They have stood every test

Efficient transmission of power from the Main Drive to every wheel in the plant is the crucial factor in all industrial plants. Production requirements today demand the utmost from each machine.

Every item of cost, whatever the product, is too high to permit of experiment. The superintendent must know to a certainty that his belts are right to the last essential. His men are accountable to him and he to his manager for the record of each machine.

Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belts in every instance have established their individual superiority, whatever the test. Whether it has been to carry a greater load, to turn more lathes to reduce slow-downs, to increase speed or to give longer service, they have surmounted every problem without exception.

The expert worker at his machine is, in the last analysis, the accurate judge as to comparative performance. He is the man to make the test, his is the decision that counts. Watching his machine hour after hour, day after day, he knows to a piece the exact number of units produced. It is a matter of hard facts and cold figures that Imperial Inner-Locked Ibeco Belts have invariably won his confidence and preference on the practical basis of increased out-put.

The NEEDLE TOWER GHOST by Robert Welles Ritchie

A Voice Out of the Night: "This Is the Hour I Died" Nothing More; What Was It?

HE was called "Pee-wee" Olmstead by the men in the downtown real estate field who occasionally came across the devious trail of this stunted little individual, with the face of a complacent mouse. Olmstead was counted rich and eccentric; he had made his money through speculation in South street lofts and sailors' boarding houses. In and out through the crooked streets at the toe of Manhattan's boot Olmstead had bitten his little mouse runs, always with profit, until finally he aspired high and came to his great adventure.

The single day in the life of Pee-wee Olmstead that is important for the uses of this narrative was the one when he attended a meeting of a certain board of directors. Darius C. Olmstead was of that board—or thought he was, when unobtrusively he slid into a chair in a circle of financial giants. Nearly all his money had gone to buy for him the high honor of this chair at a directors' table. Great pride was his; at last he was come to his full stature and could play the high game with men whose names rang the bullseye bell in the city's real estate target.

But on this day of triumph the little South street broker had not smoked his cigar down to the first fall of the ash when he got a shock—a most nerve jangling shock. The secretary of the corporation read a report of the reorganization of the body through a holding corporation. All directors of the original company became directors of the holding corporation—save only Darius C. Olmstead. He simply wasn't mentioned. Adoption of the report went through with a bang, and Olmstead was dimly aware of a sweetly purling voice in his ear which explained in syrupy phrase all the whys and wherefores of that missing name of Olmstead in the new directorate.

Pee-wee listened without comment, accepted the ten dollar bill due him for attendance upon the meeting and went out into the whirl of the street. When he closed the door of the directors' room behind him Pee-wee's face still bore a quaint resemblance to a mouse—but a mouse backed into a corner and waiting with bared teeth to snap at the smiting paw. The giants about the directors' table, having eliminated the upstart pygmy, straightway forgot his existence, and in the course of time, three hundred artisans began putting into terms of structural steel and hollow tile their bold dream. After three years the Needle Tower stood complete in all its seven hundred feet of majesty—the city's greatest skyscraper.

On a blustering winter night when the ghost fingers of the snow were painting the towers of Broad and Wall streets in a Doré phantasy of unworldly blacks and whites, Miss Dot Fontaine sat at the local desk and Miss Clarice Pixley on the adjoining stool before the long distance switchboard—two night patrols over the telephone company's Broad exchange. The silence of a cemetery was in the vast room where rank upon rank of switchboards brooded at rest from the day's uproar. The first bell of Trinity's midnight chime sounded muffled through the swirling snow. A little light gleamed over Miss Fontaine's desk and one of the close set metal bibs dropped noiselssly. Hardly lifting her eyes from her book, the girl plugged in.

"Num-bah?" Then a clear, strong voice deliberately enunciating:

"This is the hour I died."

A click in Miss Fontaine's ear, denoting broken connection. Just those six words spoken with grave emphasis—then silence.

Miss Fontaine was a very self possessed young person, else she would not have been a telephone girl. But at those words coming out of the snowy dark, with no prelude and no postscript of explanation, she looked up sharply at the rows of metal bibs before her to find there and challenge the speaker. A little furrow bit into the smooth line between her eyebrows.

"Say—these kidders!" she complained aloud.

Within a stone's throw of the telephone exchange, but where no stone thrown could hit him, Michael Trist, night engineer of the Needle Tower, sat in a broken backed swivel chair under a single strong electric bulb, and laboriously studied Karl Marx on the futility of law. Michael Trist was in his proper subterranean domain of engine and dynamo eighty feet below the level of Broad street, and with nothing between him and the quicksands of a glacial yesterday but the four foot cofferdam of reinforced concrete at his back. Before him, on either side, the blue gray monsters of steam and electricity purred their slave's song. Here the black face of the fire box, flame streaked; there the springing arch of a dynamo shield lit by the flickering blue flames of electricity in the storing. A gnomes' cavern, this.

The hands of the brass inset clock perched among the gauges of the triple boilers joined at 12. A telephone bell—the "house bell"—clucked stridently. Trist nearly fell out of his chair; but habit spurred him even over the shock of surprise, and he hurried over to put the receiver to his ear.

"Yes, sir?" queried Michael Trist. Then a clear, strong voice deliberately enunciating:

A click. Silence.

"Name of Saint Savior!" whispered Trist. He stood with the receiver jammed to his ear, eyes staring, jaw dropped. Then in a fury he banged the receiver hook in staccato tattoo.

"Hullo—Hullo!" (Bang—bang—bang) "Hullo, I say. Who is ut dead?" No answer. The disciple of Karl Marx shook. Sweat dropped from his eyebrows. A cold hand massaged his spine. He tiptoed back to his chair, and sat there glowering at the dull glint of nickel which marked the telephone. Then suddenly he bounded to the door which opened on to the circular staircase leading to higher levels, and threw a lock and bolt on it. When the day engineer came at seven o'clock, Trist babbled a ghostly tale.

Midnight again in the shadowed loft of the Broad telephone exchange. Promptly at the stroke of twelve Miss Fontaine plugged in for a call—

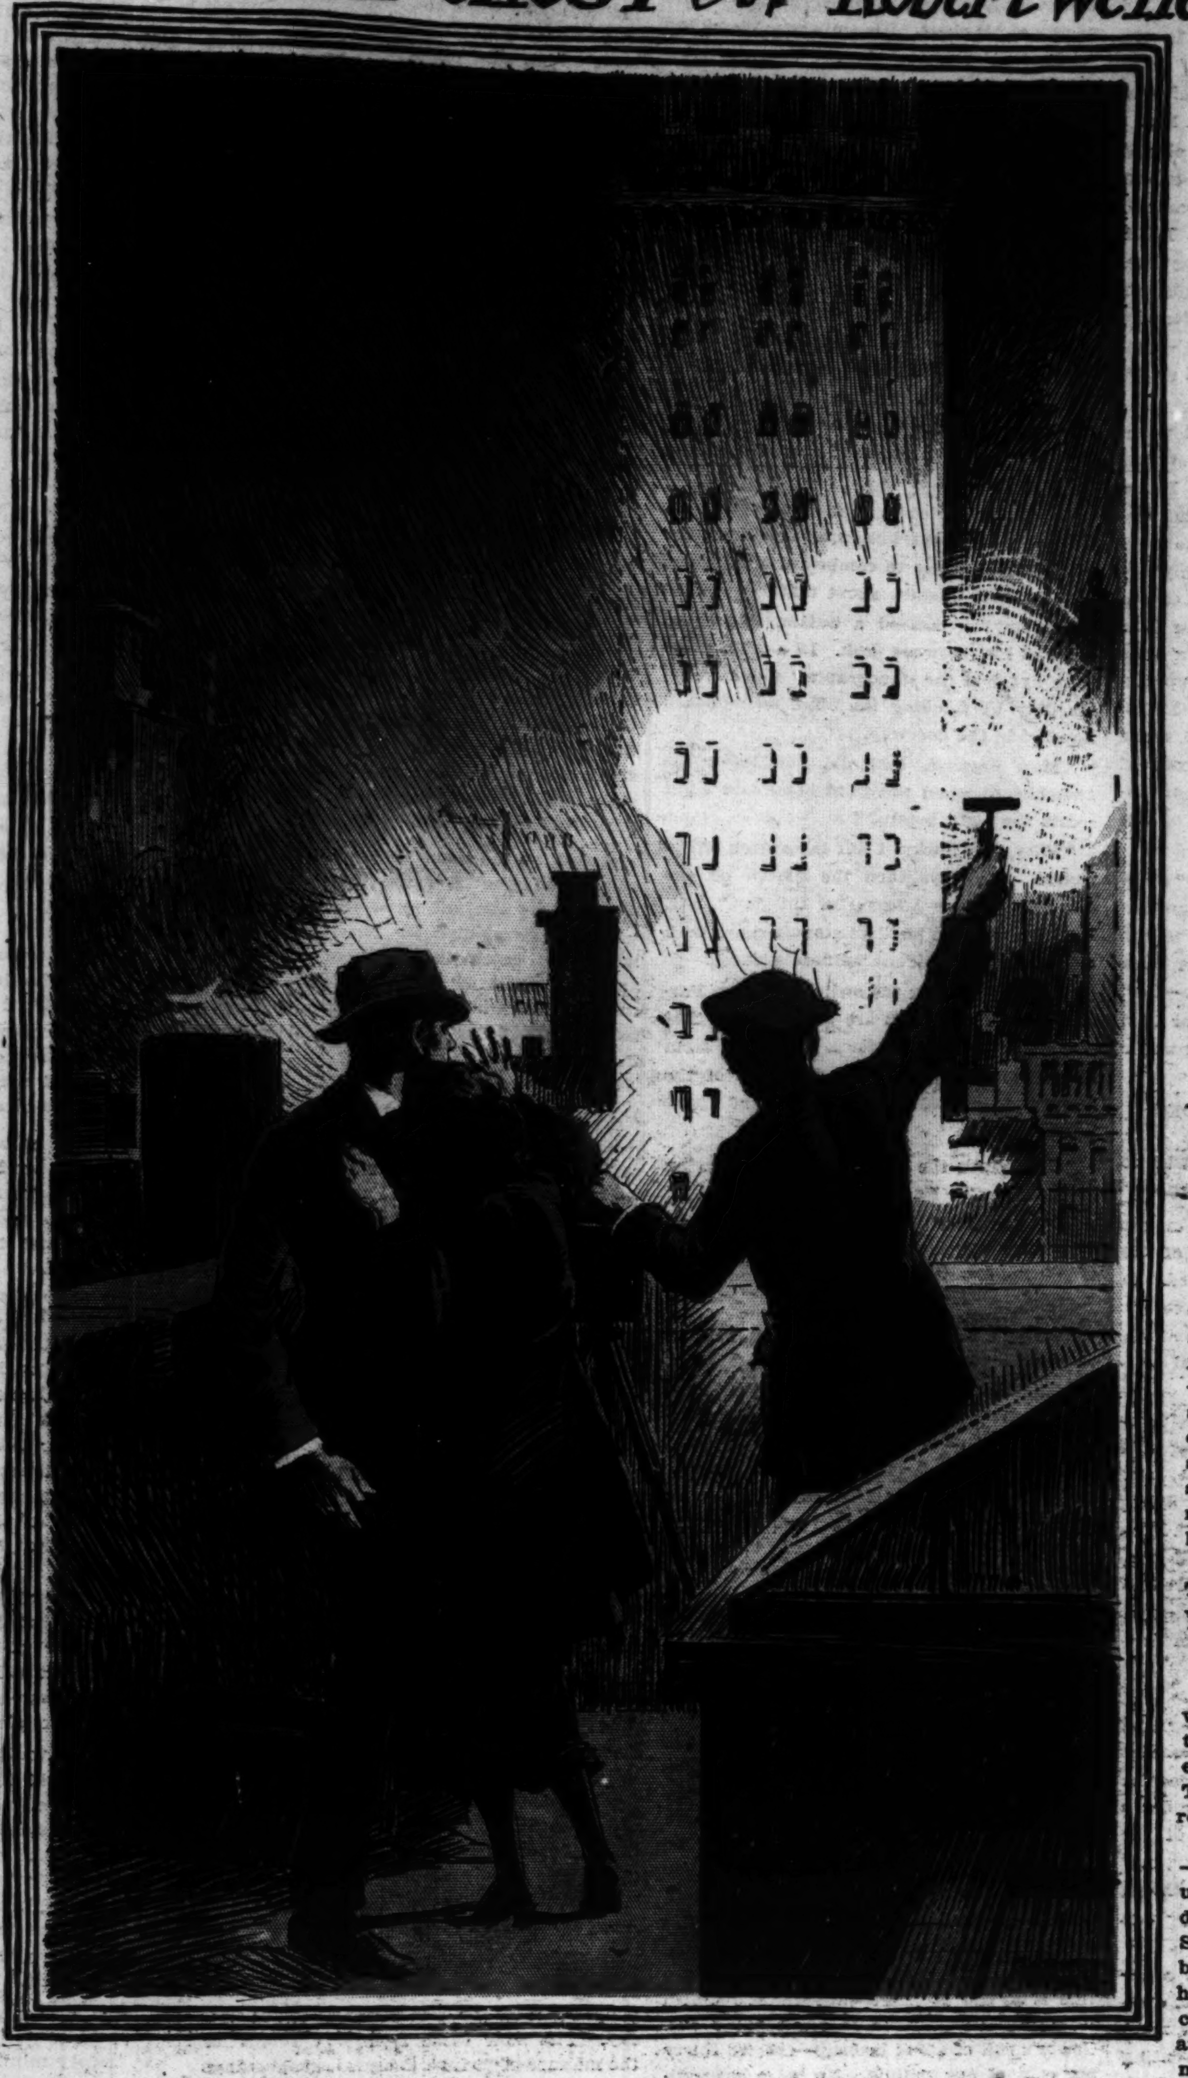
"This is the hour I died."

"Heavens!" The girl jumped as if a mouse had hurdled her lap. Then with vicious stabs she pumped her connecting plug back and forth in the socket of the ghostly connection.

"Hullo—Hullo—Hullo-loah! You!"—

"What's matter, dearie?" Miss Pixley was sympathetic.

"This kidder's gone the limit." A danger-



Bang . . The flashlight made day for an instant. "O, my God, I saw it!" The telephone girl buried her face on the reporter's shoulder, shuddering and sobbing.

ous light lay in Miss Fontaine's eyes, and her mouth was drawn into a wicked little line as she revealed to her companion the prodigy of two succeeding nights. "But," she concluded, "his numbah's Broad nine-nine-nine-nine, if he thinks he can pull this rough stuff without being reported. Lessee——" she thumbed a directory by her side, "O, here he is: Carhart, Lucky, and Carhart; sixteen Broad street. Why, say, that's the Needle Tower right down the street a little way. What d'yuh know about that?"

"What would a kidder be doing in the Needle Tower at midnight, dearie?" Miss Pixley queried. Her companion shivered and turned two very round eyes upon her.

"Say, girlie, I don't like the sound of this business. It's spooky. 'Minds me of one of these cabinet spirits—Old Doc. Cushman and Phoebe and Alice Carey—you know, Little Bright Eyes the Indian maiden leading Doc. Cushman down to say to his granddaughter she'll find the family jewels hid under the wood pile. 'This is the hour I died'—gee! A report to the day manager before I go off tomorrow."

It was two minutes after midnight when Patrolman Hannigan of the Old Slip station turned the corner of Beaver into Broad street. He heard a grating and muffled metallic purring coming from below the sidewalk. Two iron traps swung suddenly upward and outward under the thrust of the curved strut of an ash hoist. Before ever the elevator reached sidewalk level a man leaped from it and went charging up the street. Patrolman Hannigan recovered himself, pursued and caught Michael Trist, night engineer of the Needle Tower, in front of the subtreasury. The man, in a folly of terror, pointed back to the dim plinth of the Needle Tower.

"This hour I die! This hour I die!" Hannigan's prisoner screamed as he stumbled in the patrolman's grip on the way to the station house. The bleak cliffs on either hand hurled back an answering moan, "Die—die!"

SKYSCRAPER GHOST INTRUDES

And Sends Engineer of Needle Tower to Bellevue with Interesting Delusion.

The Orb had not been many hours on the street when the phone on the desk of the Evening Breeze's city editor sounded. A girl's voice, which at first vigorously protested against identifying itself, recounted the strange tale of a ghost voice heard at midnight in the Broad exchange—

"Yes, the call came from the Needle Tower—What's that?—O, I wouldn't dare; I'd lose my job if I told you.—Wha' say? TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS! Well, listen; you mail that twenty-five to Miss Dot Fontaine, numbah five-one-five Shadydell avenue, the Bronux, and don't never breathe that name to nobody. Now lis-ten—that numbar what the ghost called from is—ready?—Broad, nine-nine-nine-nine. So there."

The offices of Carhart, Lucky, and Carhart, lawyers, were on the thirty-fourth floor of the Needle Tower—sky cradled magnificence. So high above the meaner roofs of the down town cliff dwellings, the sanctuary of the law, as interpreted by Carhart, Lucky, and Carhart, possessed a conscious aloofness; shocks never came there; vulgarity was shooed from its doors.

Carhart, Lucky, and Carhart were attorneys for the Needle Tower corporation, owners of the building. Mr. Dawson Sydes, manager of the Tower and head of the renting agency whose offices were on the first floor, was a not infrequent visitor at the lawyers' offices; but on the morning of The Orb's little front page story his entrance into the inner sanctum of Mr. T. J. Franklin Lucky was brusque beyond the dignified calms of the place. The manager was accompanied by Mr. Clarence Upshaw, traffic engineer of the telephone company.

"Say, Lucky, what do you make of this?" Mr. Sydes flipped a folded copy of the offending paper under the lawyer's nose, and speared the contumacious paragraphs with an accusing forefinger. Mr. Lucky read the little item about the ghost voice that came to the Needle Tower's engineer in the dead of night; his austere features were drained of all emotion. Mr. Sydes fidgeted impatiently for him to finish.

"Now Upshaw here—Mr. Lucky, meet Mr. Upshaw, engineer for the telephone company—Upshaw here comes over first thing this morning to tell me one of the girls on night duty in the Broad exchange gets this same call on her wire on the dot of midnight—'This is the hour I died'; nothing else. What do you make of it?"

Mr. Lucky brought his fingers together, tips to tips, and rocked slowly on the swivel spring of his chair. His smile was bland and professional.

"I do not see," he began with deliberation, "where this office can assist you in clearing up this bit of farce, Mr. Sydes. Carhart, Lucky, and Carhart have no agents in the spirit world."

The thin hawk face of the Tower's manager thrust itself forward and his lips clapped together like a horny bill.

"Only way your office figures, Lucky, is that the call into the Broad exchange came from right here—Broad, nine-nine-nine-nine. That's all." The rocking of Mr. Lucky's chair ceased abruptly, and he looked up sharply, a thin cobweb of surprise filming his smooth brow.

"Yes, the call came from your office, Mr. Lucky," put in the telephone man with the air of one anxious to compound a mystery. "No possible mistake about that."

The lawyer pressed a button under the ledge of his rosewood desk. In a minute the prim figure of the stenographer who did double duty by minding the office switchboard hovered in the doorway.

"Miss Parsons, how did you leave the switchboard when you went home last night—and the night before?"

"Why, Mr. Lucky, I left the switch off, of course. I always turn the switch off the last thing before I leave for the day." Mr. Lucky smote the luckless stenographer with one of his recalcitrant witness glances:

"Then if you left the switch off, Miss Parsons—and I trust you are quite sure of that—could it be possible for a call to go from this office in to the Broad exchange of the telephone company after you had gone home?"

"Not unless the switch was turned on by somebody after I'd gone home, Mr. Lucky."

"Do you recall who was the last to leave the offices last night and the night before—if you know of your own knowledge, remember?"

"Why, I was, Mr. Lucky," answered the thoroughly scared stenographer.

"And how did you find the switch upon your return to the office both yesterday morning and this morning?"

"Just as I'd left it, Mr. Lucky—off." The lawyer dismissed Miss Parsons with a nod, then turned to the two men with a giving gesture of his hands which said, "The case is with you, gentlemen of the jury."

"Well, wasn't the lock on your door tampered with on these two nights?" Sydes was reluctant to purge the lawyer's phone of all responsibility.

"I would have been the first to have been informed if such had been the case," the lawyer replied smoothly. "Isn't it rather absurd, Mr. Sydes, to believe that somebody with a perverted sense of humor would break into our offices at night—thereby laying himself open to a criminal charge—just to use our phone as the instrument of his silly hoax? Besides, the watchman——"

"'Silly hoax'—nothing!" The building's manager flamed into anger. "Don't you see this is as bad as a fire—worse? It's a plan to ruin the Tower—drive our tenants out. Tower's full of stock brokers—they're thirty per cent of our rentals. No more superstitious goats in the world than stock brokers. Once get them started on the idea the Tower's haunted and—good night! This story in The Orb here's only the beginning——"

An owl eyed office boy materialized from the rug at the door with a card for Mr. Lucky. He gave it a glance and threw it into his wastebasket.

"Tell him nothing to say," the lawyer grunted. Then to the others: "Fat's in the fire I fear. Reporter from the Evening Breeze. Can you tell me how he happens to come unerringly to the seat of this mystery, when there's nothing said about Carhart, Lucky, and Carhart in the morning paper?"

Sydes' eyes widened, and the look of the hunted came into them.

Mr. Jack Skelly, the Evening Breeze's young man, dapper, fastidiously dressed, possessed of unbounded nerve and a quick intuition, had seen many things since he entered the outer door of the lawyer's office; many and significant things. First, he had trailed Sydes, the Tower's manager, from his office on the first floor to this high aerie of the law. Then, as he waited behind a forbidding rail in the outer office, he had seen Miss Parsons emerge from a door marked, "T. J. Franklin Lucky" and had noted the pinch of fear on her features. The first thing the girl had done when she seated herself at the switchboard was to run her hand to a little lever on the side, jiggle it back and forth as if to test it. Then came the office boy to report Mr. Lucky had nothing to say.

Skelly carelessly lifted his stick until it pointed to the switchboard, and plumped at the faded Miss Parsons in chirping impudence:

"So that's where the ghost lives—what? Neat but comfortable." The girl's head came up with a snap, and her face went dead white.

"I—I don't understand you," she babbled. The Evening Breeze's young man laughed blithely and passed out to the elevators. Three minutes later he had his city editor on the wire:

"It's straight, boss—absolutely straight. Carhart, Lucky, and Carhart's phone is the one that figures. Sydes, manager of the Tower, and Lucky are digging into the mystery now. Refuse to see me, but——"

"They'll see you—they'll see you!" came the high whine over the wire. "You go right back and tell Lucky and Sydes the Evening Breeze is printing a story that the Neptune liner Puissant and the Red Funnel ship Romany, both in today, report that for two nights at the hour corresponding with midnight New York time they've caught the wireless message: 'This is the hour I died.'"

It was at the noon hour when the home edition of the Evening Breeze coursed through the sun and snow streaked cañons of the financial district. Newsies, sharp as hounds to catch the scent of the hour's appealing sensation, went galloping through the streets crowded with noon hour lunch seekers; the bell note of the chase was in their baying:

"Hey! Th' skyscraper ghost! Wuxtry! Needle Tower has a ghost!"

And the creatures of the street, fed always on excitement, living under the whiplash of nerves, paused in their rush to exchange coppers for a shock. Shock it was. There, in triple column measure under a veritable trellis of head type, blazed the story of the street's great mystery: how over midnight wires and through unwired air at sea had sped the ghost's lament—"This is the hour I died."

A paltry trifle serves to focus the attention of New Yorkers, so avid are the denizens of steel and stone hives to see or hear some new thing. By the time the market closed the Needle Tower's chaste prism mounting to the winter sky with its bronze capping lantern glowing golden in the sunset was the focal point for a thousand eyes. To the crowd the tier on tier of windows marching up the sheer sides of the great monolith were so many dumb mouths, which might open any minute to give voice to that ghostly message already heard by a favored few. When with the coming of the early dark each of these windows became a sparkling jewel of light, the crowd jamming the black cañon at the Tower's foot became so dense traffic cops had to pry lanes through it. And now all the afternoon papers, smarting under the beat administered by the Evening Breeze, strove to outyell the veteran lungs of that lucky organ.

Just before the market closed a sudden bear raid upon Needle Tower preferred popped out of the dull routine of a listless day. The blow came from nowhere, after the manner of vicious financial bludgeonings of the giants. None knew the hand that wielded the club. The shifting, gaping crowd outside the doors of the exchange, awaiting a new prodigy to be born in the Needle Tower, was reason enough for a raid on the Tower's integrity. Rumor had it that already scores of its tenants were giving notice of lease cancellation. Wise men of the street said no office building could survive the bad luck of harboring such a Jonah. In half an hour of mad dumping the tower stocks dropped from [illegible] to 31, and only the bell saved them.

It was a council of desperation that was being held in Mr. Lucky's private office; the tower's leading directors, Sydes, the manager, and Upshaw of the telephone company being present. Two sleuths of a private detective agency had reported the ghost business positively had not been an "inside job"; they'd questioned every night employé of the building and found not a lead anywhere. None of the directors could hazard a guess as to the individual who had coldly leveled this blow at the value of Needle Tower stock; none of the street crowd had ever tried before, they said, to put the tower on the skids. Then up spake Mr. Upshaw, the telephone engineer, timidly as befitting a mere technician among men of large affairs:

"I'm not so sure the telephone in Mr. Lucky's office was the one used. Anybody—any tenant directly below or above these offices on any of the floors could, if he knew how to do the trick, cut through his wall into the telephone conduit and splice in on this number's wire. That would give the signal of Carhart, Lucky & Carhart at the Broad exchange, you know."

Sydes leaped upon the telephone man, his hands gripping the other's shoulders.

"Say! man, why didn't you peep something like this before when we had time to go over the building and inspect the wires? What do you mean, cut through the conduit? How—why the devil haven't you got busy?"

"Plenty of time before midnight, Mr. Sydes, if you want the telephone company to send over a squad of inspectors and testers. Test out all the phones on the trunk feeding this office—you know, one trunk running down each of the four corners in the building. Wire from this office in the same bundle with forty or fifty others and——"

Shoot over your men—fifty of 'em—a hundred! Try out every phone in the building. More men we have in this building tonight the better. I'll be here all night—double set of watchmen and two detectives on the sidewalk outside the door. Now——" He plunged out of the conference room.

Eleven o'clock in the dark of downtown—the dark of the stone jungle. Here and there the feeble spark of a corner street lamp ringed about by a halo of reflected silver from the glistening asphalt; rising on every hand up and up into the furry darkness the hump shouldered shapes of skyscrapers—monstrous, unworldly, chimerical. Thin fringes of snow on aerial gallery and pinnacle distilled marsh light, penciled the dark with faint lines, revealing hidden heights.

Out of the subway kiosk in front of Trinity's church yard spilled a noisy score of men and women. They chattered, they called one to another in tones consciously pitched against the silence, and began to descend the little hill of Wall street to the engulfing blackness where Broad crossed. Down the cañon of Nassau street came another group of venturers. The incandescent eyes of a taxicab suddenly peered around the stone buttress of Pine street and moved down towards the gathering of the pedestrians. Other autos came, bringing the joymakers of Broadway's day to the gloom of Broad street's night. Every downtown subway train discharged an ever increasing freight at the Wall street station. The pioneer score at the foot of the Needle Tower grew to a hundred—five hundred—a thousand. The word had passed through all the white streets of fun and folly uptown: a ghost party at midnight at the Needle Tower. Something new—something outré; enough of a bait to hook volatile New York.

Something was going on in the tower which served to hold the attention of the silent crowd. There, along one knife edge of the great plinth, sparks of sudden radiance were shunted on and off, glowed and waned by intervals as if some capricious genius of this man-made wilderness were rendering a nocturne on stops of light. The only lighted windows, these, in all the jumbled bulks of darkness about. The nerves of the throng were tensed by this unexplained play of fairy fire in the domain of the ghost.

At twenty minutes to 12, young Mr. Jack Skelly of the Evening Breeze concluded a satisfactory financial arrangement with the janitor of the Merchants and Miners' building and, with a photographer and flashlight outfit, was lifted to the roof just above the Broad exchange of the telephone company. His city editor, fretting at his desk in his eagerness to preserve his paper's glory of discovery from jealous raids by the morning sheets, had commanded: "Get a flash of the tower at midnight—on the dot. The picture may show something; I don't know what, but something."

The janitor ushered the two through the roof trap and on to the eerie tableland of the night. As they approached the stone coping on the edge of space, beyond which

"THEM was the days," as old Harley Hill used to put it. And he used to put it that way 'most every time he told one of his tales of the répertoire theater days not long after the civil war.

As different were conditions in public entertainment then from those of today as an ox cart is different from an airplane.

No smooth "syndicates," financed with Wall street millions, organized and operating so smoothly that San Diego is just the same sort of dot on the map as Jersey City; no "runs" of years in one playhouse; no actors' unions, no managers' leagues, no vaudeville, no "movies," no circuits, no "scalpers," no electric signs or incandescent footlights, no temperance and not much temperament.

Those were the days of long distances and slow hauls. Attractions were all of the spoken and acted sort, not noisy, mendacious revues or silent mechanical films. Travel was a decisive factor and "one night stands" were undreamed of. The touring companies remained for a week then where today they do not even look out of the window as they glide through, and some of the towns were then so primitive that where they then remained a week they today linger for a year. Each company played a répertoire of "pieces," and frequently the week when it visited a city was that city's "season."

Amateur theatricals were then in vogue, and each community had its home talent to present at irregular intervals, between the rare visits of such professionals as visited at all, the standard hardy plays such as "Wilhelm Tell," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Rivals," and "Taming of the Shrew." What these performances missed in merit they made up in personal interest, and they were wholesome, stupid events. They lacked the holiday element of the commercial theatricals, however, for the periods when a répertoire troupe was in town were gala, grand, and gaudy. Then remote farmers who seldom journeyed to town drove in, the sanded barrooms housed reunions of old friends, and carnival held sway.

If he ate with reasonable regularity he was content to suffer indescribable inconveniences of travel and labor, wander over the map without home or definite hope, starting a tour with a dime in his pocket and ending it perhaps with less. He wore the flowing hair and the soiled linen of his calling, spoke grandiloquently to waitresses when he was lucky enough to dine, criticized with severity all his illustrious predecessors in classic rôles, and took his recompense from life out of gazing for hours at his own name on roadside fences and atrociously pinked up chromos of his features in lithograph beside his name. For Harley Hill was a star.

He headed his own company, as raucous and delinquent a parcel of line distorters and scene disfigurers as ever trod creaky boards. His "billing" proclaimed the presence of Harley Hill, the illustrious international delineator of comedy, tragedy, and romance, supported by a company of artists selected from the foremost native and foreign aggregations of dramatic celebrities, in an extraordinary répertoire of the greatest plays by the immortal bard, William Shakespeare.

Harley Hill was a man of broad frame, ponderous in action, flamboyant in diction, bellowing in recitation, blatant in delivery, unsubtle, specious, gross, egotistical, egregiously pompous, absurdly vain. His mustache, which was ferocious, yet had to adorn his every rôle, was glisteningly and rigidly waxed. His hair was sticky but bushy. His finger nails were long and very dirty.

Man and boy he had wrestled with the stage for bread and beer some forty years. He had always been an itinerant actor, had always nursed a natural contempt for all who did not act for a living and most of those who did, had lived a charlatan existence and called himself an artist unwaveringly, and had rewritten most of Shakespeare's plays to "fatten" the principal rôles so that Hamlet, Julius Cæsar, Lear, Macbeth, Othello, and a few Richards and Henrys might be worthy of his caliber.

If he ever looked down from his eminence above mankind long and far enough to see the dirty dressing rooms, the smoky coal oil foot lamps, the egg stained tables of miserable hotels, the holes in his pockets, the worn heels and warped soles of his sordid shoes, the frayed fringe on his frilled cuffs, he put these consequences down to the inhospitality of commonplace humanity toward genius, and let it be so.

The advent of a répertoire troupe into Maysville, a New England village with one street and a tablet to its citizens who fought in 1776, was attended with no less than the customary excitement occasioned by such events in such towns.

Maysville was inhabited by estimable folk. They had good blood, they had fine farms, they had American ideals, and they had such morals and manners as graced the stock from which the nation's pioneers sprang. They were not giddy nor frivolous, rather puritanical and severe. But they were human, and, being human, they worshiped the characterless charlatans, the come-by-night "hams" who set themselves up as strolling players. A tramp got the workhouse in Maysville, but a mountebank got the Adams house.

The Adams house was a historic hotel. It had been an inn. Four generations of Erwins had owned and operated it. Eben Erwin, representing the current edition of the Erwins, was now the landlord. A tall, raw boned, pallid, slovenly fellow was Erwin, something of a smart Alec, known as a merciless critic of his fellow townsmen, a social aspirant in the society of the community, and a man with pretensions to metropolitan polish, Eben having been to Boston twice and to New York once, and being thus a traveled man.

As the landlord of the hotel he took the opportunity to become more closely associated with the actors, and a week's stay of a company gave Eben a year's material for bragging and chest swelling as he recounted and recapitulated what he had said to such and such a player and what such and such a player had said to him. In return Eben usually gave free board and entertainment to the star of each troupe, grandly giving the notables the hospitality due the great.

When Harley Hill and his ragged bunch of histrionic hobos trailed into Maysville and hauled their dilapidated luggage to the door of the Adams house Eben Erwin strode out to make the sorry looking outfit welcome. He easily picked out Hill, whom he seized by the unwashed hand and drew into the reception room. Hill had never "worked" Maysville before, and he viewed for a moment with dubious apprehension the overtures of the stranger, but was set more than at rest by the first few words.

"This is indeed a pleasure—I might say an honor," said Erwin. "Maysville is proud to have you here."

The advance agent had been in town and had plastered up its dead walls and every other available space with the fierce lithographs. A century of such lithographs and the disappointing realizations that followed them had not cured or convinced Maysville; a man "billed" as a star was a star.

"H'm, thanks, my man," said Hill. "Have you accommodations for me?"

"Most certainly — for you and your players."

"O, the players can look after themselves—they're not used to the best, as I am."

"I have set aside the room in the bay for you, Mr. Hill. I hope you'll like the view, sir."

"The devil with the view. I hope I'll like the rate. You have, I take it, decent and special terms for the profession?"

Erwin had a few special "terms" for the profession, but they were not "decent"—since a few had "jumped" their bills and Erwin had caused the sheriff to be at the village depot for each train departure to see that no guilty troubadour escaped. But his weakness for stars still was strong.

"Terms?" he exclaimed. "Terms, my dear Mr. Hill? You are my guest, sir. The Adams house is an old institution, a historic hostelry, sir. It has a record of having housed many great men. A president once ate in that room and two governors have slept under its roof. The Adams house asks you to accept its poor accommodations without any talk of pay, sir."

Hill's bulbous eyes lit up. This was as unusual as it was salutary. Maysville was an unknown quantity and patronage would in all probabilities be meager. He thanked Erwin without condescending to actual gratitude, just as though he were accustomed to such reception, just as though he should have been.

The boy of all work lugged Hill's plunder to the choice chamber of the house, while Erwin cagily led the star into his own quarters and set a bottle of liquor before him. Hill drank free and freely. He deigned to slap the landlord on the shoulder and grant him to be a hearty fellow. He mellowed under the stimulants and, reaching across the board, said:

"Erwin, my good old friend, you have indeed shown me that even a provincial may nurse a gentleman's notions of what befits an artist and a stellar guest. In return you must permit me to offer you the courtesies due my friends and equals. You shall have a box tomorrow evening at the opera house, where you shall see me do my Shylock, acknowledged by press, pulpit, and public not only my foremost delineation, but a creation—an interpretation of this immortal character unique in its high lights and its shadings. And you shall be my guest."

"Tut, tut, my dear Hill," answered Erwin. "Couldn't think of it. In fact, I have already purchased my seat for the opening performance—in the first row, I believe. I always buy, and always buy the best."

"H'm—too bad. Well, the second night then, when I reveal my Hamlet, considered by foremost critics and lifelong students of the works of the deathless bard as the most melancholy visualization of the Prince of Denmark ever accomplished on either side of the Atlantic."

"Thanks, thanks," breathed Erwin.

"The first row seats, I believe, sell for 75 cents—a paltry sum—but what may one expect of a sodden public dead to the call of life's finer emotions? What I was about to say, sir, was this: as long as you have already invested this sum in a seat, which is unfortunate in that it robs me of the opportunity to entertain you as my guest, I trust you will appreciate the performance—that is, I trust you will be pleased with it as far as it is possible for the mind of the lay observer to digest the classic characters of the superhuman Shakespeare, realized with the subtlety and finesse, the fire and the color of finished art illuminating inherent gifts of acting. But," and here Hill smiled, "if you should be displeased, which is scarcely likely, I shall return to you your money, the 75 cents. Ha! ha! Shall we drink to my jest!"

They drank to it.

All the next day Erwin held audiences in his hotel and on the corners of Maysville, recounting his passage with Hill, expatiating on the camaraderie and the chummy spirit which prevailed between himself and the distinguished sojourner. Many heard enviously. Erwin's gossiping helped the ticket sale also, and when the curtain rang up that night there was a sizable audience "in front," and Erwin, who had risen several times to make himself conspicuous and to re-remind the assemblage that he was on terms of personal friendship with the star, felt and acted as though he had at least a reflected prominence for the occasion.

The curtain rose before the largest number and the best of Maysville's people that had turned out to a professional premiere in years.

Accustomed as the observers were to shabby settings and oblique performances, it was evident from the first moment that Hill's company was a bloomer. There were no Shakespearean experts there and no carping analyzers of stage technique or craft; but the "house" felt that it had been hoodwinked into giving up its good money for counterfeit entertainment.

A few suppressed this suspicion, awaiting Hill himself. He came. He crowned the wabbly affair with an offensive personality that taught the audience instantly to resent him, and with acting that even plowboys and store clerks recognized instantly as awful. Perhaps Erwin's laudations and gratuitous advertising had made it more difficult, for the community had keyed itself to expect something worth while and more of the intelligent citizens than usually hazarded patronizing an unknown had gathered.

Hill's first half dozen speeches confirmed the worst. There was a buzzing, that undertoned getting together of a displeased audience which is as unmistakable as the howling of a mob and as progressive as a forest fire. Erwin trembled a little, then sought in an audible whisper to hush the audience, feeling a sickly reaction of responsibility for bringing many of the neighbors there and experiencing the anti-climax of his strutting and his bragging. For a minute he gagged them. Then the noise grew so that it reached the ears of the actors. They wavered and hesitated. The redoubtable Hill himself, ridiculously wigged and bearded, and robed to answer his idea of presenting Shylock economically yet strikingly, broke and "went up" in his lines. Some one laughed loudly. Hill bit his lip, he stammered, then turned with violent indignation to address the house. A boy shouted from the balcony. In an instant a hundred catcalls and cries drowned out the impassioned protests of Harley Hill. In another instant the curtain came down, to stay down.

A crowd assembled at the stage door, threatening to ride Hill and his band out of town on a rail. Erwin, dizzy and crushed, was hooted by a few and roundly joshed by many. He forced his way through the jeering villagers and returned to his hotel. The troupers arrived shortly afterward, having met with no physical harm from the respectable though angry folks.

Hill was speechless with fear, rage, disgust, and chagrin. The rest of the week, of course, was lost. And the news of this would travel and spread. He looked at Erwin as though the whole disaster were his fault. Erwin looked back at him in fervid contempt and hearty hatred.

"Give me my 75 cents, you swindling liar," cried Erwin.

"Go to the devil—you and your whole town of ignorant swine," shrieked Hill.

Erwin approached him furiously. Hill picked up a chair. Erwin backed away. Within the hour the troupe had departed, never to return to Maysville. And Erwin, who knew Maysville, knew that he was in for a "riding" and the cutting jokes of the village clowns that would long keep him a laughing stock.

And his fears were justified. There is nothing more hopeless than hoping to escape the jokers of a small community who have a notorious case against one of their own. Wherever Erwin showed his head some one asked, "Well, Eb, did Hill send you that 75 cents yet?"

Erwin had told the item generally before the performance. After the fiasco every one had told it. It became a local byword. A bad debt was typified as "like the 75 cents Hill owes Erwin," and even strangers who came to the hotel laughingly threw it at him. He became embittered and acrid over it. It haunted him.

Months went by and the annual local amateur entertainment came up. It was to be "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with the minister's son playing Lawyer Marks, the school teacher as Uncle Tom, the daughter of the leading merchant as little Eva, and the flower of Maysville society sprinkled through the cast in major and minor rôles. The fund, as always, was for the county poor, and a "sell-out" was certain, everybody within fifty miles having at least one relation in the company.

Erwin, as a representative business man, was taxed for a full box, and he took it. He was there, alone, for the performance. The opera house was crowded as only community affairs could crowd it, and any one who was not present was nobody.

The play began and went on. Immense enthusiasm attended it. Each entrance drew a salvo, each exit a demonstration. Every one enthused except Erwin, who sat sourly in his costly compartment, watching the show.

It progressed crudely but triumphantly to the turn where little Eva, having delivered herself of the saccharine and missionary blurb, is about to descend to the upper realms.

From where Erwin sat he could see the seams in her cambric wings and the wires attached to a belt under her arms, which would raise the little saint to the bourne where she would find company of her own ethereal kind, presumably. The audience sat still, entranced, spellbound. The principal merchant's daughter, with an angelic expression that was slightly premature but tremendously impressive, left the floor in jerks and spasms as the wires were hauled up. She was struggling, panting, and kicking slightly, but never lost the seraphic pose of her features (as taught her by the school teacher in rehearsal) until something startling, something sensational, suddenly happened before her.

Eben Erwin arose in his box. He stood up, lean and twitching. He half turned to the audience and walked to the edge of his box.

"Ladies and gentlemen of Maysville," he shouted. "I just want to announce that Harley Hill doesn't owe me a cent."

WEST WIND DRIFT by Ge

THE STORY—His money stolen in a South American port on the eve of his embarking for the United States, Algernon Adonis Percival, American mining engineer, goes aboard the liner Doraine as a stowaway. The adventure begins to be amusing when, as he is at work scrubbing the deck, he is recognized by Ruth Clinton, a passenger, as her dancing partner of a few nights before. Percival's amusement is short lived, however. Before making his presence known to the captain he has observed certain strange goings-on about the ship and given a warning which leads to the finding of several bombs in the hold, evidently planned by German agents, for it is the year of the United States' entry into the great war. The search averts complete disaster, but not all the bombs are found, and those that remain explode, partially wrecking the vessel and setting it afire. The surviving passengers take to the lifeboats while the crew battles desperately with the flames and, after a long fight, succeeds in extinguishing them. On being called back to the ship, the occupants of the lifeboats find it hopelessly adrift. Class distinctions are obliterated as every one sets to work burying the dead and caring for the wounded, and Percival, his hands badly burned, finds himself the object of Ruth Clinton's friendly solicitude, as well as that of Olga Obosky, a beautiful Russian dancer, who has taken a great fancy to him. The ship is caught in a gale, from which it emerges in a sinking condition, but on the second morning after the storm land is sighted.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

The Island.

SEVERAL people were grouped near by at the rail, listening to Nicklestick. The stowaway joined them. As if sensing his presence, Ruth turned suddenly and saw him.

"O!" she cried, tremulously. "Have—have you seen it, Mr. Percival?"

"No," he replied. "It won't be visible for an hour or so longer. It's off there; all right, though. The lookout, Capt. Trigger, and several others got a glimpse of it before the sun began to pull the mist up to obscure it for a little while. That's mist over there," he went on," turning to Nicklestick. "You couldn't see the Andes mountains if they were where that strip of land is hidden. It won't be long, Miss Clinton, before we all can see it."

"How far away is it?" she asked, controlling her voice with an effort. "Do they know? Can they estimate?"

"I'll tell you what let's do," he said, abruptly. "Let's go up on the sun deck. I've got Mr. Gray's glasses. We can see better up there. Let me assist you, Mrs. Spofford. The sun deck is pretty badly smashed up and littered with all sorts of wreckage, but we can manage it all right."

Mrs. Spofford looked at him intently for a moment.

"I remember you now," she said. "Are you sure, are you positive, there is land over there?"

"I have Capt. Trigger's word for it."

"And mine, too," added Mr. Nicklestick. "You may rest assured, Mrs. Spofford, that we will all be on dry land before many hours."

Percival leaned close to the speaker and said, in a very low but emphatic tone:

"You don't know a damn thing about it, so keep your trap closed. If you're a man you won't go on raising false hopes in the breasts of these women."

Nicklestick's jaw fell. He whispered:

"Good God, ain't we—you don't mean to say there is a chance we won't be able to——"

But Percival had turned away with the two women. Mrs. Spofford took his arm, leaning heavily against him. Her figure had straightened, however. He had given her the needed confidence.

They made their way up the steps leading to the topmost deck. Others had already preceded them. A dozen men and women were looking out over the sea through their binoculars. They recognized Landover, Mme. Careni-Amori (clutching her jewel case), Joseppi, Fitts, and one or two more. Olga Obosky was well forward, seated on the edge of a partially wrecked skylight and ventilator. Her three dancing girls were with her, closely grouped.

Percival purposely remained near the steps. He knew full well that the ship's hours were numbered. It was only a question of time when she would founder. In the lee of one of the big stacks they huddled close together and waited for the lifting of the veil. The wind was soft but strong up there at the top of the vessel. He took hope in the fact that it was blowing toward the shores of that unseen land, and that slowly but surely the Doraine was drifting thither.

Suddenly, as if a curtain were being raised, a far off line appeared on the surface of the waters. Higher rose the curtain, and like magic the line developed into an irregular ridge, the ends of which sank below the horizon far to the right and left.

Percival felt the girl's hand on his arm. He shot a swift glance at her face. It was turned away. She was staring at the mystic panorama that was being unveiled off there on the rim of the world. Her eyes were bright, her lips were parted in the ecstasy of hope revived, she was breathing deeply. The pulse in her smooth white neck was beating rapidly, rythmically. He could see it. He laid his bandaged hand firmly upon hers and pressed it tightly to his arm. She did not look around. Her every thought was centered upon the unfolding vision.

"There are trees," she murmured, enthralled. "Trees—and hills! See, Auntie! But oh, how far away they are!"

For many minutes they stood there without speaking. Then from all sides came the clamor of voices—shouts of joy, cheers—laughter! She looked down at the clumsy object that imprisoned her hand, then swiftly up into his eyes. A warm flush spread over her face.

"I—I couldn't help it," he muttered. "It—it looked so helpless."

"It isn't half as helpless as yours, Mr. Percival," she said, and smiled. She waited a moment before withdrawing her hand. "May I have the glasses, please? Had you forgotten them?"

"Completely," he replied.

Later, while Mrs. Spofford was peering through the glasses, she drew him aside.

"Tell me about the water in the hold," she said, in a low tone. "Is it serious?"

He looked grave. "Very. If you will take a peep over the side of the ship, you'll see how low down she is in the water."

"My aunt doesn't know the ship is leaking," she went on, hurriedly. "I want to keep it from her as long as possible." He nodded his head.

"Mr. Mott figures we'll stay afloat for ten or twelve hours—maybe longer. I will see to it that you and Mrs. Spofford get into one of the boats in case we—well, just in case, you know. We will be given ample warning, Miss Clinton. Things don't look as hopeless as they did last night." He pointed toward the land. "It looks like heaven, doesn't it?"

Her face clouded. "But only a very few of us may—" She stopped, shuddering.

"You poor little girl!" he cried, brokenly. He steadied himself and went on: "It wouldn't surprise me in the least if every blessed one of us got safely ashore."

"You do not believe that, Mr. Percival. I can tell by the look in your eyes. I want you to promise me one thing. If we have to take to the boats, you will come with us——"

He drew himself up. "My dear Miss Clinton, there is quite a difference between being a stowaway on an ocean liner and being one in a lifeboat. I have no standing on this ship. I have no right in one of her boats. I am the very last person on board to be considered."

She looked searchingly into his eyes, her own wide with comprehension. "You mean you will make no effort to leave the ship until every one else is——"

He checked her with a gesture of his hand. "I may be one of the first to leave. But I'll not rob any one else of his place in a boat or his space on one of those rafts. I'll swim for it."

. . . .

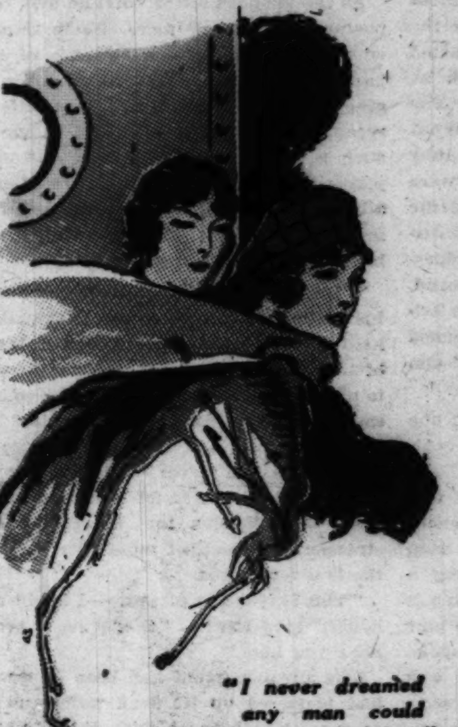
Slowly the land crept down upon the Doraine. The illusion was startling. The ship seemed to be lying absolutely motionless; it was the land that approached instead of the other way round. A thin white beach suddenly emerged from the green background to the left; to the right an ugly mass of rocks took shape, stretching as far as the eye could reach. Farther inland rose high, tree covered hills, green as emeralds in the blazing sunlight. On a sea of turquoise lolled the listless Doraine.

Soundings were taken from time to time. Even the bottom of the ocean was coming up to meet the Doraine. Its depth appreciably lessened with each successive measurement. From fifty fathoms it had decreased to ten since the first line was dropped.

At 4 o'clock Capt. Trigger ordered a boat lowered and manned by a picked crew, in charge of the second engineer. The Doraine was about five miles off shore at the time, and was drifting with a noticeably increased speed directly toward the rock bound coast. He had hoped she would go aground in the shallow waters off the sandy beach, but there was now no chance that such a piece of good fortune was in store for her. She was going straight for the huge black rocks.

The boat's crew rowed in for observations. Even before they returned to report, the anxious officers on board the vessel had made out a narrow fissure in the rocky coast line. They assumed that it was the mouth of a small river. The second engineer brought back the astonishing information that this opening in the coast was the gateway to a channel that in his judgment split the island into two distinct sections. That it was not the mouth of a river was made clear by the presence of a current so strong that his men had to exert themselves to the utmost to prevent the boat being literally sucked into the channel by the powerful tide, which apparently was at its full. This opening—the water rushed into it so swiftly that he was satisfied it developed into a gorge farther back from the coast—was approximately two hundred yards wide, flanked on either side by low lying, formidable bastions of rock. The water was not more than fifty feet deep off the entrance to the channel.

Gradually the prow of the Doraine swung around and pointed straight for the cleft in the shore. The ship, two miles out, had responded to the insidious pressure of the current and was being drawn toward the rocks—at first so slowly that there was scarcely a ripple off her bows; then, as she lumbered onward, she began to turn over the water as a plowshare turns over the land.



"I never dreamed any man could be so fearless."

At precisely 6 o'clock she slid between the rocky portals and entered a canal so straight and true that it might have been drilled and blasted out of the earth under the direction of the most skillful engineers in the world.

Soundings were hastily taken. Discovering that the water was not deep enough even at high tide to submerge the vessel when the inevitable came to pass and she sank to the bottom, Capt. Trigger renewed his efforts to release the anchor chains, which had been caught and jammed in the wreckage. He realized the vital necessity for checking the Doraine in her flight before she accomplished the miracle of passing unhindered through the channel and out into the open sea beyond. The swiftness of the current indicated plainly enough that this natural canal was of no great length.

The ship slid on between the tree lined banks. The trees were of the temperate zone, with spreading limbs, thick foliage, and hardy trunks. There were no palms visible, but in the rarely occurring open spaces a large shrub abounded. This was instantly recognized by Percival, who proclaimed it to be the algaroba, a plant commonly found on the Gran Chaco in Argentina. While the woodland was thick there was nothing about it to suggest the tropical jungle with its impenetrable fastnesses.

The keel of the half sunken Doraine was scraping ominously on the bed of the channel. She shivered and swerved from [illegible] quent contact with submerged rocks, [illegible] held her course with uncanny stead[illegible] while every soul on board gazed with [illegible] despairing eyes at the land which mock[illegible] them as they passed. Far on ahead loo[illegible] the lofty hills, and beyond them lay—wh[illegible] The ocean?

Gradually the passage widened. Its de[illegible] also increased. The ship no longer scra[illegible] the bottom, she no longer caromed off [illegible] sunken rocks. On the other hand, w[illegible] poured into her interior with increa[illegible] force and volume, indicating a dimi[illegible] rent forward. She was sloshing along tow[illegible] the center of a basin which appeared to [illegible] half a mile wide and not more than a [illegible] long. Directly ahead of her the hills c[illegible] down to meet the water. A dark, narr[illegible] cut, with towering sides, indicated an ou[illegible] for the tiny inland sea. This gorge, tow[illegible] which the Doraine was being resistle[illegible] drawn, appeared to be but little wider th[illegible] the ship itself.

Almost in the shadow of the hills, [illegible] within a dozen ship lengths of the sin[illegible] opening, the worn, exhausted, beaten [illegible] raine came to rest at the end of her [illegible] voyage. She shivered and groaned und[illegible] the jarring impact, forged onward half [illegible] length, heeled over slightly—and died. [illegible] was anchored forever in the tiny la[illegible] locked sea, proud leviathan, whose days [illegible] been spent in the boundless reaches of [illegible] open deep.

And here for the centuries to come w[illegible] lie the proud Doraine, guided to her journey[illegible] end by the pilot Chance, moored for all ti[illegible] in the strangest haven ever put into [illegible] man.

Behind the stranded vessel stretched [illegible] turies incalculable, and in all these cent[illegible] no man had entered here. Screened fr[illegible] the rest of the world, untended by [illegible] tugs, unheralded by raucous sirens, [illegible] comed only by primeval solitude, the [illegible] raine had come to rest.

She settled down on her bed of rocks [illegible] sleep forevermore, a mottled monster, wh[illegible] only covering was the night; indifferent [illegible] storm and calm, to time and tide, to [illegible] ness and light, she sat serene in her little sea. Her lofty walls towered high above the waves that broke trembling against them, as if afraid of this strange object from another world, that could rest upon the bottom of the ocean and yet be [illegible] above them.

Capt. Trigger and a dozen men stood [illegible] the boat deck with guns and revolvers, facing several hundred sullen, determined men and women from the steerage. Night had not yet fallen; the shadow of the hills, however, was reaching half way across the oval pool; gloom impenetrable had settled on the wooded shores.

With the striking of the Doraine nearly every one on board was hurled to the decks. As she heeled over five or six degrees [illegible] settling herself among the rocks a panic ensued among the ignorant people of the steerage. They scrambled to their feet and made a mad rush for the boats, shouting and screaming in their terror. Other passengers were trampled under foot and sailors standing by the davits were hurled aside.

Capt. Trigger, anticipating just such a stampede, rushed up with members of the gun crew. The gaunt, broken old master of the Doraine drove the horde back from the boats, but as he stood there haranguing them in good maritime English he could see plainly enough that they were not to be so easily subdued. He gave the captain a sly wink.

Then, as the bewildered master withdrew with his armed men he turned once more to the mob. "Come on! Step lively, now! No rushing! Take your turn. Every blasted one of you, I mean. What the hell are you hanging back for, you? You were so darned eager to go a little while ago, what's the matter with you now? No one's trying to stop you. Here are the boats. Put up your guns and knives and pile in. You're absolutely free to go, you swine! We'll be damned good and rid of you, and that's all we're asking. It's a pity to waste powder and cannon balls on you, when we may have use for all we've got later on, killing the lions and tigers and anacondas up there in the woods, but I'm going to do it."

He stepped back. Not a man or a woman moved. They stood transfixed, packed in a huddled mass along the deck. Then a woman cried out for mercy. The cry was taken up by other women. Percival halted and faced them once more.

"Get into those boats!" he roared savagely. "It won't do you a bit of good to whine and pray and squeal. I'm through with you. You've got to—— Well?"

"Would you kill us when we are only trying to save our lives?" called out one of them, finding his courage and voice.

"I don't want to talk to you. Get in!"

"We have as much right to remain on this ship as anybody else," shouted another. "We paid for our passage. We are honest, hard working——"

"No use! I'll give you ten minutes to climb into those boats."

There was a moment's silence.

"And what will you do if we refuse to leave the ship?" cried one of the men. "Be quiet!" he bawled at the whimpering women. "We cannot hear what the gentleman has to say."

"You'll soon find out what I'll do, if you don't obey me inside of ten minutes," replied Percival.

"But the ship is not going to sink any more," protested another, looking over the rail timidly. "She is safe. We do not wish to leave now."

Capt. Trigger and Mr. Mott joined Percival. In an undertone he told them what he had said to the mob.

"And now, gentlemen," he whispered in conclusion, "it's up to you to intercede in their behalf. They're as tame as rabbits now. They know the ship's all right, and they believe I intend to blow 'em to pieces if they once put off in the boats. Start in now, captain, and argue with me. Plead for them. They know who I am. They know I come from the hills, and they think I'm a bloodthirsty devil. They're like a lot of cattle. Most of them are simple, honest, God-fearing people, and if we handle them properly now we'll not have much trouble with them in the future. And only the good Lord knows what the future is going to bring."

So the three of them argued, two against one. Finally Percival threw up his hands in a gesture of complete surrender.

There were a few in the crowd who understood English. These edged forward eagerly, hopefully. They called out protestations against the "slaughter."

"Tell them you have reconsidered, Mr. Percival," said the captain. "They are to remain on board."

Excited shouts went up from the few who understood, and then the word went among the others that they were to be spared. There were cries of relief, joy, gratitude, and not a few fell upon their knees!

Percival stood forth once more. Silence fell upon the throng.

"The captain has put in a plea for you, and I have decided to grant it. You may remain on board. Now, listen to me! No one is to leave this ship until tomorrow morning. We are safe here. We are stuck fast on the bottom, and nothing can happen to us at present. Tomorrow we will see what is best to be done. Every man and woman here is to return to the task he was given by Mr. Mott at the beginning of our troubles. We've got to eat, and sleep, and—wait a minute; Well, all right—beat it, if you feel that way about it."

He stood watching them as they excitedly withdrew toward the bow of the ship, breaking up into clattering groups, all of them talking at once.

Capt. Trigger laid his hand on the young man's shoulder.

"If it had not been for you, Percival, this deck would now be red with blood, and some of us would be dead. You saved a very ticklish situation. I take off my hat to you, and I say, with a full heart, that I shall never again doubt your ability to handle men. No one but an American could have tricked that mob as you did, my lad."

From various points of vantage the foregoing scene had been witnessed by uneasy, alarmed persons from the upper cabins. Overwhelmed and dismayed by the rush of the yelling mob, the elect had fled for safety, urged by a greater fear than any that had gone before, the fear of rioting men.

A few of them, more daring and inquisitive than the rest, had ventured recklessly into the zone of danger. Among them were Ruth Clinton and Mme. Olga Obosky, who, disregarding the command of Mr. Mott, were the only women to venture beyond the protecting corner of the deck building. They stood side by side, bracing themselves against the downward slope of the deck. Half way forward were Trigger and the armed gunners, and beyond them the dense, irresolute mass of humanity. Percival, in rounding the corner to go to the assistance of Capt. Trigger, observed with dismay the exposed position in which the two women had placed themselves. He paused to cry out to them sharply:

"What are you doing here? Get back to the other side. Can't you see there is likely to be shooting? Don't stand there like a couple of idiots! You're right in line if that gang begins to fire."

"He is tearing off his bandages," cried Ruth, as Percival hurried on.

Mme. Obosky was silent, her gaze fixed intently on the brisk, aggressive figure of the man who had called them idiots. She understood every word he uttered to the Portuguese. Her eyes glistened with pride when he stepped forward to tackle the mob singlehanded, and as he went on with his astonishing speech she actually broke into a soft giggle. Her companions looked at her in amazement.

"Why do you laugh?" Ruth demanded hotly. "Those dreadful creatures may tear him to pieces. He is unarmed and defenseless. They could sweep him——"

"You would laugh also if you understood," interrupted Olga, her eyes dancing. "O, what a grand—what do you call it?—bluff? What a magnificent bluff he is doing. It is beautiful. See—they whisper among themselves—they have back down completely. Wait! I will presently tell you what he have said to them."

"I never dreamed any man could be so fearless. Look at the odds against him. There are scores of them and they——"

"Pooh! Do you suppose he would stand up and fight them if they rushed at him? Not he! He would turn and run as fast as he could. He is no fool, my dear. He is a very intelligent man. So he would run if they make a single move toward him."

"I think this is rather a poor time to accuse him of cowardice, Mme. Obosky, in view of what he——"

"Have I accused him of cowardice?"

"I'd like to know what you call it. You say he would run if they——"

"But that would not be cowardice. It would be the simplest kind of common sense. He is so very sure of himself. It is not courage. It is confidence. That is his strength. He would be a fool to stand in front of them empty-handed if they were to charge upon him. Maybe when you have known him as long as I have you will realize he is not a fool, about himself or any one else."

Ruth stared at her. "Unless I am greatly mistaken, Mme. Obosky, I have known Mr. Percival as long, if not longer, than you have."

"You do not know him at all," rejoined the Russian brusquely. "Be still, please, I must hear what he is saying to them now." A little later she turned to the American girl and laid her hand on her arm. "Forgive me, if I was rude to you. I am so much older than you that I—how old are you, Miss Clinton?"

"I am twenty-five," replied the other, surprised into replying.

"And I am twenty-six," said Mme. Obosky, as if she were at least twice the age of her companion. "See! They are disappearing. It's all over. Come! Let us go back to the other side."

"I am not ready to go back to the other side," protested the American girl, resisting the hand on her arm. "Why should we go back, now that the danger is over?"

"Because we must not let him catch us here," urged Olga in some agitation.

"And why not, pray?"

The Russian looked at her in astonishment. "But surely you heard him tell us to go back to the other side. You heard him call us idiots, Miss Clinton?"

And Ruth Clinton suffered herself to be hurried incontinently around the corner of the deck building.

"Once, in Moscow, I saw a grand duke confront a mob of students who had gathered in the street near his house. They were armed and they had come to destroy this man himself. There were hundreds of them. He walked straight toward them, his head erect, his shoulders squared, and when they stopped he spoke to them as if they were dogs. When he had finished he turned his back upon them and walked away. They might have filled him with bullets, but they did not fire a shot. At the corner he entered his carriage and disappeared. And then what did he do? He fainted, that grand duke he did. Fainted like a stupid, silly young girl. But while he was standing before zat—that mob of terrorists he was the strongest man in Russia. Nevertheless, he was afraid of them. You have therefore the curious spectacle to perceive, Miss Clinton, of one man being afraid of hundreds, and of hundreds of men at the same time being afraid of one. Man, he is a queer animal, eh?"

It was not long before the doubts and fears of all on board the Doraine gave way to a strange, unnatural state of exhilaration. It represented joy without happiness, relief without security, exultation without conviction, for, after all, there still remained unanswered the question that robbed every sensation of its thrill. While they were singing the hymns of thanksgiving in the saloon that night, and listening to the fervent prayers; while they ate, drank and were merry, their thoughts were not of the day but of the morrow. What of the morrow? In the eyes of every one who laughed and sang dwelt the unchanging shadow of anxiety; on every face was stamped an expression that spoke more plainly than words the doubts and misgivings that constituted the background of their jubilation. They had escaped the sea, but would they ever escape the land? Had God, in answer to their complaints and prayers, directed them to a land from which the hand of man would never rescue them? Were they isolated here in the untraversed southern seas, cast upon an island unknown to the rest of the world? Or were they, on the other hand, within reach of human agencies, by which the world might be made acquainted with their predicament?

Uppermost in every mind was the sickening recollection, however, that for days they had ranged the sea without sighting a single craft. They were far from the traveled lanes, they were out of the worthwhile world. Hope rested solely on the possibility that the hills and forests hid from view the houses and wharves of a desolate little sea town set up by the far reaching people of the British Isles.

The story of Percival's achievement was not long in going the rounds. It went through the customary process of elaboration. By the time it reached his ears, through the instrumentality of Mr. Morris Shine, the motion picture magnate, it had assumed sufficient magnitude to draw from that enterprising gentleman a bona fide offer of quite a large sum for the film rights in case Mr. Percival would agree to reënact the thrilling scene later on. In fact, Mr. Shine, having recovered his astuteness and his courage simultaneously, was already working at the preliminary details of the most "stupendous" picture ever conceived by man. His deepest lament now was that he had neglected to bring a good camera man down from New York, so that on the day of the explosion he could have "got" the people actually jumping overboard, and drowning in plain sight (although he did not see them because of the trouble he was having to get a seat in one of the lifeboats), and the wounded scattered over the decks, the fire, the devastation, the departure and return of the boats, the storm and all that followed, including himself in certain judiciously preserved scenes, and the whole production could have been made at practically no cost at all. There never had been such an opportunity, complained Mr. Shine the moment he felt absolutely certain that the opportunity was a thing of the past.

"No wonder he got away with it," said Mr. Landover to a group of rejuvenated satellites. "He is hand in glove with them, that fellow is. I wouldn't trust him around the corner. Why, it's perfectly plain to anybody with a grain of intelligence that he's the leader of that gang of anarchists. All he had to do was to speak to them, in their own language, mind you, and back they slunk to their quarters. They obeyed him because he is their chosen leader, and that's all there is to this—— What say, Fitts?"

Mr. Fitts, who was not a satellite, but a very irritating Christian gentleman, cleared his throat and said:

"I didn't speak, Mr. Landover. I always make a noise like that when I yawn. It's an awfully middle class habit I've gotten into. Still, don't you think one obtains a little more—shall we say enjoyment?—a little more enjoyment out of a yawn if he lets go and puts his whole soul into it? Of course, is isn't really necessary to utter the 'hi-ho-hum!' quite so vociferously as I do; in fact, it might even be better to omit it altogether, if possible, when some one else is speaking. There are, I grant you, other ways of expressing one's complete mastery of the art of yawning, such as a prolonged but audible sigh, or a sort of muffled howl, or even a series of blissful little shrieks peculiar to the feminine of the species—any one of these, I admit, is a trifle more elegant and up to date, but they all lack the splendid resonance—you might even say grandiloquence—of the old fashioned hi-ho-hum to which I am addicted. Now, if you will consider——"

"My God!" exclaimed the banker, with a positively venomous emphasis on the name of the deity. "Who wants to know anything about yawns?"

Mr. Fitts looked hurt. "I am sorry. My mistake. I thought you were trying to change the subject when you interrupted my yawn."

"That fellow's a damn fool," said the banker, as Fitts strolled off to join another group.

THE NEEDLE TOWER GHOST

the square face of the tower rose like a chiseled cemetery stone, the cloaked figure of a girl detached itself from the shadow of the balustrade and approached them.

"I—I just had to come up here from the exchange," she explained. "I got the jumps so bad down there at the board—what with another midnight coming and all—I couldn't sit still."

"Stick around, little girl," was Skelly's cheerful welcome of campanionship, "you may see the Evening Breeze catch this ghost on a plate."

A minute to 12. The photographer had his camera on the coping's top trained upon the Needle Tower across the street; he waited with finger on the trigger of the flash pan. The telephone girl stood very close to Skelly; her hand groped timidly for his. The reporter kept his eyes on the luminous face of his wrist watch. "Get ready," he commanded.

The first bell of Trinity's chime and——

"This is the hour I died."

Bang! The flashlight made day for an instant. A yell from the bottom of the pit where lay the street.

"O, my God, I saw it!" the telephone girl buried her face on the reporter's shoulder, clutching at the lapels of his overcoat, shuddering and sobbing. Skelly, the awful timbre of the voice still thrumming against his eardrums, his skin pricking with fear, seized the girl's hands and whirled her about to face him.

"What did you see? What did you see? Out with it!" He shook her roughly.

"A—a something. It was round and black—li-like a man's head poked out from a window right over there in the tower. It was looking at us—only it didn't have eyes."

"Like a man's head," Skelly echoed. "Yes—yes; quick, little girl, anything else?"

"Maybe like a man's head," she whispered between chattering teeth. "Only there wasn't any face—just round blackness. But it spoke just like I heard it on the wire last night and night before; only louder this time."

Skelly turned to the photographer who was hastily stowing his flashlight outfit.

"Rush the picture," said he, "and bring it up large to show something in a window on about the thirtieth floor." He tucked his hand under Miss Fontaine's arm and they started down the dark stairs below the roof scuttle. Where the light streamed through the glazed doors of the telephone exchange, Skelly paused. He gave the arm tucked under his confidential little squeeze.

"Say, Miss Lady, I think you're the one who's going to help the Breeze land this ghost. Do one thing more for me. When you go in there, where I'm not allowed to butt in, find out if they heard the ghost on the phone tonight the same as the other nights, and let me know, if you can."

She nodded, flashed him a breathless smile, and was gone. Skelly pushed the elevator button. The car purred its way up the shaft under the hand of the janitor. Just as it clucked to a stop there came a faint tap on the glass of the door to the exchange. The figure of a girl was silhouetted sharply there on the clouded pane; a shadow hand was raised and the top of a black finger wrote against the pane the letters, "N-O."

Near 1 o'clock a boy stumbled down a flight of winding steps into the city room of the Evening Breeze, deserted by all save the gray little city editor and his young man, Skelly. The boy spread on the city editor's desk a limp print of the Needle Tower, fresh from the hypo pan. The boss fumbled madly for his spectacles.

"Find it, Jack! Find that thing the girl called a head without a face!" Their heads bent together over the wet print. The tip of the reporter's pencil began to trace swift parallels from tier to tier of the pictured windows. It halted abruptly.

"Got it!" Skelly shouted. For the boss' eyes he ringed a sweep of the pencil tip about a window near the skyscraper's corner, twenty-nine stories above the street. There, hardly to be distinguished at first, but clear cut under a reading lens, a circular black spot bit a hole out of a window pane next to the sill. The boss had the telephone transmitter under his lips in an instant:

"Broad, nine-nine-nine-nine — Hello, Mr. Dawson, Sydes there?—Mr. Sydes? This is the city editor of the Evening Breeze—no, don't ring off; you will greatly regret it if you do"—the city editor's voice was dry as the cracking of little sticks. "You will greatly regret it, Mr. Sydes, because the Evening Breeze is in a position to explode the ghost of the Needle Tower and save your building from ruin. Yes, Mr. Sydes, we have discovered the secret. What's that? Yes, our Mr. Skelly will be down immediately to lead you to the ghost. Umph!"

"Now, Jack, make good on our bluff," the boss pleaded excitedly. "Lead this man Sydes to the head without a face—and get me on the wire the minute you discover what it is."

Mr. Dawson Sydes was awaiting the reporter's arrival at the street door of the tower, a group of gray coated watchmen and telephone inspectors at his back. The manager's face was heavy with strain. "Do you really think——" he began.

"Take me to the twenty-ninth floor," Skelly brusquely interrupted, "to the office on the front of the building nearest the Wall street corner."

Sydes meekly accepted the reporter's dictation, and led the way to an elevator. Three telephone men jostled into the car with them, and they were shot up through the black shaft. Two minutes later they stood before a dark door at the far end of an echoing corridor. Sydes fumbled with a master key.

"We've been in here already, Mr. Sydes," one of the telephone inspectors announced with a superior inflection. "Nothing here—not even a telephone."

The door swung back. Sydes turned a switch and light from an overhead onyx bowl flooded the square room. Just a plain—a very plain—office, meagerly furnished with a heavy desk in the center of a broad rug; steel filing cabinet against one wall; a hat tree, and two chairs. Against the opposite wall from the door and partly screening one of a battery of three windows stood an old pattern safe, four square and solid looking. Green shades on the battery of three windows were lowered.

"Who rents this office?" Skelly demanded. He had caught the beginnings of a sneer on the features of the manager; the telephone men were grinning and nudging one another. Sydes consulted a notebook with mock seriousness.

"Man by the name of Darius C. Olmstead," he answered at length. "Been here a little more than a month. But, if you please, Mr. Evening Breeze Sherlock——"

During that interval when the Tower's manager was skimming the pages of his note book the reporter's brain was racing. The wet print of the Needle Tower, as he had seen it on the city editor's desk was stamped on the retina of his mind in diamond cut detail: on the twenty-ninth floor above the street, corner nearest Wall street, three windows—three blank eyes—and one of them spotted by a round black cataract. There before him were three windows; one was hidden to midsash by the old fashioned safe. Why the safe before the window when there was ample wall space all about? Why——

Skelly strode over to the safe, the eyes of the others gimleting through his back. He clapped a hand on the dull nickel knob; it refused to turn. He passed down the side of the safe to the window ledge and tried to peer behind, but there was not space enough between the back of the safe and the window to permit inspection. For a groping hand, however, space a-plenty. Then men behind him saw the reporter bury his right arm behind the steel box; saw a sudden light kindle in his eyes; heard a chuckle.

"Help me move this safe away from the window," Skelly grunted. They jumped to his assistance and strained at the unwieldy bulk. It trundled slowly away from the sill. Skelly darted into the widening space, disappearing completely from view. A smothered shout, the noise of ripping cloth, and the reporter backed out into the room with a torn breadth of black stuff trailing from his hand.

"Now come and see your ghost roost, Mr. Sydes," he challenged in triumph.

The manager squeezed into the niche behind the safe. Under his eye lay the lair of the Needle Tower ghost. What first struck his eye was a tapering papier mache megaphone, hanging supported by the neat circular hole cut through the glass of the window and the stuff of the shade, and with its flaring mouth opened to the street below. From the megaphone's mouthpiece within dangled a short segment of rubberized speaking tube, torn from its nether fastenings in the safe's interior by the latter's moving.

They swung the safe further so as to bring its back under the full light. Then was revealed the full panoply of this ghost house. All the back of the strong box was of tight stretched, dull black cloth, a strip of which Skelly had torn away in the instant of his exultant discovery; at a little distance this cotton web was the perfect counterfeit of a metal surface. Out from the safe there wriggled two sets of green wires—out and down to a gap in the wall of the room a foot or so away. There, where a thin steel panel had been cut away and, behind that, a section of terra cotta tile removed, the furtive serpents out of the safe buried their heads in a nest of their fellows—the telephone trunk feeding all that corner of the skyscraper.

The heart of this devil box was simple: the motor and record plate of a phonograph; a black record disc under a suspended sound box needle; two telephone instruments with the vulcanite receivers detached and the receiver arms linked up with springs to the wires of a dry battery; and—master motor of the whole contraption—a cheap alarm clock whose puny striking arm closed a circuit instead of hitting a bell.

Sydes, on his knees before the cunning jumble, was whispering his thoughts like a man touched by the sun:

"Darius C. Olmstead—Darius C. Olmstead—You cunning, vicious little rat! This—the wireless plant you bribed somewhere—all to wreck the Needle Tower——"

Skelly was half inside the cavern of the safe, busy fingers conning the secrets of the ghost engine. A click, a muffled whirring, and out of the vault a dry, thin whisper:

"This is the hour I died."

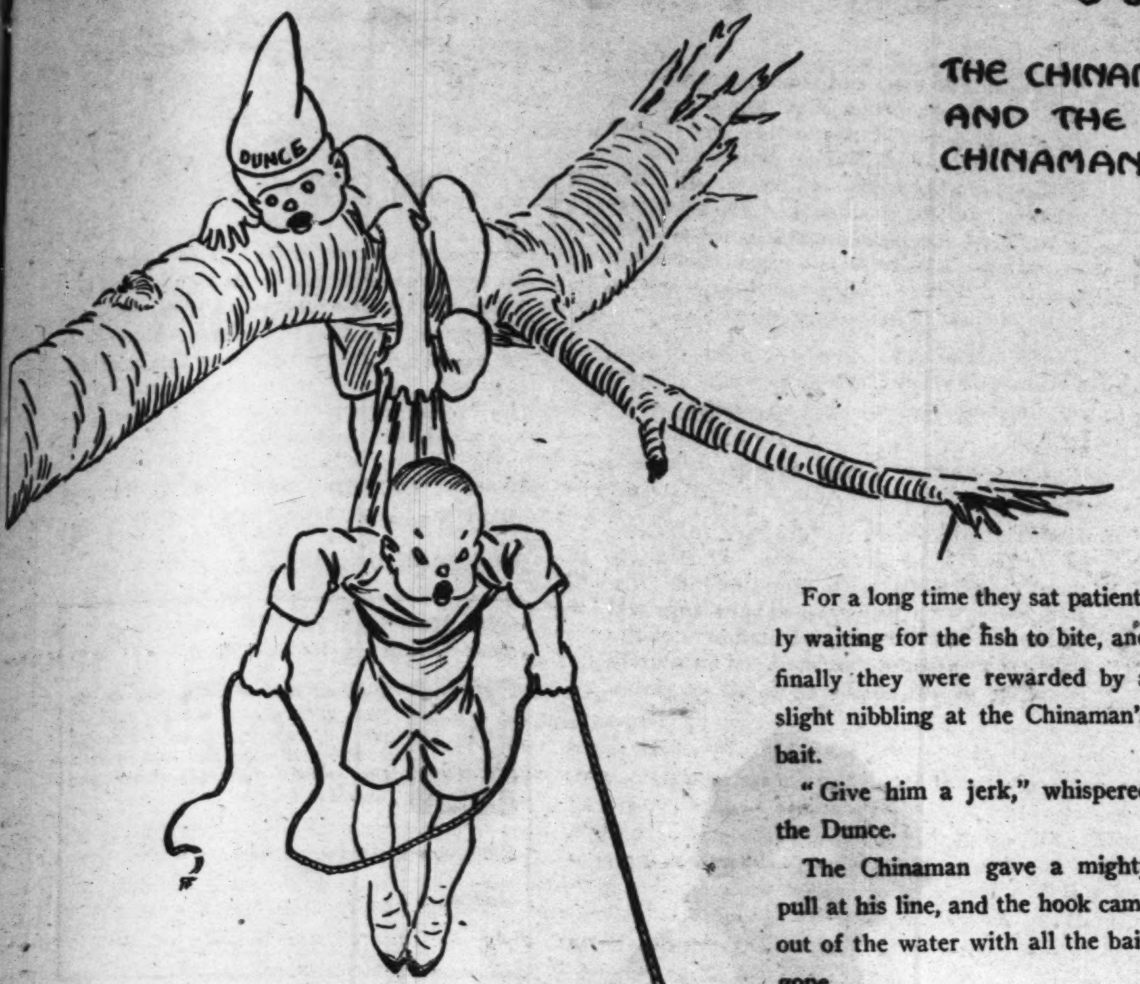
THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE CHINAMAN CATCHES A FISH AND THE DUNCE CATCHES THE CHINAMAN.

BY

Wm. DONAHEY.



"S-S-S-SAY, General," said the Dunce one morning as he stepped into the library where the head of the Teenie Weenies was looking over his accounts, "now that we have been workin' pretty hard for the last couple of weeks, can't we afford to go fishin'?

'You certainly can," smiled the General, looking up from his work. "Who is going with you?"

'Just me and the Chinaman," answered the Dunce.

"Well, be careful and don't fall in the water," said the General.

"Yes, sir, we will," cried the Dunce, and he bounded out of the shoe house like a rubber ball.

He hurried to the laundry, where he told the Chinaman the good news, and the two little fellows set to work at once getting ready for the trip.

While the Dunce made the hooks and lines ready the Chinaman put up four grains of boiled rice, half a baked navy bean, and two big pieces of cake for their lunch.

When everything was ready the little fellows set off for the creek, which ran back of the garden, not far from the shoe house.

"Where are we going to fish?" asked the Dunce when the two Teenie Weenies stood on the bank of the stream.

"Him pretty much deep water over there," said the Chinaman, pointing to a brick which lay at the water's edge. "Brick he much nice place to sit on."

"Ah, say, jimminie fish-hooks!" exploded the Dunce. "We want to catch some fish, don't we?"

"Alleite," said the Chinaman, who was a good natured little fellow. "Any place suit me."

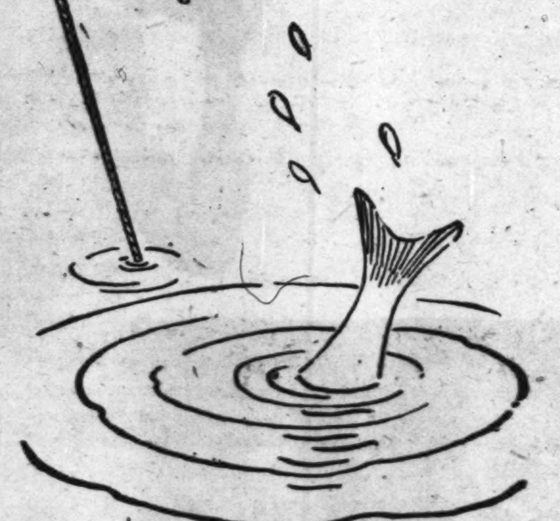
"Well, let's go down and get out on that old tree limb that lies in the creek," said the Dunce. "The water is awful deep there and we might get a big fish."

The Teenie Weenies hurried to the place where the branch overhung the water, and, first baiting their hooks with caterpillars, they climbed out on the branch and dropped their lines into the water.

For a long time they sat patiently waiting for the fish to bite, and finally they were rewarded by a slight nibbling at the Chinaman's bait.

"Give him a jerk," whispered the Dunce.

The Chinaman gave a mighty pull at his line, and the hook came out of the water with all the bait gone.



He baited his hook with another caterpillar and once more dropped it into the water, but the fish had eaten enough for a time, as he failed to nibble again.

Presently the two Teenie Weenies grew tired waiting for the fish to bite, so they decided to eat their lunch.

"Don't drop any crumbs into the water," said the Dunce as they sat eating. "If the fish get crumbs to eat they won't bite on our hooks."

"Allie same me no thinkie that fish he no in this cleek," cried the Chinaman, and at that very minute there was a mighty jerk at his line, and the poor Chinaman lost his balance and slid off the branch.

Just as he slipped off, the Dunce grabbed his shirt tail and hung on to the limb with all his might.

"HELP, CLICK, HELP!" bellowed the Chinaman as he held on to the line and watched the water splash as the fish tried to shake the hook out of his mouth.

Paddy Pinn and the Turk happened to be near, and those two little chaps soon crawled out on to the branch.

They managed to pull the Chinaman to safety, and after a great battle the fish was finally landed.

The fish was a huge minnow weighing fully ninety Teenie Weenie pounds, and the Dunce and the Chinaman bound it to a pole, which they lifted to their shoulders, and set off proudly for the shoe house.

"Who caught the fish?" cried the Doctor as the little fishermen stopped in front of the hospital.

"No! No!" gasped the Chinaman. "Me catch 'im."

"Well, you caught the fish, but I caught you," cried the Dunce.

"Well, allie same fish was on my line, and me catch 'im, and you catch me, so me think him our fish," said the Chinaman.

This drawing can be colored by using either water color or crayons.

The tree branch should be dark brown, a very light wash of blue in the background, and a little blue-green on the water. The fish ought to be an olive green on its back with a light yellow stomach.

The Dunce's face and hands should be pink, while the Chinaman's complexion should be a light tan. The Teenie Weenies' clothes can be colored to suit your own fancy.

The boy who cannot play—

because of rupture is being needlessly cheated of a part of his youth. Unable to move freely and impulsively, as a child should, checked in play, barred out of strenuous sports, losing the benefits of exercise, conspicuously inferior to his mates, such a boy is handicapped to a degree that interferes with his normal development.

Likewise the man or woman who suffers from this weakness is sacrificing unnecessarily the priceless advantages of vigor and physical well-being and security. There is no reason why anybody should suffer pain, discomfort, or inconvenience from rupture when the BROOKS Appliance is available.

Individual Treatment

The BROOKS Appliance is not to be associated in any respect with the old, dangerous, uncomfortable, unreliable steel spring truss. The BROOKS Appliance is a scientific device, fitted to your individual measurements and requirements, adapted to your specific case—as much as a doctor's prescription for a single patient. Every case is separately handled, and every appliance adjusted before it leaves our laboratories.

We Guarantee Your Comfort

The BROOKS Appliance is small, soft, pliable, comfortable and easy to wear, does not strain, irritate or cause any discomfort. It cannot be detected beneath the wearer's clothes, or by the wearer's movements.

Thousands of men and women are wearing this appliance. You may know some of them. It does not necessitate any change in your style of dressing. Women wear it without modifying their dress at all. Men wear it, and do the heaviest work, engage in the most strenuous sports, live as actively as they wish. Children wear it, and romp and play, unhindered, with other children, grow and develop as they should.

Every sort of case, severe or light, of long standing or recent, in old or young people, can be benefited by this appliance.

Free Trial Offer

Every BROOKS Appliance is sold on this free trial plan, with an absolute guarantee of comfort and satisfaction. Our thirty years' experience, with thousands of satisfied users, with the support and approval of leading institutions and members of the medical profession, has made us absolutely confident of our ability to do all we claim.

We run no chance of failure doing business on this free trial plan. We guarantee satisfaction because every satisfied, comfortable wearer of the BROOKS Appliance is an asset. If there were one that was dissatisfied, they did not get the benefits from the appliance that we claim it gives, that one would be a refutation of all our claims.

Every person who is ruptured should use this coupon. Fill it out now, mail it today!

ROYAL FAMILY ABOARD BRITANNIA. When the royal yacht Britannia competed in the R. Y. S. Big Handicap Class the King and Queen of England and Princess Mary, the Duke of York and the Duke of Connaught were aboard. The picture shows the King, Queen and Princess, the Duke of York, with Maj. Philip Hunloke and the crew at the stern of the Britannia during the racing.

THE MARQUIS DE LAFAYETTE, Marie Jean Paul Roch Yves Gilbert Motier—Tomorrow is his birthday. He was born in Chavagnac, France, Sept. 6, 1757. When he was barely 19½ years old he sailed from France with eleven companions to offer his services to the continental congress in the American revolution. On July 31, 1777, he was commissioned a major general and not long afterwards became a member of Gen. Washington's staff. He was wounded at Brandywine. The portrait, which is reproduced here, was hung in the new American room of Versailles palace on Sept. 25, 1919, in the presence of the American ambassador, French cabinet ministers, prefects, mayors, and a crowd of distinguished French and Americans. This is the youngest portrait of Lafayette, and the one which most exactly resembled him when he sailed in his own ship to fight for America. Lafayette died in Paris May 20, 1834.

AIMS TO BEAT HIS FATHER—Rather, Mr. W. Averill Harriman of New York, son of the late E. H. Harriman, hopes to beat his w. k. dad's railroad combinations by his vast maritime mergers. The son is head of the American Ship and Commerce corporation, which has just announced a big merger with the Hamburg-American Steamship line, recorded as one of the biggest in American shipping history. The agreement, which places all facilities of the German company at the disposal of the American company, is to last twenty years, and is on a fifty-fifty basis.

"THAT WELL-DRESSED LOOK"

IN buying a suit or coat to-day, we demand more than a becoming style!

This we can procure in almost any good shop, but if we are to wear that tailormade next season, there are so many more things to be considered!

Whether the style is an assured one or just the faddish whim of a moment; whether the fabric will withstand exposure to all kinds of wear and weather; and whether the suit or coat is really tailored or merely "sewn".

In buying a Wooltex Tailor-made, you buy more than a suit or coat. You buy "That Well-Dressed Look"—for the entire life of the tailor-made. No style is approved by the Wooltex Style Studios until its success can be counted upon for several seasons! The fabrics are every thread wool and worthy to play their part in the Wooltex plan.

Where most ready-made suits are machine tailored, the larger part of Wooltex workmanship is real hand tailoring! Men tailors, the best in their line, do that work which only the sure, strong fingers of men can do.

The edges can never roll nor curl! The lining is cut from a special lining pattern, not merely adapted to the fabric! The placket is re-inforced so that it cannot rip! It is this kind of a tailor-made which is real economy—a poorly made coat or suit is expensive no matter how low its price!

In looking for your Wooltex Tailor-made, ask the sales-person for "The Tailored Woman"—an authentic style magazine. If you prefer that we send it to you by mail, write us.

Wooltex
Tailor-mades

Remember, no matter how much it "looks like" a Wooltex Tailor-made, it just can't be without that Wooltex signature shown above.

SCORES FOR CANADA—Earl Thompson, former star of Dartmouth college, recently clipped one-fifth of a second from the 110 meter hurdle mark, which was established by an American in 1908. The new mark is 14 4-5 seconds. This new record at Antwerp goes to the credit of Canada.

SHE SWIMS FOR FRANCE—The lady in the swimming suit is Mlle. Susanne Wurtz, who won the annual swimming competition "La Traversée de Paris," and who, in consequence, carries the French colors to the Olympic games at Antwerp.

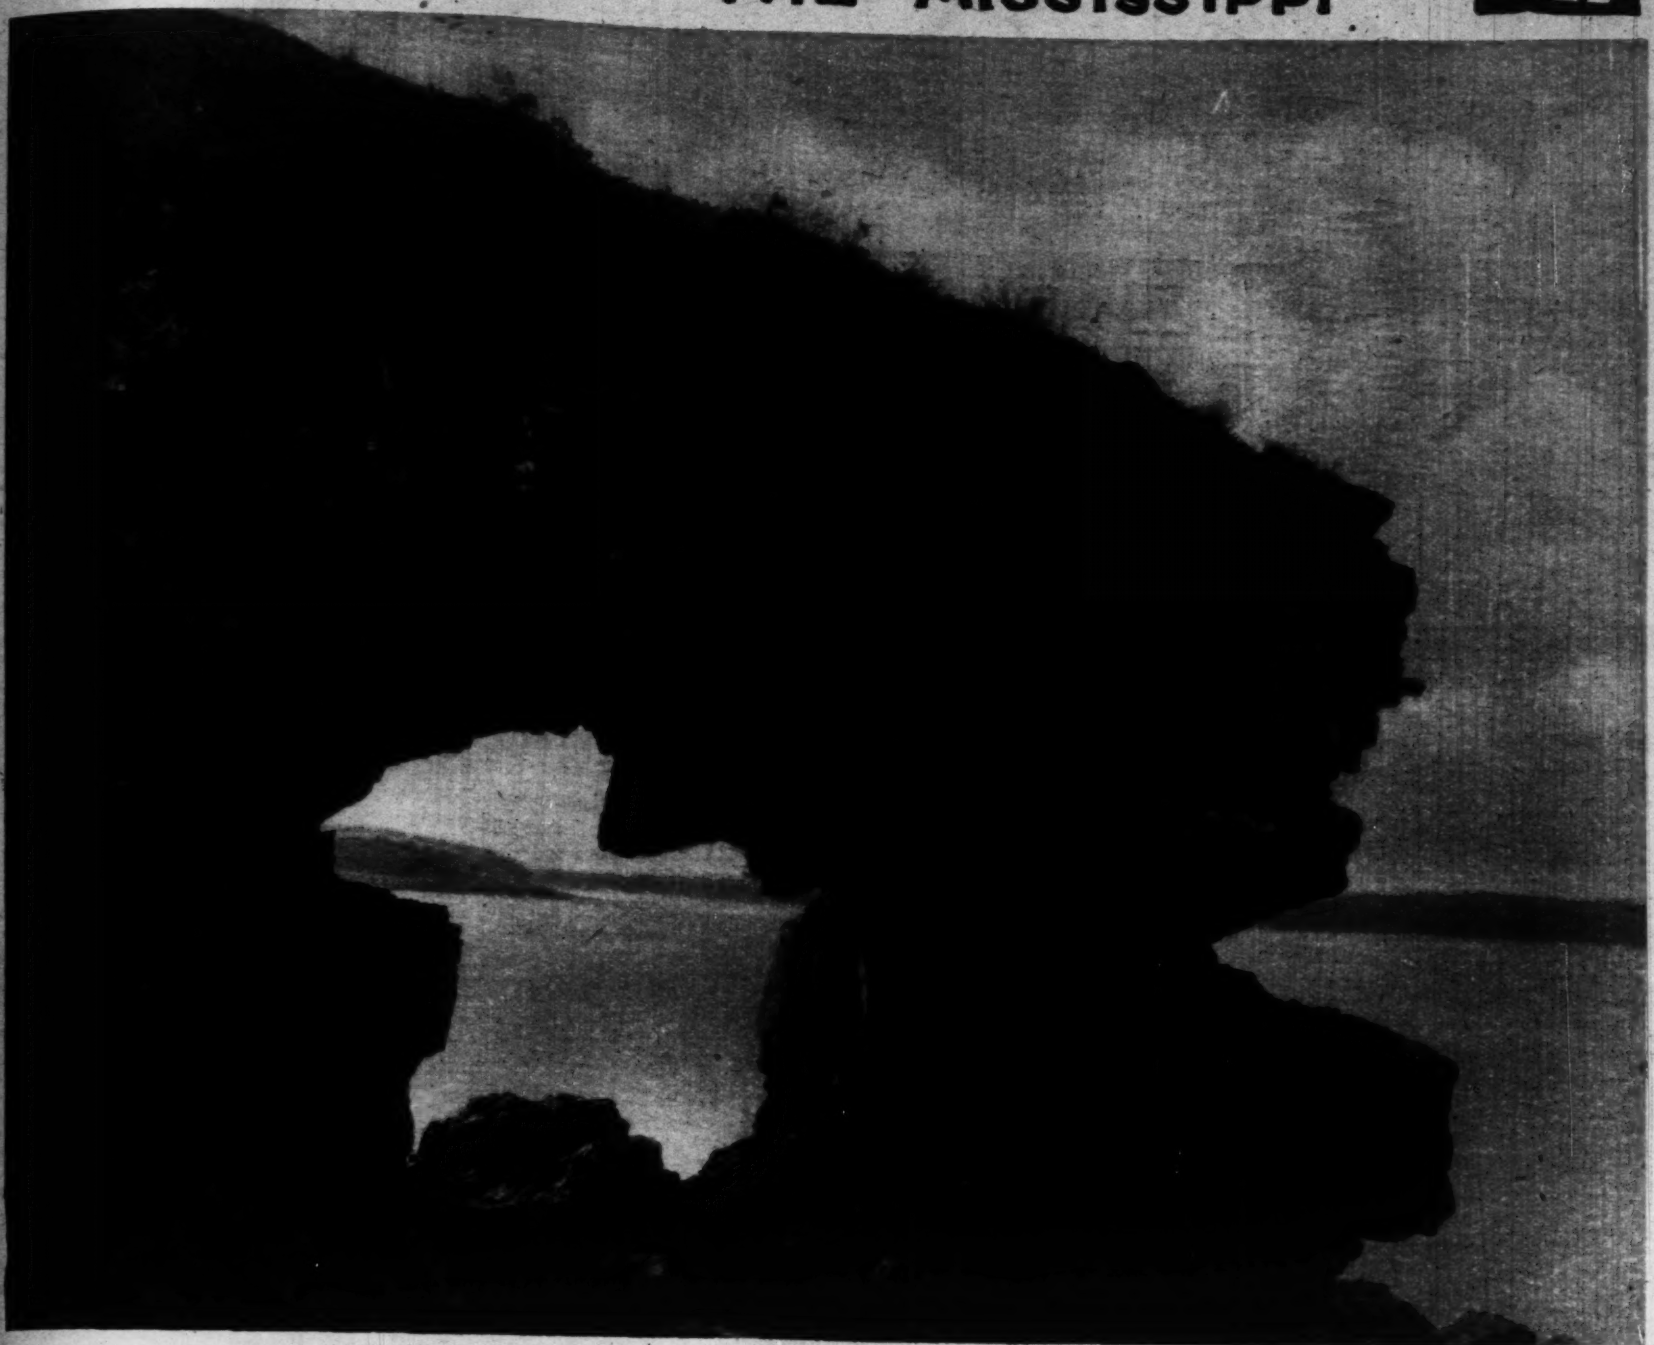
OUR ONLY NATIONAL PARK EAST OF THE MISSISSIPPI



ARCHED ROCK, HULL'S COVE, near Bar Harbor, is a natural formation of the waves beating upon the granite. It is said that Lafayette National park is the only park in the whole world where mountain and sea unite to make an ideal recreation ground. The park is on Mount Desert island and there are ten thousand acres of it. It has fifteen mountains, a half dozen inland lakes and three miles of mountain paths.

EVA NOVAK, my dears, not Jane! Looks like sister, though, doesn't she?

Miss Novak is a comparative newcomer to the silent drama. But everything she's done, she's done well—which is why Universal is now about to star her. Her first picture made for this company will be called "Wanted—at Headquarters."

The little lady is a decided blonde, and, they tell me, a bear for out of door sports. Mae Tinee.

SHIRLEY MASON has appeared in "roto" before. Which is no reason ayetall, ayetall, why you shouldn't have this cunning picture of her and the spaniels she insists do not all look alike. (Somebody had the nerve to tell her they did!) Mae Tinee.

MARY MILES MINTER attracted more than her usual meed of attention in her recent picture, "A Cumberland Romance." In it she was not only lovely to look at, but registered as a real person.

Because there has been so much talk about the picture, we thought perhaps you'd like this charming new photograph for your album. If you have too many pictures of Miss Minter, pass this one on to the next fellow. He's sure to have a honing for it. Mae Tinee.

CARMEL MYERS returns to the screen after a long absence, in "In Folly's Trail."

It's hardly necessary to give another biography of the lady. Her life's history appeared in this section once before. It was a long time ago, however, so I'll remind you that she was born in San Francisco, April 9, 1901; was educated in Los Angeles, and started her screen career under Fine Arts. She played with Harold Lockwood for a time. Most of her screen work, however, was done under Universal guidance.

During her absence from the screen she has been playing in "The Magic Melody" at the Shubert theater in New York. Mae Tinee.

Everywhere in Confident Comfort in the Franklin Sedan

Women who have driven other cars are most appreciative of the Franklin Sedan. No starting pedal to push; just turn the switch. Non-stalling motor; if you "kill" the motor accidentally the starter automatically starts it going.

No water cooling system to boil, freeze, leak, clog or fan to fail. Quick stop, anti-skid brake system. No wonder women drive confidently everywhere in a car so free from usual difficulties!

And with the certainty of the Franklin, goes equally remarkable comfort. This car is decidedly roomy for five people. It rides with a freedom from jolts peculiar to Franklin construction. No other car feels like the Franklin.

V-shaped windshield gives broader vision. Tilting front seats give easy entrance and exit. Upholstery and fittings are of the highest class. The French style hood is a final touch of distinctiveness especially appreciated by women.

When prosperity was well mounted she let go the bridle and soon came tumbling out of the saddle.
—Benj. Franklin.

Franklin economy is unequaled. 20 miles per gallon of gasoline. 12,500 miles per set of tires. Years of service, low expense.

How to get Good Shoes at Reasonable Prices

This is just the daintiest pump imaginable. Its lines are such as to make one's foot appear its very smallest. Made of black ooze of a soft suede finish, with a shapely French heel and turn sole, it is wonderfully light, graceful and dressy, yet exceedingly comfortable and will yield a substantial wear.

THE answer is to buy "Queen Quality" shoes. The styles are superb. The fit is perfection. They are utterly comfortable. They yield a wear beyond expectation.

And because more "Queen Quality" shoes are sold than those of any other high grade make, it is possible to sell them, quality considered, at prices that are distinctly reasonable.

SHOE SOAP KID

Because reputation is valued above all else, "Queen Quality" fine black kid shoes are made of SHOE-SOAP Kid. Eight years of consistent use in "Queen Quality" shoes have proved its leadership. This association of "Queen Quality" endeavor with that of the tanner and retailer enables women to obtain exceptional shoes made from SHOE-SOAP leather which they have long tested and now demand.

Beautify your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

War Discovery Changed Healing Methods

Invented for battle wounds. Quickest healing ever known for cuts, sores and boils. Wonderful for eczema, dandruff and other skin diseases.

War wounds often healed in one-fourth the usual time, by the use of the new antiseptic discovered during the war by American scientists. It overcame infection where all old standard antiseptics had failed. Over 50,000 physicians and dentists are now using it.

This same quick-healing agent, now called Kloria Tablets, provides the quickest healing ever known for cuts, sores and burns. It quickly destroys pus infections such as boils, and relieves soreness in a truly magic way.

Dissolve a few of these wonder-working tablets in water, and instantly you have a large bottle of liquid antiseptic, at a cost of but a few cents.

Kloria doesn't smart or irritate; is soothing, pleasant and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet it destroys germs on contact—is far more effective in destroying germs than any poisonous antiseptic.

In tender, bleeding, shrinking gums, Kloria attacks the germ cause with amazing results. All gum soreness and bleeding usually disappear in one week. It also makes the most effective mouth-wash for preventing tooth-decay, gum infections and contagious diseases.

Kloria makes short work of skin eruptions, dandruff, eczema, etc. Stops scalp itching—or itching anywhere. It destroys perspiration and other offensive body odors instantly. Wonderful for foot troubles.

All druggists, 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

Sample Free: Write for free sample. Learn how easily Kloria heals. Mark how it stops itching, soreness or pus infections. The results will be a revelation. Address Dept. N.

Society Fashions Beauty Contest

The BLOUSE THAT JACK FROST BUILT

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The blouse that Jack built this year must involve another nursery rhyme. Jack be nimble, Jack be quick, Jack jump over any yard stick is certainly the obligation of the designer of blouses. For if the frocks this year are nimble in their changes the blouses are just as much so.

We find in the early fall collections the fashionable high collar combined with the fashionable long sleeve. Equally prevalent is the model with short or three-quarter sleeves and low neck. All materials are used and all colors are combined. As to form, we have everything from the blouse that is long as the transcontinental express to the one short as the penny local from Heckville to Squeedunk.

Chiffon velvet is a material that is being widely utilized for the autumn and winter, and this is combined variously with georgette, meteor, and crepe satin. One of the favorite arrangements is to pose a front panel of velvet reaching from the neck line to a point somewhat below the boundaries of the tie back blouse upon a foundation of georgette or satin. In spite of a rather long acquaintance with this panel front, it is still extremely smart, and is worked out in many different combinations of fabric and color.

For example, I saw the other day a blouse of jade colored meteor exploiting one of these front panels in taupe georgette. Here the elliptical neck line and the wide ribbon sash looping at the right side were carried out in satin to match the panel. The most arresting detail of this model consisted, however, in the extensive pattern of eyelet work which traversed the length of the panel to show the jewel-like green underneath.

No, it is certainly not difficult for the camel of fashion to pass through the eyelet of embroidery. This open work, so valuable to the designer in contributing contrasts in color, has been seen this summer on everything from the sweater blouse to the afternoon frock of meteor or crepe. And now it is one of the featues of the autumn blouses.

Another avenue of trimming opened up by frocks and followed by waists is the appliqued design. What more charming than to adorn your tan velvet blouse with appliqued flowers of French blue or jade green georgette? A tie back blouse of this character reviewed recently added touches of tan filet lace to the U-shaped neck line and the three-quarter sleeves, and thus contrived to look altogether different from its many relatives.

For only the most elaborate type of blouse is the extremely short sleeve now used. Models for the usual occasion show either the long or the three-quarter sleeve. Thus the blouse at the left of this page completely eclipses the elbow. It further avails itself of the wide cuff now encountered so persistently, and combines this with the roll collar which many women are selecting in preference to the neck hedges of those "too, too French beings." The blouse itself is brown chiffon velvet, to which the cuffs and collar of sky blue meteor contribute just the right note of color.

That the blouse do certainly linger in the lap of skirt is indicated by every collection of French blouses. For dress wear the casaque, or blouse with the long tunic, occurring in either georgette or chiffon and generally beaded, is still favored by our Gallic sisters. This not strange, of course, for the old argument of the economy of the tunic blouse still applies. With one sultan of a skirt and with a harem of blouses one can certainly make a better showing than with any other equivalent outlay of money. For the advantage of the long blouse is that it requires little dexterity in making, and may be attempted by almost any woman who has passed the first five finger exercises of needlework.

A word right here about its becomingness, however. The long blouse should never be attempted by the petite or the stout. A short woman in one of these casaques is as much of a tragedy as an extremely tall woman in an empire waist. But on the woman of average height, or on her who is "divinely tall," nothing is more stunning than this fingering blouse.

The two figures in the center show you two modes of varying the casaque. The first is an openwork silk jersey carried out in dull blue with a silver gray design, and is trimmed with sash, collar, and sleeve bands of rather brilliant red georgette. These figured openwork silk jerseys which come in either honeycomb or lacy weave are being shown this fall combined with georgette or with plain silk jersey, and the effect is delightful. The slashing of the front of this garment is another detail which makes for variety. Next comes a brocaded chiffon with side loops of sash, and with the extremely abbreviated sleeve worn now only with the elaborate blouse.

Net blouses trimmed with filet lace and with embroidery have been one of the features of summer wear, and their popularity is going to be continued for fall and winter wear. Some of the newest of these are made with the very high collar and the long sleeves that recall those old waists of the late '90s which we wore when we were first practicing on blouses. They are exceedingly smart, and will be welcomed by those having elbow and throat reasons for coverings, but the young girl at least will turn more lovingly to the model at the right—one of ecru hand embroidered net and ecru filet tied with narrow brown ribbon.

And how about the popular duvetyn blouse of last winter? Some of the designers are making up this fabric now, but they are instituting changes which insure a wider acceptance of this material. There are many new designs showing sleeves of satin or georgette in combination with the pile fabric body. Not only, too, is this more practical but it gives the welcome opportunity for color combination.

Hemstitched bandings of contrasting color are frequently seen on the autumn blouses, and one observes, too, a tendency to finish off seams with some patterned fabric. Bands of batik in blue and brown shades are, for example, used to define the armhole seams of a rust colored georgette tie-back.

And, by the way, the rust color so much in evidence in the latest millinery from abroad has invaded the blouse domain, and some of the most charming of georgettes occur in this new tint.

Batik is still the hero of many a blouse play. Yet the tendency is perhaps away from the garment made entirely of this fabric to the georgette or velvet model utilizing it in front panel or other trimmings. Certain it is that the batik of this year is not nearly so brilliant in hue as that of former seasons.

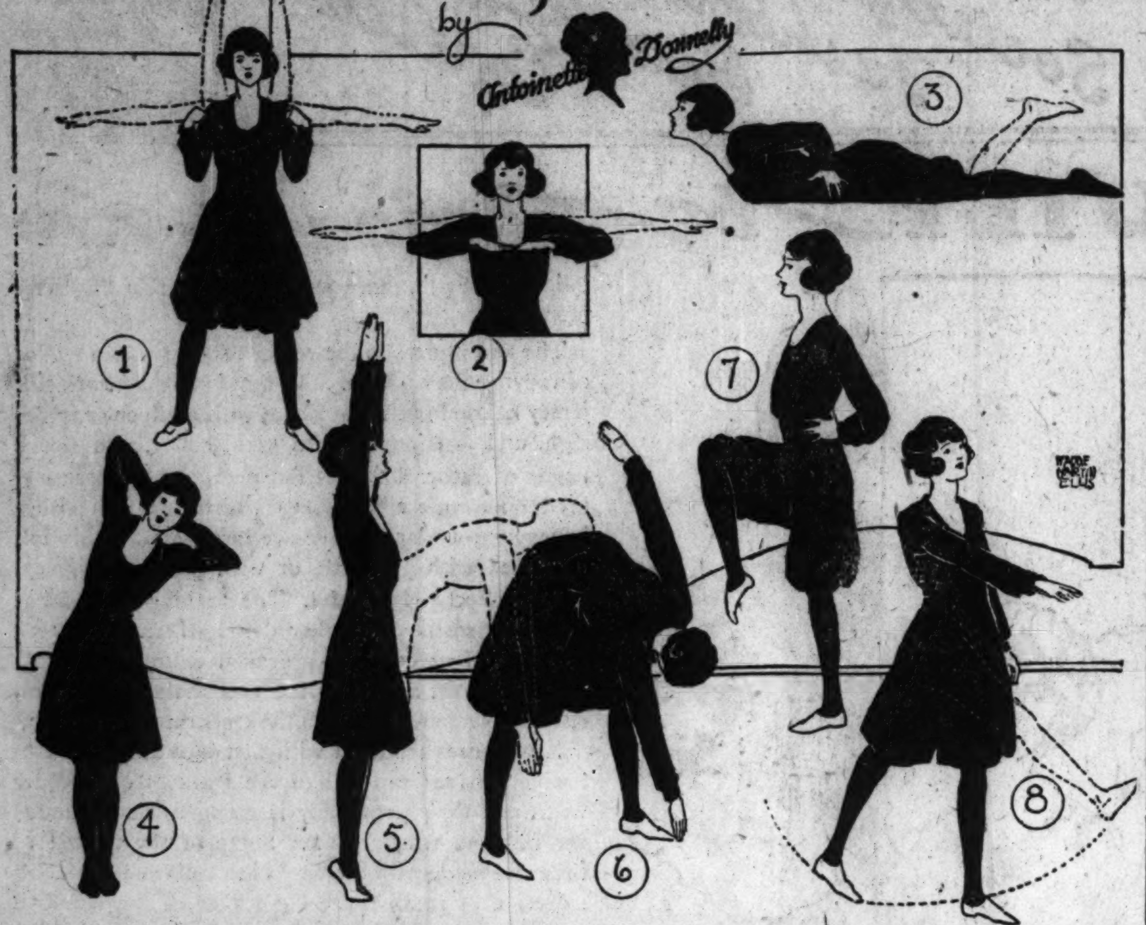
For Sedentary Workers

by Antoinette Donnelly



What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

IN last week's issue I explained the need of a certain amount of exercise daily to keep the brain supplied with new blood that it may work efficiently. As we explained then, the brain works better and longer if the body is kept in active motion, there being a direct relation between a vigorous mind and a vigorous body.

Today I present eight exercises for those whose work is sedentary, and which should be done morning and night. Begin these exercises with just a few repetitions, gradually increasing the number of times. They cover the entire muscular system, and though easy of execution will be found of value to both body and mind:

Fig. 1. Take standing position, head up, feet about two foot lengths apart, knees straight, body erect, abdomen flat, chest high, back straight, shoulders square and easy, hands down at sides. Then bring hands up to shoulder height, fists doubled and turned in. With sharp command, shoot arms straight upwards. Stretch to finger tips, and back. Do this three times at first, then to the side, stretching to sharp command; one, two; one, two—fingertips. Do these movements on and without moving the body. Repeat ten times, gradually increasing.

Fig. 2. Assume correct standing position, as described. Bend arms quickly and raise until the elbows are in line with the shoulders, palms downward on chest. From this position, fling arms outward and back with quick, sharp movement, counting, one, two; one, two. Repeat ten to twenty times.

Fig. 3. Lie face forward on floor or couch or bed, with head resting easily on flat surface, hands on hips. Raise from the trunk backward, keeping heels together and feet on floor, and back again. Repeat three times at first, gradually increasing. Then add, lifting legs at same time as upper part of body.

Fig. 4.—Stand with feet together, hands back of head. Bend from side to side as far as you can without moving the lower part of the body.

Fig. 5. Rise on toes and stretch arms overhead; bend body at trunk, and try to touch finger tips to floor.

Fig. 6. First assume correct standing position with feet about two foot lengths apart. Then stretch arms sideward. Now try to touch the finger tips of the right hand to the toe of your left foot, keeping abdomen flat and knees stiff. Then reverse, touching the toes of the right foot with the finger tips of the left hand. Repeat ten times each, gradually increasing.

Fig. 7. Get good standing position. With hands on hips, raise right knee vigorously to form right angle with trunk and at the same time stretch the toes downward and back. Repeat with left leg. Do these movements with snappy motion, five times each, gradually increasing.

Fig. 8. Stand with feet together, right hand extended. With left foot firmly planted on ground, swing the right forward and backward five times, trying to touch extended hand. Then sideward and back, five times. Repeat with other foot and left hand extended.

MRS. J.: YOU ARE LIKE THE woman who confessed she "never walked when she could ride; never stood when she could sit; and never sat when she could lie down"; then wondered why she got fat. Now, I cannot do a thing to help you until you are willing to reverse the order, and never ride when you can walk, and so on. When you get into a good, active frame of mind, write me, enclosing stamped addressed envelope, and I will tell you how to get rid of your thirty-five pounds extra. In any other frame of mind, my instructions will not help you a particle.

MARIE: IT IS HARD FOR ME TO advise what style of hairdressing is best for you, never having laid an eye upon you. Rather than that I should suggest a "coiff," suppose you study the contour of your face. Study pictures of lovely women, magazine cover girls, and lovely girl "ads" for ideas on hairdressing, and when you find a way you think right, practice that style until you perfect it. But remember, always, the basis of a lovely coiffure is clean, well-brushed hair.

FANCY HANDBAGS.

WOMEN who like to make pretty things with their needle cannot help but be interested in making one or several handbags. The variety of shapes and materials used is so great it would be impossible to describe even half of the ideas; but a few may help.

All department stores carry a wonderful variety of bag-tops; these are made of imitation or real tortoise shell, a white metal that has every appearance of silver, and, indeed, something to suit every taste. These tops are of different shapes—some straight across and others more or less oval—and they all come with small holes placed at regular intervals in the lower edge of the rim for sewing the bag to.

As for materials, there are plain satins and silks, moire silk, plain or figured velvet, and the most wonderful ribbons. So what you choose is all a matter of taste. Then there is the lining, and that would be attractive if a contrasting color is used. It may be a delicate or brilliant shade as the case needs.

Of course there are the beaded bags, but they would need a story all to themselves.

Some of these fancy bags are quite sizable, but a medium size is better looking than either extreme. Ten or twelve inches makes a good depth for a bag, and the width will depend largely on how it is set into the frame. Some are gathered, some plaited, and again some are set on without any fullness.

If plaits are decided on for the top make a box plait in the center and then fill the rest of the space on both sides with side plaits. The bag and lining should be sewed together separately. If there are any tassels to be sewed on or any ornaments put them on the bag before putting the lining in.

An added attraction will be two pockets set on the lining. One may be a small one and the opposite one may be quite large. Shirr the top of the pockets on a narrow silk elastic and stitch the pockets in place on the lining before the outside is put on.

After both parts are finished turn the top edge of each in and carefully baste together. Then backstitch to the frame. The silk thread should be waxed. This part of the work will have to be slowly and carefully done. Some use an over and over stitch to sew the bag to the top, but the backstitch seems better. If you care to do the extra work you may sew one of those tiny bands of silk flowers or any fancy braid you choose around the top on the inside to cover the sewing.

If one uses a plain material for the outside of the bag some bead work or embroidery can be effectively used.

A beautifully shaped bag is made by folding an eighteen inch square on the bias, and the bias fold will be the bottom of the bag. Then the corner on each side at the bottom is turned up about two-thirds of the length of the sides, and the raw edges on each side turned in and sewed together. This gives a flaring effect at the bag bottom, and the two turned in pieces on each side of the bag are left free to fall as they choose.

The material is then cut straight off across the top at the place where the cutting off will make it just the right length to sew to the frame. And the bag after it is sewed to the frame across the top is set into the frame at each side. This will bring the end of the point that was turned up on each side just to the end of the frame. The flaring sides sewed to the straight ends of the frame are brought in so the bag ripples some and has the appearance of fullness where there really is none.

The lining for a bag cut this way may be made on the straight, and either the same width at the bottom as the top, or it may be shaped out toward the bottom to the width of the outside, to where the fold begins.

A small ornament or tassel would look well on each of the four corners made by turning the points in, and a large, matching one could be sewed to the bottom at the middle point.

If one did not wish to go to the expense of buying a bag top a pair of rings could be used. These rings come in many beautiful colors, as well as black and white, and while most of them are round some are oval in shape. The bag is finished across each half of the top with a hem wide enough to allow the ring to slip through easily.

Margaret, the tomboy niece, was visiting us. She had gained the friendship of the girl across the way, and with their allied natures happily merged they were swinging on a sack hung by a rope from a convenient garden tree limb.

This stunt required the throwing of both legs up and around the bulk of the swinging sack, and grandma, seeing them, scolded Margaret thus:

"Margaret, don't be such a tomboy all the time!"

She replied: "I'm not, grandma, we're taking turns." G. R. G.

One day Virginia went over to visit Edna, and took Nelly, her doggie, along.

Edna eagerly called out of the window to her own dog, who was romping in the back yard: "Come right in, Carlo, you has company; Nelly came over to play with you!"

Impolitely indifferent, Carlo refused to obey. After repeating her command uselessly several times, she turned to Nelly and explained: "I guess Carlo is too stuck up to play with girls!" F. J.

My Funniest Childhood Adventure

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Had to Be Scraped.

Butchering was the event of the winter in the rural district where we lived when I was a child. All the neighbors always came to help.

It was bitterly cold, and the ground was covered high with snow. The neighbors came in bobsleds, with sleigh bells jingling.

We were all excited over the plans for the busy day. My sister rushed to the window at the sound of bells, to watch the arrival of the sleds. I rushed, too, but found I was too small to "see out."

Because of the extremely cold weather, a large stone jar of sorghum molasses had been placed behind the stove near the window to get warm enough to pour. It was covered with a large plate. I hastily climbed upon it in order to see out of the window. The cover slipped, and let me down, down, down into that sweet sticky mire of molasses. My sister shrieked with terror lest I be drowned, and poor busy mother came running. She laughed so she could hardly lift me out.

They brought in a big pan, and lifted me into it, and literally scraped the molasses off. My only pair of shoes was ruined, and I had to wear bedroom slippers all day and stay indoors and miss all the fun. Strange to say, though, I still like sorghum molasses. H. L.

Denied All Amusements.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16½ and I am kept very strict at home. I am working. When I come home from work, I ask my parents if I can go out with some of my girl friends, and they usually answer 'No.' A boy, 20 years of age, has asked me many a time to elope with him. Shall I?

"ROSALIND."

I hope your parents see this letter, Rosalind, so they may judge for themselves what deprivation of a girl's natural desire for fun leads to. It is not fair if you work hard all day to be denied some amusement in the evening, and what could be more harmless than meeting a few girl friends. But, Rosalind, dear, don't make bad matters worse by eloping, or rushing into matrimony to escape. Have patience until you are a little older, when you will have a right to assert yourself.

Age Will Help.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 14. When in the presence of girls I am always bashful and shy. Is there a remedy?

"SAM."

Don't give it a thought, Sam. Age will cure your bashfulness. In the meantime, keep yourself busy with Babe Ruth's score and your own batting average. Let the girls run along about their own business.

HOLLOW-TILE PATIO HOUSE. COURTESY OF PERMANENT BUILDERS MAGAZINE

PROVIDES FOR ALL SEASONS.

IN Britain and in the main part of France the fireplace is the heart of the home, as the local climate demands it should be. In southern Spain, the patio or open court, is the heart of the home, again corresponding perfectly to local conditions. The people in each of these regions have to prepare for one dominating season, and do it. We in America have to prepare for two such seasons. Through a large part of our country the climate is Andalusian in summer and much cooler than that of Britain or France in winter.

Is there any way of meeting this double condition?

There is, and this house shows it. It joins fireplace and patio in harmonious union. It provides for an ample, generous life at all seasons of the year.

To begin with, the house is extremely good to look at, with its balanced proportions, graceful roof lines, round arches, and wooden lattices reaching out from the stuccoed walls. It promises good things, and the pledge is fully redeemed.

From the open terrace, steps lead up to a recessed, round-arched doorway, which opens on a vestibule. In front, directly opposite the entrance door, are a coat closet and the passage leading to the kitchen. At the right is the doorway to the living room, which in turn opens on the patio, and in the working out of these two divisions lies the triumph of the house.

The living room is large, 15 feet 8 inches by 25 feet, and the fireplace on the inner wall, at the left of the entrance, is ample enough to be worthy of such a room. The light comes mainly from a fine window group opening on the terrace. In the long wall opposite the fireplace are two more window groups, and in the middle, a pair of French doors, opening on a covered porch 24 feet long by 7 feet 6 inches broad.

So far the house plans are workmanlike, but not remarkable. Here the distinctive features begin to show. This porch is not wide open to the public. It has not even the modified publicity of an ordinary garden. Instead, it opens on a patio, 16 feet by 24, inclosed

The merits of the house by no means end here. At one corner of the living room an archway leads to the dining room, 12 feet by 20, lighted from two sides. The compact kitchen is located and arranged to save steps; its entrance is at the side. Another door in the shorter living room wall opens on a rear hall, which gives access to two good sized bedrooms, and the bathroom, as well as to the stairs. Both rooms have unusually fine closets, and there is a large linen closet in the hall.

The second floor plans are not shown, but there is space on that floor for three fine bedrooms. This, it will be noted, is another house which is adapted to a growing family. These upstairs rooms need not be finished until they are wanted—a saving that will be appreciated these days.

Like the old world homes from which it draws its inspiration and which have lasted so many centuries, this house is fire resistive throughout. The walls are of hollow tile, stuccoed on the outside, finished with gypsum plaster on metal lath within, and the same finish is used for ceilings and partitions. The roof is covered with asphalt shingles.

on one side and most of another by the house, and on the other two sides and part of a third by a high wooden lattice. It is a bit of outdoors, fenced off to secure perfect privacy, and at the same time bring it in intimate touch with the living quarters of the house.

By thus making the porch a bond between court and living room, the architect has been able to unite fireplace and patio in the one dwelling with no clash between them. In summer the patio is the heart of the home. As the fall rains come on, the family retires to the porch. Soon the freezing nights send them indoors, but even when the nights are coldest they can turn from the fireplace and look straight out through the French doors to the pillared porch, and the patio with its seat against the lattice, and gather hope for the coming spring.

The treatment of the patio is a matter of individual preference. Of course, there are vines, not too rank growing ones, against the lattice. The architect has indicated a sun dial in the center, but if this is not desired nothing could be finer than a concrete pool, with water lilies looking up from it and gold fish sporting among the stems.

So built, the fire hazard is reduced to a minimum, and the depreciation virtually to nothing at all.

There is nothing to rot. Vines can clamber all over this house, and shrubs be planted against its foundations without doing the slightest damage. The cost of this permanent, fire resistive building is about 6 or 7 per cent more than if the house were built of wood.

REAL LOVE STORIES

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

AT FIRST SIGHT.

THIS is the story of my mother's love affair, and though it isn't so thrilling as other tales I've heard, I like it because it is just sweet.

Mother attended the Art institute of Chicago back in the days of '92. Often her class would go on sketching trips out into the country.

Just such a trip had been planned by six of the girls. They were all going to spend the week in a small town with a woman who had offered to let them have her house, but unfortunately at the last minute, her husband was taken ill and she couldn't have the girls at her house.

Mrs. S., a kind neighbor, heard about the affair, and willingly volunteered several rooms in her big house. She and her son were both talented in art and were in sympathy with the girls' wish to go out to the country to sketch.

It seems, however, that Mrs. S. hadn't consulted her son on the matter of having the girls come to their house (he was the head of the house because his father was dead), and having a particular dislike for girls he left the house to go and live with a friend for that week.

But the second night his curiosity got the better of him, so he and a friend came over to his mother's house for dinner.

Well, it seems he fell in love with mother at first sight—and who could blame any one for falling in love with her? She was so lovely with her clear gray eyes, rosy complexion, and great mass of curly auburn hair.

The third day of the week a bouquet of flowers was at mother's place with Joe's card, though he wasn't present.

The fourth night mother had to go into the city to see a friend, and thought she would be too late to return alone at night, so told Mrs. S. about it. Joe overheard her, and volunteered to meet her train.

Ten o'clock came and went the next night, but Joe was still patiently waiting at the station for mother. A terrific storm had come up around 8 o'clock, and mother had decided to stay in the city after all, and never once thought Mr. S. would think of coming to meet her train.

When she learned the next day that he had waited from 10 o'clock till the last train came in, I think it was from that time on that she loved him.

Father is still so devoted that he'll wait four hours for mother any time.

WHAT A QUEEN WEARS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence]—Everybody that is, has been, or ever expects to be anything is flying round trying to get in on the Queen of Roumania ticket. People are trying to get in with her, to entertain for her, to be entertained by her, to be one of those at an entertainment, to see her close up. I heard some people holding a typically excited French argument today over who had seen the queen closer up than the others when she ran excitedly like a young girl down the staircase from the performance at the theater.

I am pleased to report that in this contest for priority Americans come high. I was sitting with the queen in her salon at the Ritz this afternoon when Miss Elsie DeWolfe called up for a chat from out in Versailles. Elinor Glynn [who at last is coming to America presently] is on intimate motoring terms with her, and Lady Duff Gordon, who is about two-thirds American by this time, entertained for her at her villa in Versailles.

The tea took place in the garden, which contains fifty pieces of open air furniture, and no two painted alike. It was a lot of fun to see these perfectly representative members of an emancipated people making their little deferential curtsies to royalty and calling her ma'am.

"Do it as if you were the middle western grocery clerk calling at the house," instructed one American. "Don't' say your highness, nor madame,, but plain ma'am. That's the way to address royalty."

One of these representatives of a free people is said to have curtsied so low and so unaccustomedly that she got her hair in the tea.

The queen, a lovely looking person, with sympathetic blue eyes and wavy, light colored hair, talked in a sympathetic voice about the folk songs of her country, and a brash young American wanted to know if she cared to hear some of our folk music. He proceeded to the piano, in response to the eager look in her eyes, and played some ragtime. The queen loved it.

But for the purposes of this column, the important thing is what she wore. She is represented in the sketch as seated and holding a little dog in her lap. Her gown is of gray satin, with a long, straight line down the front that becames her Anglo-Saxon figure. The sleeves are slit over the shoulders, and allowed to fall kimona fashion, and the under part of them is drawn in at the waistline. The skirt is straight and long. The coat is of velour, old blue in color, which made a lovely combination with the gray gown. It has a collar of dark fur. The hat is of tiny cream colored feathers, with a powder puff of a ponpon over the right ear, made also of the feathers. Her majesty wears magnificent pearls.

But she was not the only one at the tea who was richly gowned. The duchess, her lady in waiting, had on a dress of tobacco colored brown trimmed in red fox fur, whose auburn tints blended with the brown of the costume ravishingly. The overskirt was banded in a wide, deeply fluffy fastened to the dress in many plaits border of this auburn colored, powdery softness, and there was a belt of coral beads. The overskirt was fastened to the dress in many plaits. The skirt descended into long points on the sides.

Mrs. Glynn wore a gown of mauve chiffon draped with Chinese flowers at the belt. The day was cool, and she kept on a coat of stiff black and silver brocade. That coat, by the way, has been a calling on three reigning monarchs, not counting its appearance at the sultan's banquet. It has waited upon—and on rather intimate terms—the Queen of England, the Queen of Spain, and the Queen of Roumania. Mrs. Glynn's hat was of black horsehair, under which her titian tresses gleamed.

TOMATO RECIPES.

IF people can in fifty years come from not using at all and even fearing tomatoes to have a perfect passion or frenzy for them, as we Americans have been described as having today, surely they could be converted to a more sane use of this fruit than exists. In a cook book of fifty years back there is one tomato soup recipe and three recipes for cooking tomatoes — all with bread crumbs — which is the least desirable of all ways —three tomato pickle recipes, and one recipe for tomato catsup.

For this latter the tomatoes were cooked for two hours with onions and peppers, then strained, and all sorts of spices and vinegar added, then the preparation was cooked twelve hours. It was set away overnight in a special fashion, and then cooked all the next day, in imminent danger all the time of burning and being wholly spoiled.

Fifty years from now, or I hope ten years from now, some of our tomato recipes will look as absurd as this old one does. It is absurd to cook all the natural virtues out of a tomato and undesirable qualities into it for the sake of modifying a certain portion of vinegar.

By the way, we have mostly grown away from the terribly unwholesome custom of using plain vinegar on baked beans and other cooked vegetables. It is no better to eat these with the flavored and spiced vinegar called catsup. A ripe tomato is a wonderfully spicy thing and does not need a " bush."

Food Acids Safe Condiments.

The food acids as nature makes them are safe condiments, although some of them are too strong without alteration to be partaken of plain. The mild ones, such as that in the tomato, have peculiar merits and tonic power. Today the baby feeding specialists give the baby tomato juice instead of orange juice as a conveyer of minerals the baby needs for maintenance.

Yet hundreds of cooks squeeze out that juice with the seeds and throw it away. All they want is a shell or cup to fill with some grubby hash mixture, naming their preparation stuffed tomato. There is then just enough of the tomato to give a slight flavor to a simple stuffing, but not enough to give flavor or palatability to some of the drab hashes that are thus extended and presumably made elegant. It is a poor attempt at glorification to squeeze the most of the wholesome, life bearing juice out of a tomato and then to add some mixture that takes the rest, and is hardly better for it, because is not capable of improvement.

Should Be Served Simply.

It seems to me that in spite of the fact that we hold the tomato in high esteem today, ninety-nine out of one hundred people who prepare tomatoes "treat 'em rough." There are a number of ways of doing this, but making catsup of them and stuffing them seem to me two of the worst. Cooking them with bread crumbs seems also undesirable to me.

By the way, in the old book mentioned there are no directions for raw tomato relishes and salads. In fact, salads are grouped with omelets, and there are but four of them—chicken, Italian chicken, lobster, and potato salad.

It would be no trick at all to find 100 recipes for tomato salads today in which this fruit is used raw. And it is also used raw in sandwiches, but cerainly there are better fillings for sandwiches than raw tomato, as there are also far worse ones.

Certain food fanatics have rather discouraged saner eaters in following the simplest ways of using tomatoes. The fanatics have used tomatoes simply enough, but not attractively. We need to make the most of the fine qualities of any food if we are to get full benefit from it.

Tomato Juice Precious as Gold.

In the first of the following recipes the juice is drained out, and at first will be as white as water, with a little color dripping out finally. Would you throw this away? Just taste of it! It is pleasantly acid, almost as much so as orange juice. If you do not like it plain try sweetening it a little. If you do not like it at first you soon will.

Even a small tomato will yield almost two tablespoons of water when drained, and this is as precious as gold for preserving health and vitality, although it might take a cup to yield a calorie. The lack of just the elements that are in that juice in the diet of human beings results in what are called the deficiency diseases.

Though the tomato cooked in certain ways, and even the unripe tomato is wholesome and one of the disease preventives, the raw tomato is better and best if ripened fully on the vines. Green tomatoes keep remarkably long and ripen to some perfection if when frost comes the vines are pulled up and hung in a dark place. Lately some one told me of picking in the middle of January the last ripe tomatoes on vines so treasured.

If we can eat our tomatoes raw and with no acid to drown their own delicate acidity, I believe we get the fullest benefit. If the skin is well washed and this removed just before the tomato is served, we have one of the most sanitary of the raw salad materials. Or let us call it a "grand appetizer," as does one epicure who is willing to walk a long way to market in order to get this stimulus to appetite.

Plain Raw Tomato Relish.

Tomatoes allowed to ripen on the vine are meatiest and sweetest and of the most delicate acid flavor. Wash and chill them, rub them all over from the blossom to the stem end with the back of a knife to loosen the skin; remove this, cut out the stem disk with any core there may be, then divide tomato into from four to eight sections, and eat from your fingers or with a salad fork. Small tomatoes may be so cut that each section will resemble a petal of a flower.

Raw Tomatoes Sliced with Sugar.

Before our salad oils were dependable and we had learned to eat mild salad dressings, tomatoes were eaten with sugar alone or sugar and vinegar. Some people like to eat their tomatoes in one of those two ways yet, especially a mixture of red and yellow ones. Peel the tomatoes, cut in rather generous slices, powder with sugar and a suspicion of salt, and pile the slices in pyramids. Eat without further seasoning, or squeeze lemon juice over.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

NEEDLESS PRIMPING.

WHEN business girls indulge a passion for primping they make themselves a source of great annoyance to their employers, who look upon the continual fussing over the details of one's toilet as so much time and energy which might better be spent on their work.

The following letter, written by a business woman who, as head of a department, has forty or more girls under her charge, places an emphasis upon the unpleasant consequences of time thus wasted by business girls:

"Dear Miss King: For eight years I have been in charge of a department in a large retail store where in normal times forty girls are employed.

"I have had very little trouble with the girls, as I have found them on the whole to be bright, easily manageable, and diligent. But what trouble I have had has been mostly on one score. If I could keep a permanent, stationary force, I believe after a little time and trouble I could eliminate this fault.

"In as large a department as ours frequent changes in the personnel take place. Girls leave to get married, take other positions, or more away from town, and they are continually being replaced. Also, in the busy seasons during the year, which cover a period of two or three weeks at a time, our permanent staff is nearly doubled to take care of the extra work. With an ever changing force like this it has been a constant struggle for me to keep the girls from wasting the greater part of their time over their toilet.

"The department has its own washroom, located conveniently on the same floor. Ordinarily there would be no regulations regarding the use of this room by the girls, but the appalling amount of time spent by them in 'dolling up,' as some of them call it, has necessitated limiting their use of it.

"I have always taken great pride in having the girls in my department appear well groomed, and have encouraged them, wherever I felt encouragement was needed, to take an even greater pride in their own turnout. But I do not believe that it is necessary for some girls to spend three-quarters of their working day trying to improve their appearance. In fact, I have learned that the girls who always look the freshest and nicest are not the ones who spend all their time doing over their hair, washing off and applying powder, rouge, and beautifying aids.

"I have had girls in my department who have felt it necessary to change an elaborate coiffure six and even as many as eight times in one day, but never in any case have they improved their appearance by it. They remind me of some fussy housekeepers I know, who, although their house presents an immaculate and orderly appearance, are continually fussing and changing and apologizing for imaginary disorder.

"I have had to limit the girls' time in the washroom to five minutes, and they have to report every time they leave the floor. I have had to let several girls go, and have put up notices in the department and in the washroom that doing over one's hair will be followed by dismissal.

"I have found the majority of girls to be very thoughtless in regard to this waste of time, and I believe it ought to be impressed upon them more often than it is how serious a matter it is to waste an employer's time in needless primping. L. R. S."

All Need Clothes.

"Can you help me just a little? We have five children, all of whom have had scarlet fever. The two boys, aged 5 and 7, are now in the hospital, coming home toward the end of September. They will both need coats; and the girls, 2, 4, and 6 years old, will need dresses; also hats for the two elder ones. I should be so grateful for anything they can wear. I have worked and worried so much that I have been ill, too, and lost the baby that was coming. When the boys come from the hospital, I shall try to go to the country for a rest. I can't buy the things I need, and I do hope I am not asking too much. I will be glad to pay postage on whatever any one can send me. MRS. R. G."

Here is a splendid opportunity for one or more cornerites to extend a helping hand. Think of having five little ones in need of clothes for fall and winter! Who can spare dresses and hats for the girls, or warm coats for the boys?

How to Use the Patterns

THE one piece apron, 9391, will delight many a young housekeeper. It is so easy to make and so good looking. Percale is one of the most satisfactory materials for this purpose, although some may prefer gingham.

When putting the seams together see that the fold from the edge of the sleeve to the shoulder is smooth, not showing even a slight tendency to twist. There are several ways that the seams can be finished—French seams, overbasted, or felled ones. Great care should be taken at the curve just under the arm, or there will surely be a tear before long. If overcasting is used as a finish it will be all right, providing the stitches are rather shallow and even.

Where the curve comes under the arm, hem a narrow bias facing over the seam, first slipping the seam in several places so the edges can spread, letting the facing extend about one inch beyond the curved place at each end. This will keep it from tearing. Some women set a two inch gusset in exactly where the curve comes, which serves to strengthen.

Around the neck and sleeve edges the material should be turned to the right side, and the trimming, with both edges turned in evenly, basted down and stitched, the neck corners being mitered.

The blouse, 9628, is not difficult to make, and is a pretty design. Be sure and not have too tight a bust measure, as there is no extra fullness on the shoulders. If made of one of the georgette crepes with such wonderful designs and colors, no trimming would be needed. The ends and sides of the sash pieces, the edges of the sleeves, and the neck could all have a picot edge.

If some other material is chosen and in a solid color, worsted embroidery in bright contrasting colors would be effective.

9758 is a pattern of a dress that will be pretty, no matter what material is chosen for it. It could hardly be more simple in design than it is, and simplicity, if the right material is chosen, makes for smartness.

For a little house dress, taffeta or satin in a plain color would make up well. Blue, brown, taupe and a soft rather dark gray are all to be worn, so what suits the woman who is to wear it is best.

The dress fastens down the front, and both sides of the skirt in the front have hems laid. Above where they are lapped and stitched together the opening is finished for a placket—using a faced and an extension hem.

If a navy blue taffeta is to be used, buy silver buttons for the front and outside of the sleeves from wrist to elbow. There are stunning ones that are in an open design and come with shanks. Mark for both buttons and buttonholes in the fronts, and then punch a hole with a stiletto, and slip a button shank through. Fasten it with a small ring that comes for the purpose, then lay the ring flat back against the material, and hold there by sewing over and over a few times with strong silk.

The buttonholes should be overcast first from the wrong side, then buttonholed from the right side, of course.

Make the collar and cuffs detachable, of white organdie, and outline the hems with a small, single feather stitch in the same shade of blue as the dress.

Having the fronts of the waist gathered on the shoulder is always becoming, but be careful to keep the gathers between the notches, and gather in as small stitches as possible. It is ugly when gathered places line in little puckers or plaits just below the seam, and this comes because the gathering stitches were too long and the gathers not well laid.

Always hold the front of a waist toward you in putting a shoulder seam together, and pin the seam together at the ends first; then once or twice through the middle before basting. Some patterns make the shoulder front a little shorter than the back, and this is an excellent thing. Most of us have more or less of a hollow on the shoulder in the front, and if the front measures, say, one-half inch shorter, pin the seam at the ends then, holding the pieces together, gently stretch the front over the fingers, to make it the same length as the back—then baste and try on. The back at the shoulder never falls in, and when put together in this way the back holds the front out straight, and a perfectly fitting shoulder will be the result.

Meant to Stop.

I had a quarrel with a friend of mine, and we hadn't seen each other for about a week. On Saturday, while I was busy cleaning house, I heard the horn of his car, and saw him go past.

He repeated his trip three times, and finally I decided to go out and wave to him. I saw him coming down the street, and started to run out to greet him. I meant to stop on the porch, but just as I waved my hand my feet went from under me, and I fell all the way down the stairs.

Of course, I was all confusion, but it really was funny, so we both laughed, which put us in good temper.

He still teases me about chasing madly to see him, but it was the means of settling our quarrel. M. K.

In Grim Silence.

We have a friend who, though not visiting us frequently, never lets us know when she is coming to see us, but always arrives unexpectedly. A peculiar habit of hers is, when just admitted, to say: "Well, the cat's come back." This expression, pronounced in a high, nasal voice, always amuses us.

One time I thought it would be a good joke to pretend I was this friend. It was during the summer and the front door was open. I marched boldly in and, imitating the nasal tones as best I could, I exclaimed: "Well, the cat's come back."

Not receiving the expected burst of laughter, I looked around to find out why. There, sitting in grim silence, was this friend, who could not possibly have mistaken the significance of my remark. J. K.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

MRS. RUDOLPH ALTROCCHI

The marriage of Miss Julia Ward Cooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley of 5318 Greenwood avenue, to Dr. Rudolph Altrocchi of the University of Chicago took place on Aug. 26. Dr. and Mrs. Altrocchi sailed on Thursday for a wedding journey to Italy. Upon their return in January they will reside at 5756 Blackstone avenue.

Mrs. Edward F. Swift Jr. of 223 East Delaware place will take an active part in the oriental ball, which will be held on Dec. 10 at the Coliseum for the benefit of the Lying-In hospital, and which promises to be one of the gayest affairs of the winter season. Mrs. Swift and her sister-in-law, Mrs. T. Philip Swift, will have charge of one of the booths at the ball.

Would You Sniff World's Best Air? Stay in Chicago

By Mme. X.

Of course, there's no air quite so exhilarating, so nourishing, so altogether delicious to Chicago lungs as that variety to be found at the lower end of Lake Michigan. It's a tonic, a cocktail, a bracer unequaled anywhere else. But every so often one has to go out into the less fortunate regions of the east, south, and west, to be reassured as to this fact.

We sniffed the airs of upper Lake Champlain, where a huge hostelry stands on a promontory overlooking wide stretches of this historic and lovely body of water. So many and such rich and fat and wonderfully garbed people were also sniffing the same air at the same time that the sniffing was't what a connoisseur would call good. Nature retires into her secret places when the crowd goes forth to seek her. You must woo her alone, or in a small and carefully chosen company. That gaudy, overfed, clamorous crowd—well, it never came within a hundred miles of the presiding spirit of those hills, or the lake.

As we were so near a foreign country we decided to take a peep at it, so we secured a permit from our country to take a short ride into Canada. In a flash the mountains sank out of sight, and we found ourselves on a long, flat road heading straight for Montreal. A fleet of automobiles seemed bound for the same port. Their occupants all looked eager, impatient, expectant, as if ahead they caught glimpses of a land of promise, a land flowing with—but there, I leave the imagination to picture with what such a land would appear to be flowing in the eyes of the residents of a country as dry as the U. S. A. We soon turned back, preferring the drought at home to the alluring liquefactions ahead of us.

Quaint Island Inn.

On the Isle de la Motte in upper Lake Champlain, we found an ancient inn and there, on plain china, in a quaint, old, lowbrowed room, we had one of the most succulent and satisfactory meals ever set before a party of hungry motorists. Such good chicken and corn and blueberry pie, the finest French chef never achieved. It was only a wayside inn, not important enough to be set down in the guide book. We were put next it by the captain of the primitive ferry which carried us from the mainland to the island.

Through the long, sweet summer day we sped across the Green Mountain state through little, old towns and across mysterious streams hurrying somewhere, though where neither we nor the streams cared. Out of the blue and hazy east the White mountains gradually emerged, serene and unchanging.

Mount Washington was more imposing than memory's picture of it, but that famous and ancient Profile was a disappointment. It did not look like the Indian chief we remembered viewing many years ago. Its short nose and long, sharp chin can only be the outward and visible signs of an unlovely nature.

Great crowds continued to infest the land, though less garish in mien and attire than the wandering tribes in the territory previously traversed by our party. The next day we turned aside at Sugar Hill to look up some Chicagoans who are summering there. By winding and intricate ways we came to the abode of the Rosecrans Baldwins set high on a hill overlooking one of the loveliest views in the White mountains.

Find Manor Deserted.

Unfortunately the lairds of the manor had both gone to New York to inspect the work on their new house there, an old, typical Gotham house, which they are remodeling into a charming, modern residence. It is situated on the east side of the city near the East river, of which they have a view from their windows. It is a region whose possibilities have been only recently discovered as a residence district by a group of discerning celebrities, like the Ernest Pooles, the Winston Churchills, the George Rublees, the Abram Pooles, and the Francis Hacketts.

Mrs. John R. Winterbotham, whose pretty mountain cottage is nestled in the lea of the Baldwin's, was also away, but the Ernest Pooles were near at hand and gave us a glimpse of their charming, rambling abode set in unkempt fields and having a wide mountain outlook. Mrs. Poole is a daughter of Mrs. Winterbotham, and Mr. Poole is a brother of Mrs. Baldwin, so the three homes make a family group.

Around a long corner of fields and scrub pines and half way up a hill Mrs. Chauncey Blair has spent the summer in a little yellow cottage. Much of the time she has had both her daughters, Mme. Ricardo Soriano and Mrs. Farr, with her. The former has now sailed for Europe with her daughter, while Mrs. Farr has returned to her home in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Blair, Jr., and their son, Chauncey III., spent some weeks with Mrs. Blair this summer.

From Columbia Exposition.

For nearly a century Poland Springs has had a great vogue among those who delight to wash away the body's harvest of troubles and pains with pure waters from the depths of the earth. On the very top of a pine-clad hill stands one of the great hotels which the gregarious frequent. It differs little from its kind, but its annex is of interest to Chicagoans. It is the old Maine building, which was one of the state buildings at the Columbia exposition in Chicago twenty-seven years ago.

The Ricker family, who own Poland Springs and have done so for generations, brought this not very beautiful piece of architecture from its setting in Jackson park and set it up again, stone by stone, on the top of their hill. They call it a library and museum, but, being evidently a thrifty family even when giving rein to an irrepressible love of Maine, they devote its second story to such guests in their hotel as can't find room in the main building.

He is lucky who is lodged in the annex. Not only does he have quieter quarters, but he has the opportunity to study, from a fine set of photographs hanging in the rotunda on the first floor, the principal buildings of the fair and the fashions of that day. There they are, the folk of that time, in their already outlandish clothes and headgear. The women seem especially fantastic in the long skirts, narrow, high-shouldered dresses, and high-perched hats of the period. But the imperishable beauty of those white palaces is not fanastic or out-of-date.

At Portland, Maine.

Although Bar Harbor and Northeast Harbor beckoned us with alluring gesture, we didn't venture further east than Portland. Had we gone on we should have had a chance to analyze the contention of those who frequent those two popular summer resorts that they are the most entirely beautiful places in America.

At the latter place Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker have taken a large house. When their yacht, the Victoria, ran on that fatal rock in the bay at York Harbor, it was at first thought the damage was slight and could be soon repaired. Further investigation, however, showed that it would require a major operation to make the boat seaworthy. It is now in the Portland drydocks, and it will be October or later before they can put to sea in it.

So they transferred their guests and ship's stewards to a roomy and attractive mansion at Northeast Harbor to await with what patience they may the yacht's repair. They keep the house full of guests, and their daughter, Mrs. Horace Gray, with her two children, is near them, so there are compensations for an accident that might have been a catastrophe.

Portland, Me., although it still is a seaport of importance, has not lost the quaint atmosphere imparted to it by its early seafaring founders. Lovely old houses line the narrow streets.

Of these the old Longfellow home is the most famous. It is filled with ancient furniture and pictures. Through it daily stream loyal Americans, pilgrims to a veritable shrine.

Antique shops abound in Portland and lure the dollars from the most obdurate pockets. Hook rugs, quilted bedspreads, lusterware, highboys, four-post beds, embroidered haircloth chairs beckon the connoisseur with insistent gesture. It was with difficulty that two collectors in our party were torn away from temptation.

From Portland to Boston.

The ride along the sea from Portland to Boston is one of the most delightful the motorist can take. A sizable Chicago colony at Biddeford Pool makes a detour there inevitable. Among others to be found there summer after summer are the William Odells, the E. W. Cramers, the Howard Gillettes.

The settlement is reached at the end of a long drive from the beaten track, around the curve of a bleak little peninsula, shaped not unlike Cape Cod. Arrived one finds a cluster of pretty cottages set in a thicket of trees, bushes and flowering gardens, with the encircling sea giving a varying background of color. There the days are filled with bridge, walks, drives, while there is a cheerful round of informal dinners to keep the social pot boiling.

Another Chicago colony is keeping the ball rolling at York Harbor, a little farther south. Mrs. Bryan Lathrop's charming house, with its feet in the sea, is noted for its hospitality. This season the Thomas Nelson Pages, former frequenters of York Harbor, are once more there, as is another ex-Chicagoan, Mrs. William McCormick. Her daughter, Mrs. Herbert Stone, also has a small house near the sea.

At the southern end of the town Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham, and her sister Miss Gertrude Hall, had a delicious cottage this summer. The former has for several seasons been an active member of the Harbor's society, as she has been one of the promotors and directors of the library there which is the chief rendezvous of the place. Tea and music every afternoon bring the social elements together at the library.

At the big hotel of the place others of our fellow citizens delight to foregather. Miss Frances Keep and Mrs. F. C. Letts were the last of this coterie left there when we rushed through the place. Frank Cramer, a regular patron there, having gone to Hyannisport to visit the George Paysons.

A New England Delicacy.

"The undevout gastronomer is mad" said the devout one. The undevout one might ask in his unregenerate state wherein lay the special joy of eating steamed clams, considered the great delicacy of the New England coast. This poor-spirited and tasteless mollusc is brought to the table in its unappetizing shell; dozens of him are set before one. The eater is expected to grasp the creature by a most unattractive black snout or sack which is supposed to contain all the inedible portion of the clam [in itself an pnpleasant idea] and so tear its remaining flabbiness from its shell bed.

Most of it stuck fast when the writer adventured on the gustatory treat. What you drag off must first be washed off in a cup of clam juice and then thrust into another cup of melted butter. Your enjoyment depends almost entirely on the quality of the butter, as the only thing you taste is the butter. The condition of the fingers at the close of such a feast can better be imagined than described. All the spices of Araby are needed to eradicate the perfume of the clinging coagulation called a clam.

But did we confess our real sentiments in the country of steamed clams? We most emphatically did not. It were better to criticize the ten commandments, or to question the desirability of the constitution as a national guide than to comment unfavorably on this New England delicacy on its native heath. This in no way casts discredit on the charms of the Little Neck clam, a most delectable addition to any banquet.

Speak in Language Clear.

It was delightfully like Boston to find that their pay-as-you-enter cars are designated as "prepayment cars." It's a much shorter, better way than ours, having, as a matter of fact, just as many letters as our notice, but closer bunched together, but isn't it Bostonese?

And what agreeable, well-spoken men the Boston police are! They answer your questions as if it were a pleasure to give you information, not as if you were deliberately trying to insult or obstruct them at their work as some police in other more western cities have been known to do.

When this agreeable experience was related to a Bostonian he explained it by the fact that after the strike among the Boston police last year, when all the striking police were discharged from the force. To replace them the city officials went outside of the city and ransacked the state for successors. They collected the finest lot of men ever gathered for such a service, many of them soldiers in the great war and all of them, or nearly all, native born New Englanders. They are an exceptionally good looking lot of men and in speech and manner are quite equal, if not superior to the London "Bobby," who is generally considered the most efficient of his kind in the world.

All through New England the tourist is impressed with the superior manner of speech of the natives. When you ask a question of a passerby in the farming districts or of an aborigine in the fishing towns, though the answer may be slow in coming and not very helpful when you get it, it will be spoken with a refined, clear-cut enunciation, and an excellent accent unknown in the west. We are slovenly in our manner of speaking, and are tolerant of many misuses and abuses of our language, to the disaster known as the western way of speaking. You find it everywhere, in homes, business, and worst of all, in our schools, where little or no heed seems to be paid to the sanctity of the English language.

Shadows of Coming Events.

It is good news to their many friends that Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ryerson, have taken Edward Blair's handsome gray stone house on the Lake Shore drive for the winter. Mr. Blair is planning to spend the winter in France, probably at Pau, while his daughter, Miss Edith Blair, has taken a small apartment in New York for the season. The Blairs will be a distinct loss to Chicago, as theirs was a very hospitable house.

Bright harbinger of the gay season is the announcement that the Casino is now open. Soon the Arts club will also be ready for its members, and before you know it the world that amuses itself will be treading the same old path, singing the same old songs, telling the same old stories, and so on ad infinitum.

Preparing for Primaries.

Meanwhile women prominent in both social and political circles are organizing a crusade to fight what they consider the powers of darkness, to-wit: The Thompson Tammany machine. At the moment it looks like David challenging Goliath. The outcome of that historic conflict has been an incalculable aid in many a seemingly one sided battle.

Mrs. Medill McCormick, Miss Harriett Vittum, Mrs. Fred Upham, and Mrs. Turley are getting up meetings all over the city and are actively promoting a city-wide house to house campaign to inform citizens—especially women—as to the issues involved and to urge the new voters to show their power and their intelligence at the primaries Sept. 15.

Any women wishing to help in this immensely important campaign can notify the Republican headquarters, room 1228 in the Congress hotel. Among those following Mrs. McCormick's banner are Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Robert Hamill, and Miss Agnes Foreman.

Shoes That Help the Arch

Ordinary shoes throw most of the weight on the inside of the foot, where the arch is weakest. But Cantilever Shoes distribute the weight over the heel, the ball of the big toe, and the outside of the foot. This perfect balance spares the arch.

This balance, too, encourages an easy, graceful carriage, and makes walking a pleasure.

These comfortable shoes strengthen the arch. Metal appliances and ordinary footwear with rigid soles restrain the muscles and weaken the foot. But when the Cantilever Shoe is laced, the flexible shank is drawn up to comform to the curve of the instep. And in walking the flexible shank yields with every movement of the muscles. Thus, free to exercise, the foot grows strong. It is in this way that Cantilever Shoes prevent and correct fallen arches.

Trim lines, good looks, fine leather. Widths from AAAAA to EE. Write for booklet.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Charles H. Gabriel Jr.

THIS week will probably see the publication in America of the official report of the proceedings of that most important conference of the bishops, metropolitans, and bishops of the Holy Catholic church with the Church of England, recently concluded at Lambeth palace, London. The report has already been issued in London.

According to word from England and from local ecclesiastics who have returned to Chicago from the conference, the subject that overshadowed others was that of the reunion of churches. The theorem debated was the need for interchurch communion in imitation of the league of nations in the light of its uniting the [illegible] world.

The subject was introduced in the first session of the conference, and subsequently a committee was appointed to prepare a report. This was done and the publication of the report will appear here shortly.

The report is prefaced by "an appeal to all Christian people to meet the demands of a new age with a new outlook."

"The vision which rises before us is that of a church, genuinely catholic, loyal to all truth, and gathering into its fellowship all who profess and call themselves Christians, within whose visible unity all the treasures of faith and order . . . shall be possessed in common and made serviceable to the whole body of Christ," the preface reads in part.

"We believe that the visible unity of the church will be found to involve the whole-hearted acceptance of:

"The holy scriptures, as the record of God's revelation of Himself to man, and as being the rule and ultimate standard of faith, and the creed commonly called Nicene, as the sufficient statement of the Christian faith, and either it or the apostle's creed as the baptismal confession of belief.

"The divinely instituted sacraments of baptism and the holy communion, as expressing for all the corporate life and the whole fellowship in and with Christ.

"A ministry acknowledged by every part of the church as possessing not only the inward call of the spirit, but also the communion of Christ and the authority of the whole body."

The appeal is directed both to the orthodox church of the east and to the great Roman communions of the west and also to the free churches, so-called, of the Anglo-Saxon races. The ecclesiastics do not contemplate a loose federation, but a real organic unity based on the fundamentals above set out.

Christian Science, theosophy, and spiritualism are classed as "incompatible with fundamental church doctrine" in the report.

Regarding spiritualism, the report says, in part: "While prepared to expect and welcome new light from psychical research . . . we urge strongly that a larger place be given in the teaching of the church to the explanation . . . of eternal life and immortality. Grave dangers are seen in the tendency to make a religion of spiritualism."

Julius Rosenwald has made an offer, good for two years, to contribute $25,000 towards the erection of a Negro Y. M. C. A. in the United States, the ultimate cost of which shall be $125,000 or more. Mr. Rosenwald has contributed a total of $350,000 during recent years for similar undertakings.

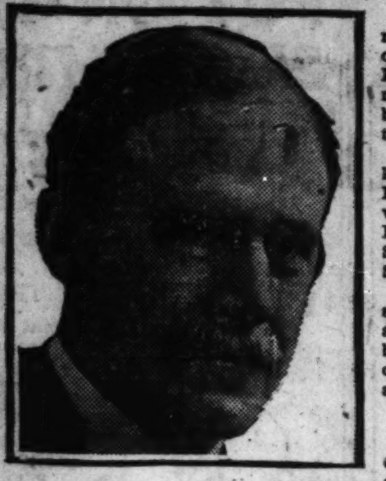
Nine Catholic American women sailed last week to attend the International Council of Women conference at Christiana, Norway, which is to be held Sept. 8 to 16. Thirteen million women will be represented. Included in their plans is a reception by Pope Benedict.



The REV. WALTER C. SCOTT

Dr. Walter C. Scott, pastor of the Sheridan Road Methodist Episcopal church, returns to his pulpit today. Dr. Scott spent a large part of his vacation sitting in the courts and visiting jails and other institutions for the criminal, and will speak of his experiences tonight. Dr. Scott also traveled extensively through the northern part of the country, attending I. W. W. meetings and other radical gatherings to obtain material for his work.

A week's mission at St. Bonaventure's Catholic church opens today, the Rev. Fr. Stanton opening the services.

The Rev. Walter Henry North, Congregational minister, formerly of Billings, Mont., has been appointed to the pastorate of the Warren Avenue church, and will enter upon his new duties, preaching his initial sermon next Sunday. The church has been newly decorated in honor of the event.

The Rev. Josiah Sibley, D. D., who recently acted as chaplain of the Democratic national convention at San Francisco, will preach his initial sermon this morning at the Second Presbyterian church, he having accepted that pastorate.

Dr. Sibley has been pastor of the leading Presbyterian church in San Francisco for the last six years, and was formerly president of the San Francisco Church federation. Mrs. Sibley is a daughter of former United States Senator Webb of Tennessee.

This morning he will preach on the subject, "Facing the Long Trail," and at the evening service his address will be "Has the Church Any Just Concern for the Relations Between Capital and Labor?"

The political advance made by the Catholic church since the war is evidenced by a recent act of the German republican government which, for the first time since the creation of the empire, has received a papal nuncio.

News has also been received by local dignitaries of the church that the long conflict with civil power in Italy has closed and the Catholic citizen in that country now is permitted to vote.

The vatican has regained in France full diplomatic service. The French have also accepted the protection of Catholic interests in the far and near east.

The Unitarian church is planning a drive for a large sum of money this fall. The amount has not been made public, but the committee, which includes former President William Howard Taft as its honorary chairman, will shortly be published. The drive will not only approach Unitarians but will be directed to "friendly citizens" of any creed.

Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, federal prohibition enforcement officer, will speak in the Austin Avenue Baptist church, North Central avenue and Iowa streets, today at 3:30 p. m. on the subject, "Government by the Brewers or by Law."

ITS EXCEPTIONAL FOOD VALUE

ECONOMY RECIPE I.
Fortune Macaroni Italienne
Fortune Macaroni, Spaghetti or Egg Noodles can be used in this recipe.
INGREDIENTS:
¾ lb. Fortune Macaroni; 2 tablespoons salt; 3 tablespoons ham fat or butter substitute; 2 tablespoons chopped onion; 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper; 1½ cups tomatoes; 4 oz. grated cheese.
Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Rinse in hot water. Melt fat in a frying pan, add onion and pepper and cook slowly 5 minutes. Add tomatoes and cook 8 minutes. Strain this mixture into the macaroni, let it stand on the back of the stove where it will cook slowly for 10 or 15 minutes. Stir in the cheese just before serving.
FOOD VALUE:
Above dish contains 6 servings. Costs 49c. Its food value is 2138 calories. 49c will buy 12 oz. beef of 480 calories, or 17 oz. pork of 928.5 calories, or 17 oz. mutton of 765 calories.

FORTUNE MACARONI

Some foods taste good but have slight food value. They contribute little to the nourishment of the human body.

The food value of wheat has been recognized since the time of Adam. Nothing can take its place. Now, as then, it is "the staff of life."

Fortune Macaroni is all wheat, the heart centers of the finest grown—durum Semolina. It is rich in all the elements which nourish and sustain human life.

And it is delicious in all of the many forms in which it may be prepared.

Make Fortune Macaroni a part of the everyday meal. It will help to reduce living expenses.

Your dealer carries Fortune Macaroni, Spaghetti and Egg Noodles.

RESORTS AND HOTELS RESORTS AND HOTELS

PUT ON THE BRAKES BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE!

You owe it to yourself, to your wife and family, to meet this "all-absorbing" high cost of living problem face to face—to give it a smash before it gives you a smash

YOU ARE PAYING THE BILLS, but there are nine chances out of ten that your wife is doing the worrying. How long are you going to stand the gaff? Apartment and house rents are due for another sky-rocket flight next month, coal is going to take a jump, the milkman is going to get his share, there's no drop in the prices of foodstuffs that you can see with a microscope, servants' wages are twice and three times what you paid two years ago, and they've tacked a substantial raise on the street cars and the elevated. You get one suit of clothes or one pair of shoes for the price you paid for two before the war, and the same applies to the clothing of the missus and the kids. Your monthly pay check is squeezed to the very last penny—you know it.

Fireproof---450 Rooms

Stop and think! Has it occurred to you that you could take your wife and family into a first-class hotel—that you would save money and save worry—that you could cut your cost of living nearly fifty per cent?

LET US SHOW YOU WHAT WE HAVE AT THE LEXINGTON HOTEL
(Michigan Blvd. at 22nd St. Walking Distance to the Loop)

Attractive Rooms at Rates So Low That They Will Astonish You

ASIDE from cheerful service we offer you exceptionally large, airy rooms at rates considerably lower than they were a year ago. We have fewer than fifty rooms now available for permanent guests. This number will fill the quota for this class of trade—we must have a certain number of rooms for our commercial patronage. Bear in mind that the Lexington is now modern in every detail—that nearly $200,000 has been spent in a year to bring the hotel up to its present high standard. All of the rooms are prettily furnished, attractively decorated, light, large and airy. And there are 3 moderate priced cafes.

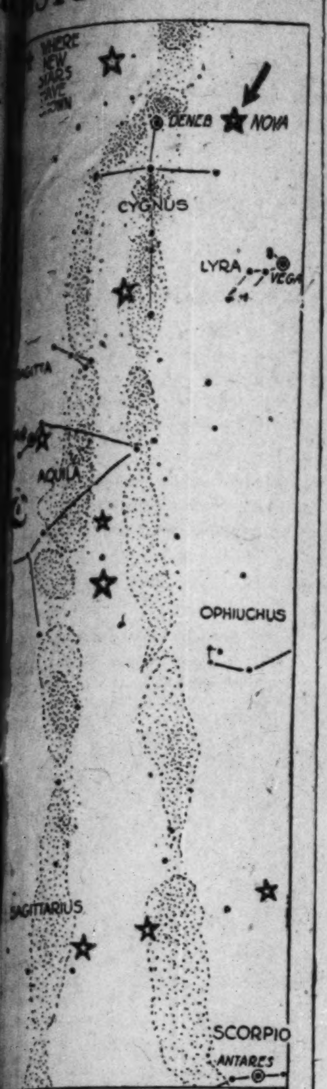
ASTRONOMY



NEW STAR FIELDS IN THE MILKY WAY
ARROW SHOWS THE PRESENT NOVA
BY S. F. MAXWELL

LOCATING NEW STARS.

A NEW star has appeared in the constellation of Cygnus. You can see it tonight if you will face east and look high up. The nova makes a rough quadilateral with the three northernmost stars of the northern cross (as Cygnus is sometimes called). When it first appeared, it was second only to Deneb, but now it is slowly fading, and consequently is the dimmest member of the group. The map may be of aid in locating it.

The spectacle of a star suddenly blazing out where there was none before, and then slowly sinking back to obscurity and often to darkness excites the imagination. What could cause such a burst? Stars are huge objects, frequently more than a million miles in diameter. What could ignite so vast a body; and once ignited, why does it dim so quickly? The answer to these questions reveals one of the most startling chapters of astronomy.

New stars appear with little warning. The spot may be totally dark, and in a few hours the star will mount from utter invisibility to first magnitude. More often there are a few forerunning red flashes, rapidly gaining in intensity, until at the great burst, the light turns clear and white. When at this stage the spectroscope reveals the substance of the star to be the state of white hot solids and blazing vapors. As the crest of brilliancy passes, numerous colored gases appear, constituted mainly of hydrogen, which suggests incandescent water, soda, helium, and nebula. At length these also fade, leaving only a field of glowing nebula.

New stars only appear in or near the Milky Way, and by preference, it seems, in those dull starless areas we call the coal sacks. There are places in these dark star fields in Cygnus, Aquila, and Ophiuchus that are veritable stellar grave yards, so great is the number of novæ which have appeared there.

There are dark suns wandering in space. We seldom get a clew of their presence except when they chance to be near some bright star, or else go to their destruction in a cloud of meteoric stones. After a sun has outlived its brilliancy, and has grown dark it still continues to plunge along, a phantom monster hurtling through the gloom.

It bears on and on for ages, until at last it encounters one of these vast meteor swarms, flung out like snares to catch the stars. As it strikes, the stones pelt it with a fiery rain. At first the star's air can keep them off, but this protective envelope is whipped off soon and the naked rocks must bear their force.

A meteor rushing through the molecules of air is burned to powder by the friction. In a like manner the meteors pound and churn and tear upon the substance of the star, until it is completely broken, and nothing is left but tossing banks of dust and nebula, like buoys in the sky, to mark the spot where the tragedy occurred.

H. C. F.: Sunlight travels from the sun to the earth in eight minutes. It requires four years and four months to come to us from the nearest star. A light year is the distance light travels in one year.

Halley's comet is not getting nearer the earth at each trip around the sun, so far as we know.

The smallest planet is Mercury, 3,000 miles in diameter. It is also the closest planet to the sun.

Dearborn observatory, Evanston, Ill., is open to the public every clear Thursday evening from 8 to 10.

Everybody's going!

WE prophesied that 1920 would be the greatest year in the history of the screen. It was—and is!

Never before were there such pictures as:

Cecil B. DeMille's "Male and Female" and "Why Change Your Wife?", George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man", John Barrymore in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde", George Fitzmaurice's "On With the Dance!", "Everywoman", directed by George Melford, William D. Taylor's "Huckleberry Finn", and William S. Hart in "Sand".

All these are Paramount Pictures, and there were 100 more just as good.

Paramount has 104 even finer pictures in store for you in the new season that opens on September 5th. The theatres that will show these new Paramount Pictures in the twelve months to come are inviting you to join in the celebration.

Paramount Week is the time when there is proof a-plenty that there is an abundance of good pictures. It marks the opening of the fall season—the refreshing indication that the hot weather is over and the best show-time of all the year is here again.

At all these theatres, all this week—Paramount Pictures will be shown critical selection and consistent blending combined with skillful roasting is responsible for the smooth, aromatic deliciousness of Savoy Coffee.

The new Savoy container, especially designed to protect Savoy quality

TO further assure this quality, Savoy is freshly roasted each day and delivered in small quantities to the best stores.

Savoy Coffee comes direct to us from the world's best coffee plantations. The high altitude where it is grown and the snap and crispness of the climate, create a flavor not found in ordinary coffees.

By long experience our experts have learned how to blend and roast these wonderful coffees, creating a blend so satisfyingly mellow and so uniformly fine in flavor that it has made thousands of friends for Savoy.

The economy of Savoy Coffee is twofold; its reasonable price and perfect freshness make possible many more cups per pound.

Try a package of Savoy Coffee. It will banish any uncertainty as to the quality of coffee you serve. You and your family will surely prefer it over other coffees you have used.

Be sure and ask for it by name.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

ALTHOUGH Mr. George V. Hobart may not know it, he has been the subject in this column of more disfavor than any other artist of the theater. None of his product, until now, has pleased its several editors, and they have all endeavored, through the futile medium of anathemas and derision, to make him as melancholy as he has made them by his compositions for the stage. They now desire to amend, if not to withdraw entirely, the more outrageous of their upbraidings. They have been to see his "Buddies" at the Woods, and have found it to be one of the most pleasing of the sentimental pieces, with or without music, to reach the theater from the war.

Enjoyment of the play requires, of course, a susceptibility to romantic impulsions of military adventure. And for many of us that quality has become jaded. Nothing, however, save good sense is needed to enjoy the ministrations of Miss Peggy Wood, who as the heroine, a peasant belle of Brittany, is a fine actress, a good singer, a winning personality, and a pretty girl. Mr. Hobart and his unpopular topic are helped also by a remarkably competent acting-choir of non-coms and buck privates; by the masculine, quizzical, and high stepping Mr. Brian; by an excellent player, Edouard Durand (as the rascal of the piece), and by Ralph Morgan, who is, perhaps, a trifle too much of a booby as the bashful hero to be accepted as a member of the musical comedy A. E. F. All of them make us feel apologetic to Mr. Hobart, the author, for past abuse and villification; but Miss Wood causes us fairly to grovel.

A message from overseas to this morning's New York Times has it that E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe in the course of their transcontinental Shakespearean tour last season profited to the extent of $250,000. Thus dowered Mr. and Mrs. Sothern will spend a restful year at their home in suburban England, looking forward to a return in Shakespeare the season after this.

Gertrude Elliott, who has been acting "Come Out of the Kitchen" and other plays in London, is to return to America during the coming season. She will bring with her a comedy entitled "The Advocate," the work of Beatrice Heron-Maxwell.

THE adventures of the new firm of producers composed of Mr. Byron, the actor, and Mr. Marshall, the architect, begin not unauspiciously. "Transplanting Jean," in which they take their first step at Powers', has given them a plump treasury by way of encouragement; and if its audiences have found no great ecstasies in its performance they at least have had no cause for dissatisfaction.

"Transplanting Jean" is a place for those who delight in Mr. Byron's humorous and easy graces as a lover of 50 or thereabouts. His way with women is the earnest, gentle, and amusing one, and no matter how infinite his passion it seems to possess a physical delicacy not to be found in the woolngs of, say, Mr. Ditrichstein's ample satyrs. In "Transplanting Jean" Mr. Byron shows a rosy past and a none too pious present. He becomes virtuous, not from motives of morality but because his youthful sweethearts, when they kiss him, examine with amusement the silver hair around his temples. Besides, he begins to perceive an autumnal duty toward his natural son—the son whose sweetheart at the end he courts and wins.

A pleasant trifler, and Mr. Byron makes him even more pleasant. The trouble with the entertainment, if there is any trouble, is that in its adaptation from the French it becomes rather an awkward mongrel, neither one thing nor the other. American actors in French rôles and in French situations are usually, though always excepting Mr. Byron, unhappily bestowed. Unless the adapter is an artist of considerable genius, the speech of an adaptation becomes almost a patois, with the idioms of the two languages mixed in an odd jargon. The translation of "Transplanting Jean" has this fault. Also it seems to retain several speeches, important in the French, perhaps, but meaning naught in the American. To borrow a bit of criticism from Mr. Marshall's noble art of architecture, it is full of—

> Windows that exclude the light
> And passages that lead to nothing.

The announcements for the Shubert-Princess and the Shubert-Studebaker have been changed daily during the week amidst much excitement. The latest news is that "The Wonderful Thing" will appear at the Princess as first advertised, and that the Studebaker will be closed, a Griffith picture, "The Love Flower," having been canceled. Leo Ditrichstein in "The Purple Mask" will reopen the Studebaker Sept. 19.

"The Wonderful Thing" is by Mrs. Trimble Bradley, general stage director for George Broadhurst's enterprise and producer of "The Storm" at the Olympic. Miss Jeanne Eagels will represent its heroine—a French-Canadian maid of humble parentage, who is trying to become the wife of an Englishman of proud family. The company contains Gordon Ash, Ben Lyon, Miss Olive Temple, Miss Gladys Maude, Miss Jane Marbury, and Miss Eva Leonard-Boyne.

In "Honey Girl," the musical version of "Checkers," which comes to the Grand tomorrow night, Lynne Overman will be "Checkers," Miss Edna Bates "Honey Girl," and Joe Keno the racetrack tout. Miss Cissie Sewell is to dance in the play, which is by Edward Clark and Harry Von Tilzer.

The Belasco office has broken its long silence regarding Sascha Guitry's "Deburau." The play, adapted by Granville Barker, will have Lionel Atwill as its star in the title rôle—Deburau having been perhaps the most celebrated of the Pierrots. The period of the play is about the middle of the last century. Seymour Hicks is to act the rôle in London.

Fritz Lieber, who has been heading toward Shakespearean stardom this long time, will achieve it definitely this fall. For some ten years Mr. Lieber has been Robert B. Mantell's right hand man and upon several occasions Mr. Mantell gave him the opportunity to act leading rôles. He will fare forth this season in a répertoire of seven of the Shakespeareana, but whether or not he will try his luck in New York or Chicago is not announced.

New York reviewers liked "The Sweetheart Shop" pretty well, though they indicated in their studies of the piece an inability to see why Chicago went so wild over it. Some of them thought the comedian, Mr. Morton, was vulgar.

Ed Wynn and his Carnival will remain at the Illinois until Oct. 2.

From Mr. Dillingham's Chicago headquarters at the Colonial comes the news that John Charles Thomas of "Apple Blossoms" once sang in the choir of the church in Baltimore of which his father was, and still is, the pastor. Also that Miss Wilda Bennett, the prima donna, was born in Asbury Park, and that Miss Adele Astaire, the dancer, began her life and her career in Omaha, Neb.

Miss Barrymore will have a new leading man when she comes to Powers' in October to play "Declassé." He is Charles H. P. Daniell, an Englishman, who has been playing "The Bird of Paradise" abroad.

"Transplanting Jean" drew $14,276.25 in a recent week at Powers', breaking the record for receipts in August. The English version, by the way, was made by Hallam Thompson, who plays the small rôle of the attorney. De Flers and de Caillavet called their comedy "Papa."

CHENCINER — French, fastidious, read about DREAMLAND in the papers and came to see.
He made a close scrutiny of THE TREES, THE TRUNKS, THE LEAVES and THE BLOSSOMS. Then he said:

Right off the Reel

By Mae Tinée.

THERE was a time not so long ago when all a producer cared about was his stars. If he could secure one name well known and popular, to blazon in his publicity matter, he worried little about the people who would support the one who bore the name, or the director of the pictures in which the favorite should appear. And as for the story——

Anything! That is anything that permitted the star to hog the limelight, wear all the clothes and jewels, and run away with all the sympathy.

That's the way it used to be, but now—how different! I could say a lot on the subject, but think the matter is pretty neatly summed up in an article, clipped from a London paper, which is here offered for your careful consideration:

"England is now making ten times more pictures than she produced in 1918. America is making far fewer pictures but better. She had need to do so since the overproduction of 1917-'18 and the choking of British kinemas here with enough pictures to last until the end of next year are imperiling the popularity of the kinemas.

"The public is showing such disapproval of the ceaseless round of dull picture stories, almost always with the same theme, that exhibitors who have loaded themselves with as many as 104 pictures at one booking, without seeing them, are getting alarmed at the public apathy and are booking British pictures for the autumn, preferring to put some of the pictures for which they have paid on the shelf.

"One British firm was asked a few days ago to supply pictures to cover a total of twenty-two weeks, in substitution for pictures booked without seeing them.

"The breaking up of the star system in America is almost complete. That is the reason why so many stars are coming over here. The huge salaries paid to the stars who have been made by advertising and not by merit were bound to come to an end because they made profits on pictures impossible. Some have started their own production companies, hoping to make good their reputation, but others have tried before to do this and failed.

"Two years ago sixteen American stars were set up in the business of picture making, backed by the money of distributing organizations. Not one of these businesses exists today.

"The only thing that stands is story quality. In the film, as on the stage, 'the play's the thing.'"

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

POLITICS CONTINUED.

Two politicians politished
With hot sulphuric woids
That barked the trees and sered the leaves
And shocked the little boids;
They called each other "liar," "thief,"
From early morn till night,
And it was generally believed
That both of them were right.

And while they smote and smit and smew
Their several sundry goops,
The voters gathered here and there
In small excited groups;
How keen their interest flamed and burned
From early morn till night!
As they discussed in heated terms
The Dempsey-Miske fight.

And seeing this, each politish
His larynx did unloose,
And made a lot of nasty cracks
We dassent reproduce;
They called each other "gonif," "crook,"
And everything in sight,
Which made the vote unanimous
That all of them were right.

MR. D.: Howard Hickman is the husband of Bessie Barriscale. Yes, he directs most of her pictures.

G. Y. K.: Zena Keefe is with Selznick. She was not the girl, however, who played with Rockcliffe Fellowes in "The Point of View." That was Elaine Hammerstein. Mr. Fellowes is married. Lucille Watson is Mrs. Fellowes. Y'wekkum.

JARVIS L. D.: Wonder if you mean Conrad Nagel? He's 24—and looks more. He was born in Des Moines, Ia. Y'wekkum.

C. D.: How nice again to see your smiling—handwriting! Never did see your face, did I? Had a great time on the coast, didn't you? Much obliged for the picture. Is it exclusive?

C. L. C.: Why don't you get busy and treat the world before I beat you to it? You'll never get ahead of anybody if you just think about things and don't do 'em. Mighty sorry you're distressed! Why, I'd send them to the scenario editor if I were you.

ST. PATRICK: "Cash and carry" is a fine idea—if you have the cash. But don't try to carry without it! Mabel Normand is not married. Yes, she did look pretty thin. Maybe she's worrying about the letter you say you didn't have the nerve to write. Cruel—to keep the poor girl in suspense!

W. G. C.: Why, you little humming bird, you, flitting from flower to flower! The last time you wrote you were "crazy" about Charlie Ray. Why the change of—crush? I will not write him for you. I'm conducting a moving picture column, not a matrimonial agency.

BACHELOR: Nope.

Announcement

There are times when the comforts of an old house must become part of the trappings of a new; when more spacious and handsome quarters are the order of the day. In the interests of progress, those times are fruitful.

Today we are proud to announce to the many friends and patrons who have become a vital part of our institution that from this date the Globe-Wernicke Company will occupy its new home at 168-170-172 West Monroe Street. To you we extend the most cordial of invitations to visit, inspect and enjoy with us our building and furnishings. We believe you will find no change in either the courtesy of our staff or the quality of our merchandise.

Railroad Posters Alluring Call to Travel in France

By Eleanor Jewett

A shadow castle on an island spur
Rears its great bulk against the summer sky
From out a silent sea, whose long tides swing
To the low singing of the Lorelei.

The unfinished sickle of the harvest moon
Leads from God's gate to test the coming night;
And in the gloaming, through the shining west,
The sunset petals fall in colored flight.

Tall poplars stand, black ghosts upon the fringe
Of hidden things—a shepherd hums a song—
The gypsy tune—red madness fills the cup—
Go out, O soul, go out where you belong!

THERE is undoubtedly a potent magic in pictured representations of far places. There is even, to many persons, magic in a commonplace time table—with the rows upon rows of unfamiliar names. To a susceptible person and to the born traveler there is danger in the mere mention of some place other than the one in which they find themselves. No sooner do they read or hear of a spot, noted for heaven knows what, than their gypsy blood courses more briskly through their veins, their hearts beat faster, a catch comes to their throat, and they throw their defiance into the teeth of any stay-at-home admonitions urged upon them.

"Tchu Fui," they say—if the place is in China—or "Llwndglym," if the place is in Wales and if they have sufficient courage to tackle its ticklish consonants—or any other spot, they cry, depending entirely on what inch of the globe their attention has been centered. Then, if they can, they proceed to go there. Later they leave—for another point.

The romance of far places makes a keener appeal to the average individual when the place is connected with legends and tales that have warmed one's imagination from childhood. There is scarcely a French village whose name has not something of this romance. England possesses it for some of us; Italy and Spain are full of it; Switzerland and Germany have their legends for us. But it is France that calls strongest.

In the art room on the fifth floor of the Chicago public library is an exhibition of railroad posters. They are French posters, drawn and painted by French artists, to seduce travelers to French ports. They serve their mission well.

Look at "Mont St. Michel," by Constant Duval. There is everything written there that is in the verses that head this column. There is a castle; a new moon that shines from a red sky; a calm sea sucks at the sanded shore where a clump of black poplars stands; a shepherd drives a flock of sheep up over the grass to the distant yard.

But, over and above these definite properties, the picture is full of the gypsy call—calling you, or you, or you, to get up and go and see for yourself these and the more beauties which this country holds. The red cup of free wandering, a better cup than wine ever was, is filled for you and held to your lips for you by the artist, urged on his course by the railroad company over whose lines you would travel to Mont St. Michel.

There lies the secret well-spring of the potion. A practical economic necessity has created this thing of beauty. The railroads, a common knowledge, are the lifeblood of a country. Their presence and use are necessary to a country's success. France has the roads. It wants to encourage their use. Therefore the companies owning them set posters up advising people of the beauties of France, to whose doors the trains will carry them.

Simple, is it not? Usual, too, and familiar—just advertising. But with a difference. These posters are the work of skilled artists and are worthy work. They interest and attract by their beauty. They show you in all its charms an old street in Normandy. You want to go and see the "Chateau de Clisson," "La Roche Re," the palace of Fontainebleau, "La Mare de Criqueboeuf"—there is no place in France you do not want to go, by the time the magic of these posters has got well into your blood. Even though you are but shortly returned from France and the bothers of passport offices, you want to go back and enjoy it all over, bothers and everything.

If we can get more of this romance and beauty and magic into our billboards and posters and advertisements, such exhibits as this of French achievements will not be futile.

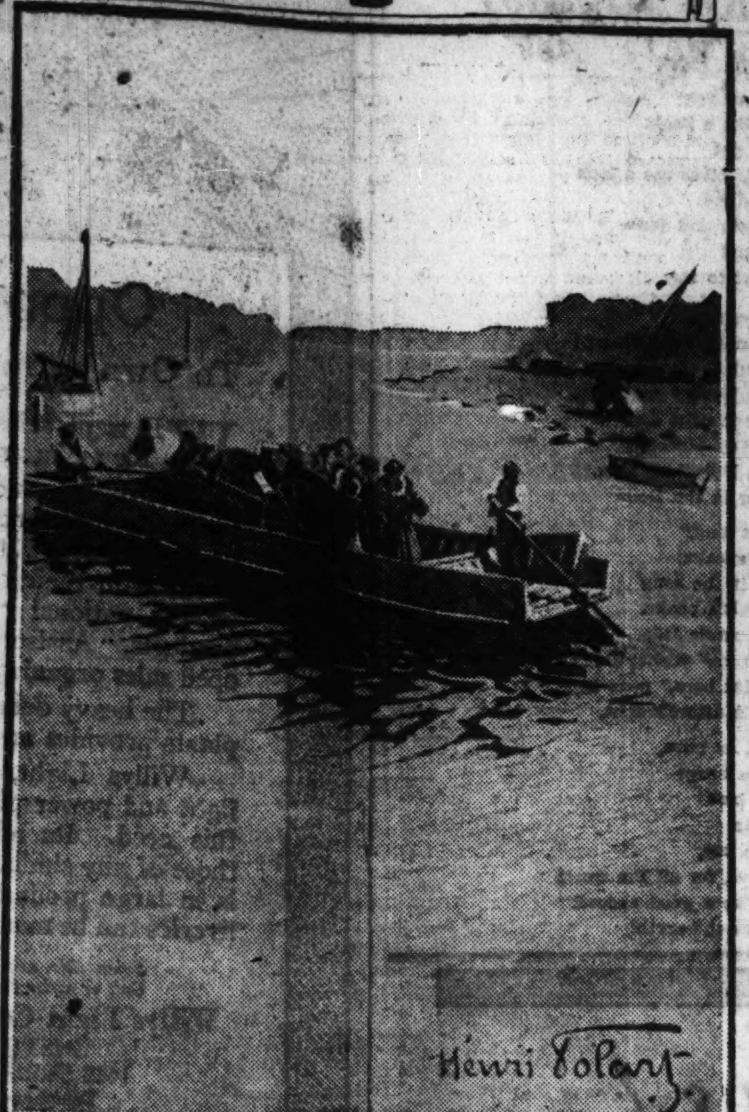
The Chicago public library will have a hundred or so prints on view early this month of various developments and circumstances of the great war. The exhibition is under the auspices of the signal corps of the A. E. F., under the direction of Maj. Thomas Spencer. The pictures will show some of the devastation of the war area and much of the activities which occurred abroad under military instigation.



"Passage Du Bac, Près de Brest," by Henri Polart, one of the artistic posters issued by the railroads of France. Other posters are on exhibit at the public library.

Word has come that a group of Chicago artists, members of the Palette and Chisel club, have opened a studio at 1446 South Wabash avenue for the making of a new kind of lamp shade. This sounds rather mysterious and exceedingly interesting, as though any attention paid it might be well repaid. So far time has lacked for a personal visit, but in the near future I hope to be able to learn more definitely what kind of a surprise Mr. Carlsen and his brother painters are planning to spring on Chicago.

Another new step in artistic expression is seen in the "paper cuts" of Ervine Metzl, a young Chicago artist. The result is almost identical in appearance with the old fashioned wood cut. The pictures differ, however, as Metzl's originals are cut in paper instead of wood, and the reproductions are made from photographic plates instead of being printed directly from the original carving. The one example of his work which I have seen reminds me strongly of the quaint illustrations to be found in old English books of a century ago.

An exhibition of oil paintings by Illinois artists is to be held in Peoria under the auspices of the Peoria Society of Allied Arts, from Nov. 11 to 22. For further information concerning the exhibit address Herbert E. Hewitt, 1600 Peoria Life building, Peoria, Ill.

The recent death of Anders Zorn, the great Swedish artist, makes this anecdote of him appropriate. While the Chicago World's Fair was going on Zorn was here. He undertook to paint a portrait of Mrs. Potter Palmer, but before starting work on it he was thrown from a horse while riding and injured his right hand. Not to be daunted, the artist insisted on continuing the portrait as planned and painted with his left hand, with which he had never worked before.

Though Zorn was a painter, and one of his latest efforts, the portrait of Ira Nelson Morris, hangs now in the Art institute, yet it is as an etcher that he gained his greatest fame. By many critics and connoisseurs Zorn's etchnigs are considered second to none. They have a vitality, a spirit, a strength, a clearness, and definiteness of purpose and execution which ranks them in a class alone.

The Art institute possesses many of his etchings, and a memorial exhibition of his work is to be held in the print room before long.

MISS HILDA SPONG in "SELF DEFENCE" in BLACKSTONE

"Immodest Violet" Wins Appreciation in Blase Gotham

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—It is not easy to startle any kind of a New York audience. They are, in the current vernacular, distinctly hard boiled assemblages, catch them matinée or evening. But I sat with one the other day that did straighten quickly in its seats and stare stageward with not the least attempt to cover its anxiety.

The play was a comedy called "Immodest Violet," written by a young man named David Carb, hailing from Harvard's school for playwrights. William A. Brady had tried it out of town, where it had been variously received, and was eager to know what a metropolitan verdict would read like. So he brought it to town for two special matinée performances.

The first act establishes a country boy hero in a boarding house bedroom in a Texas town. He is a pure minded youth and rather diffident. Preparing to retire he removes his outer clothing and gets into his old fashioned nightie and is about to turn out the gas when a young woman bursts in upon him. Overcome by the unconventionality of the situation, the flustered youth grabs the counterpane off the bed and hastily throws it about him, whereupon the young lady laughs heartily.

She is a Texas feminist of the advanced order, and she has come to borrow $10, refused her by her narrow minded family. She wants to go to Dallas to a suffrage convention. Being a free soul, she sees nothing wrong in coming to him to borrow the money, even if he is in his night clothes. Immorality is a state of mind, and so long as they refuse to accept the conventions of society as binding, why should they worry? If he is uncomfortable because she is more fully clothed than he, she is perfectly willing to throw aside her kimona, which she thereupon proceeds to do. Then, the pair of them being similarly garbed, they are on equal terms.

A moment later scandal threatens. The young woman's aunt, who is the landlady of the boarding house, demands entrance. To keep the young man from crying out and making matters worse, the young woman forces him into a chair and sits upon his lap. Thus Auntie finds them—and promptly faints. When she is revived she threatens all sorts of things. She will telephone the girl's family and she may have the boy arrested. So the young people decide there is nothing to do but run away.

They reach a fishing camp on the banks of the Red river, which separates Texas and Oklahoma. The young woman insists on staying on the Texas side, but the young man is determined she shall cross into Oklahoma, where it is shadier. So he picks her up and carries her across the bridge.

When the pursuing relatives, accompanied by the sheriff, catches up with them they are arrested on a charge of having technically violated the Mann act in crossing the state line, and the concluding scene of the comedy is in a federal courtroom during the trial. The young feminist, disgusted with the conduct of the case by the attorney engaged to defend the boy, takes matters into her own hands, and after she has explained the situation to the judge and the jury, secures an acquittal. Then they decide to marry.

The only other play of the week that won favorable comment was a comedy melodrama called "The Bat," written by Avery Hopwood and Mary Roberts Rinehart. A weird affair, this one, with every possible advantage taken of dramatic license, but so thoroughly fascinating as a mystery play that its audiences have been genuinely entertained. A haunted house, a couple of mysterious murders, several cases of assault and battery, and attempted arson play a part in the action, but none of them is taken seriously.

May Vokes plays another of her shuffling, thick-witted maids, and whenever the action becomes tense she injects a comedy line that relieves it. It is rather an outrageous use of the comic relief, occasionally, but who cares for that?

Two English comedies that came with the enthusiastic indorsement of London audiences to excite interest in them were disappointing. The better of the two is "Happy-Go-Lucky," another of the Cinderella series, with the heroine meeting her romance in the person of a high born youth on top of a London bus. He invites her to spend a week-end at his ancestral home, where she is snubbed by his snobbish and offensively upper class family. To be even with them she asks them back to tea in her modest Bloomsbury home, where she plans that her family will put on as many airs as her prospective in-laws.

It happens that the day of the tea there is a bailiff in the house, sent to collect an overdue account, and as he refuses to leave he is pressed into service as an ancient retainer and induced to act as butler. The comedy here slips away into extravagant farce, with the bailiff-butler spilling the tea and forgetting his lines. There is much laughter, but it does not advance interest in the story, and the conventional conclusion, with the determined hero refusing to accept his family's dictation and remaining loyal to the heroine, adds nothing. Only the acting saves the play.

O. P. Heggie is richly amusing as the butler, Harry Baxter is popular as the happy-go-lucky hero of the title, and Muriel Martin Harvey plays the heroine prettily.

The other is "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," a comedy drama praised extravagantly abroad, where Peggy O'Neill is playing the heroine. It proved a commonplace and rather trite affair on the order of the Chauncey Olcott comedies.

It has been a dull August in the theaters, with not a single outstanding hit to distinguish it.

THE POSTCARD TOURIST

By Guy F. Lee.

I never travel much, and yet
  I know my country like a book;
The information that I get
  From gadding friends gives me a look
At every corner of the land:
  At mountain, city, plain and sea—
I learn America first hand
  In picture postals sent to me.

The grandeur of Los Angeles
  Is painted by this penned delight:
"It's hot in daytime, but the breeze Makes blankets needed every night."
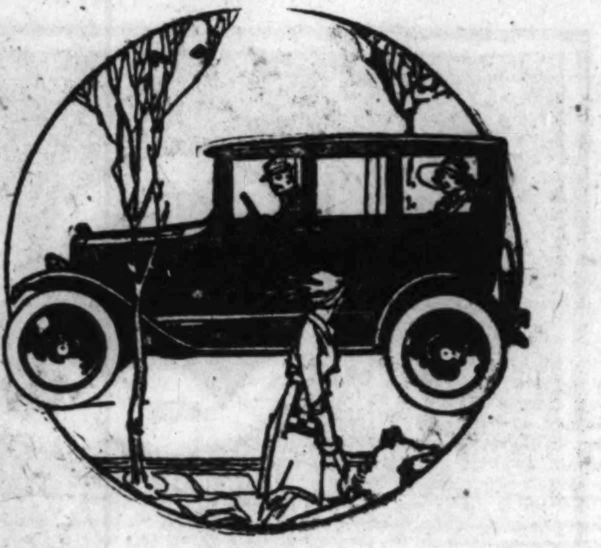
"That's me, the other one's the dog,"
  Jim's snapshot from Bar Harbor tells;
"Please pass the bunch hello," says Og,
  Who's summer girling in the Dells.

"I got a musky ten feet long,"
  From Minnesota Leo speaks;
"It's cold, but sunny," is the song
  Roy sings mid Colorado's peaks.
"Having a good time," carols Jill;
  "Wish you were with us," wishes Dot;
"This here's a swell joint here," pens Bill,
  "But, O, you Chi!" his afterthought.

Such gems and similar, as pure,
  Help my geography a heap;
I vision endless scenic lure
  Vicariously, also cheap.
For Baedeker I've little use,
  And Cook would starve, for all I'm worth
To him. . . . But I've a good excuse:
  I stay at home and see the earth!

Stop Buying So Much Gas!



The Overland Sedan

Costs by the Month, Saves by the Mile! Eats Up Distance, Saves Dollars!

On a railroad it is the trip and not the ticket that completes the transaction; and it is so with an automobile.

The Willys-Overland organization is just as interested in Overland owners after they have bought as before they are sold.

Saving you money on the up-keep is just as important as saving you money on the price of the car. And when gasoline began to go up four years ago, word went out to our designers that Overland owners must be protected, and the price of gasoline must be brought down—but not at the price of comfort!—get that, for that was the crux of the problem.

Hypothetically, it was impossible, and yet—

Under the stimulus of a great public need, and spurred on by the pride of a great reputation, the designers of the Overland have Done the Thing that Couldn't be Done!—they have unraveled still another insoluble secret of mechanics, by creating that marvel of mechanism, the new Suspension Triplex Spring, permitting the use of light alloy steels for economy, and acting as a pneumatic buffer between the road and you!

What the new Overland car and its remarkable improvements cost to create we shall never know. But we do know that it cost $6,000,000 to get ready to incorporate them into the new Overland car, and that the Overland car was a great car before these improvements were initiated and adopted.

So it seems a fair conclusion: That an institution that will voluntarily upset the ramifications of one of the greatest automobile manufacturing plants in the world, in order to reduce the gasoline bills of Overland owners, justifies the past, the future, and the immediate confidence of the American people.

Ninety-seven cities recently reported ninety-seven Overland Sedans as averaging 25.2 miles per gallon of gas . . . .

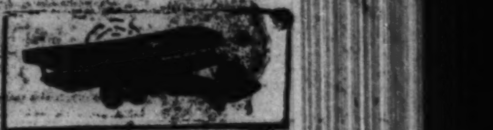
AVIATION



Three Yank Ships to Fly for Gordon Bennett Air Cup

BY MORROW KRUM.

HOPE that a Yank ship will bounce over the race course at Etampes, France, a little faster than any European airplane and that the Gordon Bennett international airplane trophy will be brought back to America is riding high in the heart of every American interested in aviation.

America's three entries in the world classic are on their way to France. A unique feature of an American entry is the disappearing landing gear of the Dayton-Wright "R-B" monoplane. By a simple bit of mechanism installed in front of the cockpit, which is inclosed so as to entirely streamline the body, the landing wheels and entire gear are drawn up inside of the machine while it is in flight.

The same movement by the pilot, which pulls up the landing gear flattens out the wings removing much of the camber and increasing the speed. It is estimated that the disappearing landing gear and the flattening of the wings add fifty miles an hour to the speed of the ship.

The wing panels of this monoplane are covered with three ply wood veneer instead of the usual fabric covering. The machine has a monococque body. It is powered by a 250 h. p. Hall Scott motor.

The Curtiss "Arrow" is another monoplane. This ship is powered with a Curtiss C-12, V type, 12 cylinder, 400 h. p. motor. It has a monococque body. The wing panels are very thick, supported on each side by a single thick strut, extending to the hub of the landing wheel. It has a bird cage radiator, one section on each side, as if swung on the running board of an automobile.

ROLAND ROHLFS.

The plane has a short and stubby propellor with a stream lined hub. In the "Arrow" the pilot's seat is far in the rear part of the body, about two-thirds of the distance to the tail.

Roland Rohlfs, chief test pilot for the Curtiss people, and who lost the world's altitude title to Capt. Rudolph Schroeder three months ago, will fly the "Arrow."

The airplane entered by the United States army air service is known as the Verville-Packard and is of all American design and manufacture. The motor is 500 horse power, the most powerful ever built in this country. It was designed and built by the Packard Motor company under the guidance of Col. J. G. Vincent, one of the creators of the Liberty.

"The Verville ship is in no way a freak racing plane, but is built for both service and production," says an air service statement. "The ship itself has been developed by the engineers of the office of the chief of the air service at the engineering division at McCook field."

CAPT. RUDOLPH SCHROEDER.

The army machine has one strut supporting its wings on either side. It is thoroughly stream lined.

Capt. Schroeder, holder of the world's altitude record and army test pilot, will race this ship.

All three American entries are solo ships.

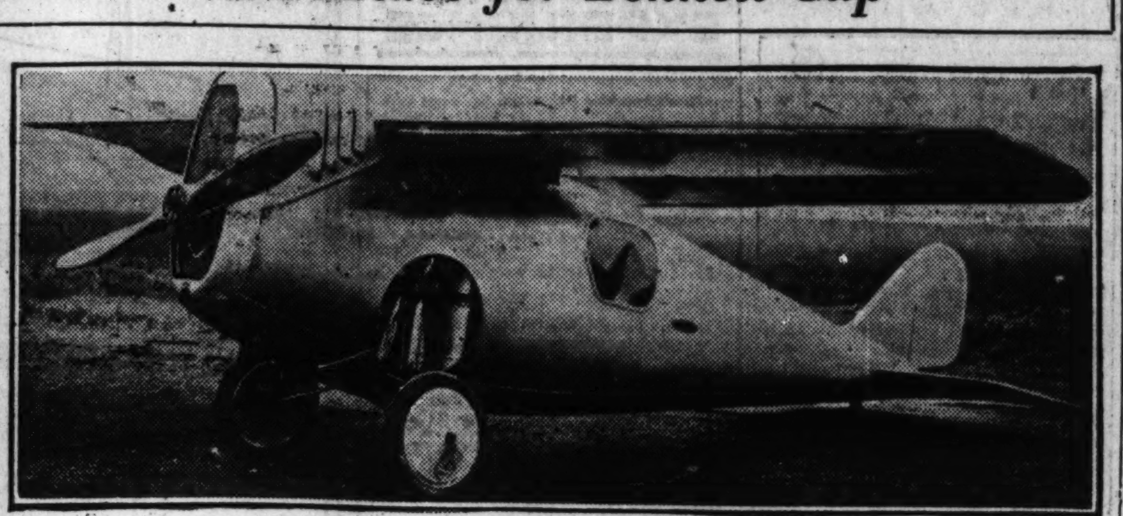
The race this year will be held at Etampes, near Paris, Sept. 27-Oct. 3, 1920, over a circuit course of 300 kilometers [186.3 miles]. The start and finish will be at Etampes. The winner of this speed contest will draw a prize of 10,000 francs from the Aero Club of France, the Bennett cup, valued at $2,500, and many other prizes offered by manufacturers and private individuals.

The air derby was held annually after 1909, until the war turned all aircraft into combat. Glenn E. Curtiss won the first race, attaining a speed of only forty-seven miles an hour. He jazzed past seven entries from European countries that year.

It is thought that the winner of this year's derby will have to make a speed of 200 miles an hour.

By the rules of the contest the race for the following year is held in the city where the winning ship is manufactured.

Will Race for Bennett Cup



Aviation Section Wins Applause of Tribune Readers

THE inauguration of an aviation department by THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE won many telegrams and letters of congratulation from flying men and those interested in aviation. Pilots, manufacturers, and men financially interested in aircraft production sent messages commending THE TRIBUNE'S plan to encourage aviation.

"Permit us to congratulate THE TRIBUNE for its enterprise in opening an aviation department," said a message from the Manufacturers' Air Craft Association, Inc., of New York City.

"We are all glad to see THE TRIBUNE is the first paper in Chicago to realize the importance of the aeronautical industry," wrote Stanley E. Knauss, Chicago sales manager for Continental Aircraft, Inc. This company has offices in motor row.

"I wish to congratulate and commend the aviation department of THE TRIBUNE, which I read yesterday with a great deal of interest," asserts J. F. Cornelius, an officer in the Aviation club of Chicago.

"Permit me to congratulate your paper on being one of the pioneers to adopt a department for this very vital and promising industry." That is the message of Cole J. Younger, of the Ordnance Engineering corporatin.

"I noted with pleasure the aviation section in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE," reads the letter of Rufus Riddlesbarger, a pilot in the air mail service.

HOWARD RINEHART.

A unique feature of the Dayton-Wright "R-B" monoplane, one of America's three entries in the world air derby in France, is the disappearing landing gear. The pilot pulls the entire gear up into the fuselage after the ship leaves the ground. This device adds fifty miles an hour to the speed of the plane, it is claimed. Howard Rinehart, test pilot for the Dayton-Wright people, will fly this 200 m. p. h. speedster.

Will Train Flyers.

Culver Military academy announces that it will give courses in elementary flying to men training for army commissions.

Luxury Ship.

Gilbert H. Budwig, ex-civilian flying instructor at March field, is jazzing over California in a $20,000 ship, the property of L. C. Brand, president of the Title Guarantee and Trust company of Los Angeles. The plane is patterned somewhat after the Le Pere and was built at Venice, Cal., under the direction of H. H. Waterman. It is kicked along the air lanes by a Liberty. The fuselage is luxuriously furnished, one of the unique features being an ice box. Mr. Brand will use the ship for week-end trips between Los Angeles and his summer home in the Yosemite.

Flying Billboard.

Advertising ingenuity found a new form of expression recently when an aeroplane, starting on a sesational trip from Calcutta, India, to points in Australia, was painted with the "copy" of several internationally known advertisers. The ads of a motor car, a lubricating oil, and an automobile tire were emblazoned on the planes. The names were recognizable even after the machine had ascended to a height of 4,000 feet.

Refused Passport.

"Top" Paine, former air service pilot, now director of air service for Gov. Cantu of Lower California, was refused a passport to cross the border at Mexicali last week, after he landed in a new bombing ship purchased to augment the Cantu forces.

Predicts Flying Will Cost Less Than Auto Upkeep

Cost Per Mile Is Lower Now, Says Col. Jesse Vincent.

"THE airship will in due time become a form of transportation as economical as the automobile, if not more so," said Col. Jesse G. Vincent, one of the designers of the Liberty motor, at a dinner in Detroit last week.

He declares that the actual cost of carrying a passenger a mile is already less in many airships than it is in an automobile, and predicts that the high price of machines which so far has placed aviation out of practical commercial use will soon be changed. With this, he declares, will come the preparation of landing fields in every little municipality; guide signs and signals will be provided, which will make possible a great volume of air traffic.

"The fact that there are airships today which carry six passengers at a rate of 100 miles an hour, and make ten miles to the gallon of gasoline, proves that flying is not necessarily expensive," he said. "I know of no automobile that at the same speed will show such fuel economy, and, in fact, a six-passenger automobile that will give ten miles to a gallon at thirty miles an hour is considered a very efficient machine.

"The greatest factor in favor of the airship, however, is that it requires no rails or even a road to travel on. With the element of road-building eliminated you have a tremendous saving which can be credited to airship travel. Landing fields can be easily and cheaply prepared, and every little municipality will have one in the near future. There will be guide signs and signals to direct the aviators in landing in foggy weather, as well as in clear, and these are all that will be required for the coming airship.

"Tire cost also will be included in the saving, because the wheels run only a few hundred yards in taking off and landing. Until recently the repair bills have been large because of the character of the machines and lack of skill in landing. This has now been almost entirely eliminated.

"So the matter will resolve itself to one of the first cost of the vehicles. The cost of airships is still beyond the reach of the average person, but that will soon be changed. There are a number of foreign airships today that can be produced by manufacturing methods like those which have made the motor car so cheap, and I predict that the automotive manufacturers will soon achieve as great a triumph with airplanes. With the airplane reduced to standardized manufacturing terms it immediately becomes a commercial possibility that will place it within the reach of men who will use it not merely for sport but to save time.

"I do not mean that the airplane will ever supplant the motor car. It will be an ally rather than a rival. It is a fact that no form of transportation ever invented has become obsolete. There still remain certain activities in which the most primitive vehicle has its use and in which it will probaly continue to serve until the end of time."

Canuck Air Board.

Canada has shown admirable foresight in creating an air board which governs both governmental and civil aeronautical activities. This board has already started in to apply air regulations of 1920, and from the report of their activities in regard to the violations of its regulations it would seem that they are accomplishing much to the end of eliminating all ill advised commercial activities. The entire country is being mapped by the board. All governmental air stations will be made available as commercial stations and will be licensed as such in the regular way. Licenses are issued to pilots.

Report of Flight.

Two Curtiss H. S. 2L flying boats have just completed a trip from Halifax, N. S., to Roberval, Lake St. John, Quebec. The trip—a flight of 612 miles—was made in 10 hours and 13 minutes flying time. The H. S. 2L ships are not as efficiently stream lined as the later Curtiss productions, but are strongly built. The tanks of the planes carry 165 gallons of petrol. The ship has a flying duration of about four hours.

80 Ferry Ships.

Eighty ships are now carrying passengers and freight across the English channel. The Handley-Paige company added several gigantic planes to their service last week. The passenger service through the air is becoming more popular than the transportation offered by the channel boats. A man may breakfast in London, lunch in Paris, and be back in London in time for dinner, if he travels the air lanes.

Flames Kill Two Pilots, Vertical Slip Saves Two

Were First Serious Accidents of New Metal Planes.

TWO men were killed and two others narrowly escaped death while flying in JL-6 all metal monoplanes for the air mail service last week. The accidents are the first to mar the splendid performance of the metal ship.

Pilot Max Miller and a mechanic were flying over Morristown, N. J., when their monoplane burst into flames. The ship crashed in the heart of the city. The two men had been burned to death. Much of the mail was charred. Miller was one of the first mail pilots to fly in Chicago.

A vertical bank and a 2,000 foot slide slip saved the lives of Pilot W. L. Smith and Edward Haigt, both of New York City, when their ship caught on fire over Deshler, O., last Tuesday.

The metal ship with 1,000 pounds of mail aboard, was jazzing along toward Cleveland. Suddenly there burst from under the metal engine hood a sheet of flame. The altimeter pointed at 5,000 feet.

Smith acted quickly. He threw the ship into a vertical bank and then dropped into a slip. Before either the pilot or Haigt could start prayers the plane had lost 2,000 feet and the wind had extinguished the flames.

But the stick was dead. Smith "brought 'er out" and spiraled down to a corn field. Neither of the aviators was severely burned. The ship was not badly damaged and the mail was unharmed.

The cause of the monoplane's catching fire has not yet been announced by the mail service, but it is thought that the petrol connection was knocked loose by the vibrations of the motor. American ships use rubber connections.

Success.

On the opening day of the New York Chicago mail service the all metal monoplanes made the trip in nine and one-half hours, carrying 600 pounds of mail. Since the maiden trip the time has been cut an hour and 300 pounds added to the load of mail.

Damp Air Puts Kick Into Work of Gas Engine

BY HIGH SPEED.

EVER since the beginning of the gas engine industry operators have noticed that on damp days and at night when the air is more humid than during the day, the engine runs better and with more power on a given throttle opening than it does on a dry day. At first some engineers said that the results were merely psychological and that the humid atmosphere could not cause an increase in power. These scientific doubters even offered proofs of the justice of their contentions, which served to convince a good many people.

But the real facts are these: Water fed to the engine does increase the power. At the same time it has a tendency to reduce carbon deposit, and under certain circumstances it is likely to remove a deposit of troublesome particles, though it cannot be said with certainty that it will remove hard carbon.

It is common practice for operators of kerosene engines to feed water into the combustion chamber not only to reduce the temperature, because kerosene engines are wont to heat rapidly, especially if poorly designed, but also to get more power by permitting a high compression to be used. Perhaps the general use of water in kerosene engines led to the marketing by numerous manufacturers of devices designed to feed water or steam to automobile engines. In many cases the device consists of a water tank with piping to the inlet manifold above the throttle. There is a suitable control so that the water may be shut off when desired.

Any one who has used one of these devices knows immediately upon turning on the water the engine speeds up, though it is necessary to have the engine hot before turning on the water, otherwise it will slow down or stop. In some types there is a line leading to the radiator filler neck so that moist air can be sucked into the carburetor.

At any rate, regardless of the type of device, all of these designed to feed water or steam have a beneficial effect upon the engine, and their use is justified both as a power increaser and carbon preventer. Briefly stated the use of water results in a gain in thermal or heat efficiency by preventing the usual loss of heat through the water jacket at the beginning of the explosion stroke and giving back the heat later on in the stroke when the power on the piston is not so great. The automobile engine is a notorious heat waster, though it is, strictly speaking, a heat engine and therefore should not waste any heat, or better, as little as possible. Yet fully one-third of the heat generated (and the heat is power) is lost by being passed to the cooling water.

When the water is sent into the cylinders upon the intake stroke the charge is naturally cooled. On compression it is heated and upon explosion it is turned into steam, thereby taking away some of the heat which would ordinarily be wasted by passing through the water jacket into the water. Later on in the power stroke when the power on the piston is reduced the steam gives up its heat in greater part and thus helps put some more power where it is needed. In the explosion stroke the water prevents a heat loss by taking some of the heat into the mixture only to give up later when the heat is needed in the cylinder.

This explanation may be taken as being correct with the theory as to water decomposition wrong. This theory assumes that the water present during the explosion is decomposed into its elements, oxygen and hydrogen, and that the presence of the oxygen makes it possible for free carbon to combine with it, thus effecting perfect combustion. There is no proof of this, though it may be possible that water does decompose to some extent at high pressure and at the high temperature which obtains automobile engine cylinders.

However the matter is explained, the fact remains that the use of the water is beneficial and the apparent magic which gives the engine more power on a damp day is something real. As to the carbon removing ability of the water, there is something to be said. Surely a caked deposit cannot be removed by water or steam unless by luck. Many owners have said that the use of water stopped pre-ignition and knocking, and very likely this is true, because the water may have removed the small particles of carbon, which became incandescent and caused pre-ignition, which in turn caused the knocking. It also is possible for the water to prevent carbon from depositing in any quantity which it would do under normal conditions.

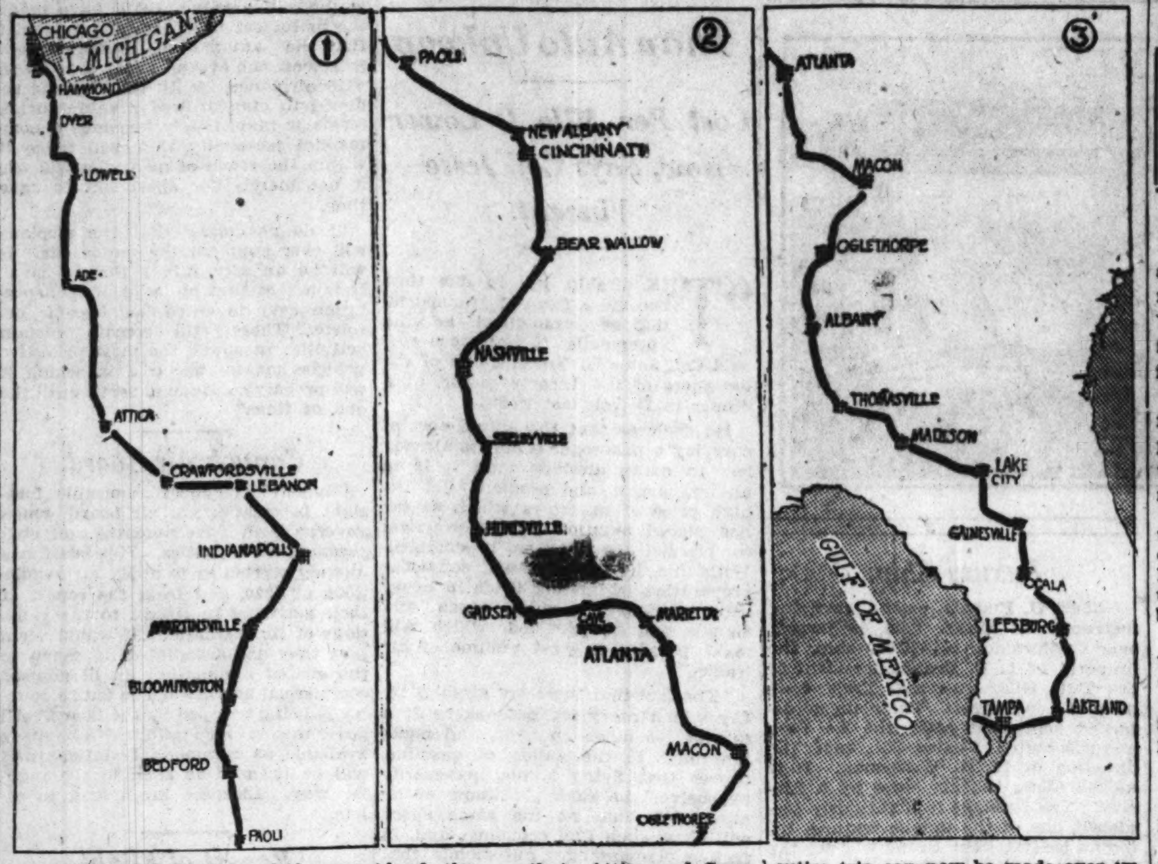
XV.—TO FLORIDA



AUTOMOTIVE birds of the open road are already feeling that southland urge. Restless radiators are swinging away from the summer playgrounds and heading toward the Mason and Dixon line. Hundreds of tourists will begin thinking in terms of southern roads during the month.

Here is the newest and best route to Florida this season. Until the Dixie highway is opened through to Danville—a consummation promised by Sept. 15—the best road leads through Indianapolis via the Adeway to Goodland, then south to Attica and Crawfordsville. Pick up the Dixie at Indianapolis, and follow it south to Nashville.

In wet weather it is best to take the long route through Shelbyville to Huntsville and Gladstone, then east through Rome to Atlanta. The Dixie short line to Chattanooga and thence south to Atlanta is best in dry weather. From Macon the route leads through Fort Valley, Thomasville, Madison, and Lake City to Leesburg, the diverging center for the good roads system of Florida. In following this route the entire trip can now be made over improved roads with a minimum of the hard going that has marked Florida travel in former years.

What They Pulled.

Last spring, while motoring across a western state, we passed a pair of forlorn looking mules tied to a post. We passed a few remarks, and I added in rather a loud voice: "I wonder what in the world those old skates can pull?"

A few rods farther on we ran into an innocent looking chuck hole, which proved impassable. The more we tried to get out the deeper we sank in the mud.

Farmhouses were few and far between, and just as we had decided that one of us was going to have a nice long hike, an old man came up with the two old mules, who looked much better in our hour of need.

To our surprise they pulled us out with no difficulty at all, to the tune of $10.

We paid the man, and as he walked away he said: "And that's what they pull—pocketbook strings." F. G.

OAKLAND OWNERS REPORT RETURNS OF FROM 18 TO 25 MILES PER GALLON OF GASOLINE AND FROM 8,000 TO 12,000 MILES ON TIRES

TO the discerning motor car buyer, the six-cylinder smoothness of the Oakland Sensible Six Sedan expresses the mechanical harmony developed in it by Oakland engineering.

The easy driving and quick acceleration represents the efficient transmission of power from the capable engine through the double universal joints and tubular drive shaft.

In like manner its reliability of action and its thrift reflects the balance and light weight of the car obtained with a deep frame curving exactly under a body containing no needless pounds.

So also is the stability of this Sedan apparent in the direct joining of the body to the frame and in the bracing afforded by the single-seat construction in front.

This fine performance and shelter calls for no more in first cost than what is expended on many open cars, and it affords an operating economy rarely attained by open cars.

Bring your family to inspect the Oakland Sensible Six Sedan: to gain a clear idea of its advantages in serviceability and comfort gained with thrift.

"Henry, I'll Never Ride With You Again Until You Stop Those Squeaks!"

It's up to Henry. No squeaks or no wife in his car! And when the springs squeak so horribly that even his wife turns against him and talks that way about riding in the old bus, it's plainly time to get busy. The squeaks must be stopped.

But Henry's troubles are over before they begin if he uses

THOMSON'S Graphite Penetrating OIL

All he needs to do is to get a can at his dealer's, squirt some of this oil on the sides of his springs, and stop every squeak in five minutes.

Thomson's Graphite Penetrating Oil goes through the leaves. Without any wedging, it penetrates—dissolves the rust—finds the squeaks—cures them. It deposits a film of pure dry graphite. Any surplus oil seeps out on the other side and evaporates, so that the springs will not collect dust nor grit.

It's the best thing in the world, too, for easily and quickly releasing rusty bolts, nuts, king-pins, brakes and pipe-fittings.

Sold on a money-back guarantee. If Thomson's Graphite Penetrating Oil is not all we say it is—if it does not do all we say it will do—your money will be returned without question.

Try it and see. It costs only $1.00 for a pint can, but it's worth a lot more than that.

Downstate County Sets Example for Highway Building

BY E. E. PIERSON.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 4.—[Special.]—Vermilion county now leads all counties of Illinois, with the exception of Cook, in the mileage of hard roads. The home of Congressman Joe Cannon, Danville, the county seat, can be reached by a permanent highway from every city, town, or village in the county after Sept. 15.

A four mile gap connecting Georgetown and Indianola, in the south end of the county, is now under construction, and should be ready for usage within a month. When this stretch is turned over by the contractor, Vermilion county will have a chain of well built highways that will be the envy of all other counties. Not only will every city and hamlet of the county be able to reach the county seat over a hard road but they can also reach others.

Completion of the stretch of forty miles, connecting Rankin, in the extreme northwestern end, with Danville was celebrated on Aug. 18. This road was first projected many years ago and short sections have been built from time to time. The agitation has been incessant, and township after township was won over until every mile has been financed. The county bond system, voted six years ago, took care of all villages not incorporated. The cities and villages which were incorporated all agreed to coöperate to the extent of paving the road, either at city, village, or township expense. With two exceptions—Fithian and Potomac—all such municipal work is completed. At the two points named, the contracts were let, and the jobs are nearing completion.

Originally planned for completion in 1917, the war interrupted construction of the Vermilion county hard roads system. The work was generally resumed last year, despite the great increase in the cost of labor and material, and has been pushed rapidly since.

The Dixie highway, connecting Danville with Chicago, is now nearing completion as a hard road. This highway enters Vermilion county from the north at Hoopeston, extends south through Rossville to Danville, and thence south through Tilton, Westville, Georgetown, and Ridge Farm, a distance of forty miles, due north and south. This is the main road in that direction, and takes care of travel in the eastern section of the county.

Travel in the western section, starting from Rankin, can move due east to Hoopeston over a hard road, a distance of ten miles, and, within a short time to Cheneyville, four miles east of Hoopeston, thus covering the entire north ridge of the county, or move south from Rankin to Armstrong, eleven miles, thence five miles southeast to Collison, thence eight miles south to Oakwood, moving six miles west to Fithian or five miles east to Danville.

Six miles north of Danville, there is a cross county hard road which extends from Armstrong through Potomac, Jamesburg to Bismarck There is also a connection with the adjoining county of Indiana and laterals to the north of two miles each, reaching Henning and Alvin. The stretch connecting Potomac and Armstrong is now under construction.

The southwestern section of the county is also well supplied. Starting from Danville, there is a hard road to Catlin, four miles, thence six miles west to Fairmount, and ten miles south to Sidell. This road then extends five miles west to Allerton, and ten miles east to Indianola and Georgetown. At Allerton, the hard road connects with another to the west in Champaign, while from Hastings, three miles east of Allerton, the hard road extends south to connect with another in Edgar county.

With the completion of the hard roads, truck lines are springing up all over the county, and a vast volume of express and freight is now being handled by motor at much less expense and in faster time than was the case when the steam roads were the only means of transportation. Motor busses are also under discussion, and will connect the various villages and towns not served by the electric or steam lines.

For the first time in its history, Vermilion county during the coming winter will be able to use its hard roads without interruption. The mud embargo which has been the terror of all of the other inland counties of the state during the period from November to May will not disturb Vermilion county. Its several hundred miles of solid concrete or macadam will be appreciated at their true worth when the winter season opens, and adjacent counties which failed to show the enterprise and progressiveness of Vermilion are tied up as far as movement over the rural highways is concerned.

It is believed that the remarkable and highly creditable showing of Vermilion county will be an incentive to all other counties of central Illinois, to add materially to the hard road mileage before another year passes. All have much to learn from the eastern Illinois county, the first to be connected with Chicago by a permanent road and the first to build its own system of hard road trunk lines.

The Link.

With the bridging of the Missouri river between Bismarck and Mandan, the greatest barrier in the National Parks highway will be removed. Tourists out of Chicago will find one difficulty less on the road to Yellowstone, Glacier, Ranier, and Crater Lake national parks. Contracts amounting to $1,200,000 have been signed with the federal government, the state of North Dakota, and two counties contributing to the fund.

Speeders.

Firemen passing through Harrison, N. J., on their way to a fire, were arrested for speeding. They were later released.

The World's Worst Road

FOREWORD.

Remember the oratory you spilled when you struck that last disgraceful stretch of road and the rear spring broke? It was almost pleasing, you'll recall, to listen to your own well rounded sentences and vivid, picturesque English. You were telling the world in no uncertain terms exactly what you thought of a community that would disregard civilization in that way. You were inspired to new heights of language. It was a shame those county, state, or township commissioners and the general public should have to miss your masterpiece.

Well, here's your opportunity. In one fell swoop you can tell those responsible for it, the appreciative reading public and fellow motorists, what you think about that road through The Tribune. It'll be hot reading. It will also be comforting. It will center attention on the bad roads everywhere; and it may result in their early improvement.

Unburden yourself by addressing "The World's Worst Road," The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Write as briefly as possible on one side of the paper only. Try to give the exact location of your subject, its county and state, name of street, road, or marked trail it disgraces, and, if possible, the method used thereabouts in road upkeep. Profanity alone is barred.

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published, and those responsible may like to explain why their highway should remain that way.

Delighted!

Will you please ask the world for me the reason for Indianapolis avenue? I certainly would like to meet the man who can satisfactorily explain why the main and only artery leading from the greatest city in the United States into the heart of the greatest industrial region in the nation should remain the spring breaking, mountainous, mid-Victoria disgrace it is and has been for more than a year.

I am willing to wager that every Chicagoan who owns a car has had a taste of that sinister stretch leading from South Chicago to Calumet avenue at one time or another this year, and I'll further bet that every one of them was fighting mad when he finished it. In this case the state line does not end the horror. The road is as rotten after it crosses into Indiana as it is in Illinois. It is fully as important as a transportation artery as the railroads that run around the end of the lake, and it carries about as much important freight and passenger traffic daily.

Can't something be done? Isn't there some way to make highway officials travel it daily? If those responsible for its upkeep had to go over it each morning there certainly would be some good roads action in those parts.

D. C. M.

Patience!

Of course you've heard enough about that Zion City parcel of Sheridan road to fill several volumes. They have signs up now advising the tortured motorist to "go slow and keep smiling." That's all very well, but we've been going slow for lo, these many years, and no man can be a continual Cheshire cat and retain his reason.

See the New Marmon Speedster

It has just arrived from the Nordyke & Marmon Company factory at Indianapolis, and is on display in our show rooms, 2230-36 Michigan Avenue.

It is equipped with a 3 to 1 gear ratio. Timed with a stop watch, this car has repeatedly circled the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, a distance of two and one-half miles, on a four-cornered track, in less than 2 minutes 6 seconds.

This is an average speed in excess of 71 miles an hour. Considering the four turns, it means even greater maximum speeds possible on straightaways.

To motorists who desire distinctiveness of body design and coloring, with extra speed, this Marmon Speedster will make a strong appeal.

The body is lemon yellow, with black radiator shell, fenders, dust deflectors and running gear. The top is of brown khaki, fitted with diamond-shaped plate glass windows. All metal trimmings are heavily nickel plated.

We want you to see it, whether you have the slightest intention of purchasing a motor car or not.

We can make immediate delivery on a limited number of these models. They are on display at our new show rooms.

Motor Champions Plan Offensive in Legislatures

THE forty or more state legislatures that will convene during the next year will receive something like 3,000 bills affecting the use of motor vehicles, according to estimates based on the number of bills presented at previous sessions. Representatives of the automotive and allied industries state that legislation proposed will range from bad, though harmless, to good, if former standards hold true.

Championing the industry against enactments that are directly discriminatory, or that are antagonistic without being beneficial to the public, the motor vehicle conference committee, composed of representatives of the six leading national bodies of the automotive industry, will be in action, in an educative way, as in former years.

Present indications are that this year it will be occupied largely with warding off unfair legislation aimed at the motor truck, which quite naturally, its friends say, has made some enemies in the course of its rapid rise as an element of rural and intercity transportation.

The Original.

Baltimore, Md.—pronounced "Baltémur" by the natives—is the scene, says the Automobile Blue Book, of the first umbrella in America. The debutante was brought from India as a curiosity by a sailor. Later it became famous for its disposition to be left upon bars and cafés, or at home when it was raining downtown.

Reward.

M. Esnault Pelterie, inventor of the "joy stick" used generally for airplane control in France, has been making a first claim upon 8,600,000 francs, out of sums owed by the state to various aircraft builders. The court has now recognized his right to 3,200,000 francs due to the Caudron firm; 400,000 in the case of Henri and Maurice Farnman, 2,000,000 due to Morane and Saulmier, and 85,000 francs due to M. Gabriel Borel.

Truck Flotilla Helps to Battle Mud in Illinois

SUBSEQUENT to the close of the war congress passed an act providing for the distribution of suitable road building equipment by the war department, through the secretary of agriculture, to the various states. This act provided that such equipment could be used only in the construction of federal aid roads. In accordance with this act and up to the present time the state of Illinois has received about 775 serviceable motor trucks.

Early in 1920 congress passed an amendment permitting the various states to lease this equipment to counties or other municipal bodies for road work, removing the restriction on their use for federal aid roads only.

This enabled the department to allot to the various counties of the state some 400 motor trucks; abuot half of this equipment was new when received by the state and one-half had been used in the army. The allotment to the counties was made partly in proportion to the road mileage in the county and partly in proportion to the assessed valuation of the county. Up to the present time more than 100 trucks have been turned over to counties under this plan, which provides that the county itself or any municipality may, by entering into an agreement with the state, receive one or more of the motor trucks which were included in the original allotment to the county.

You run no risk when you buy a Ranger—the best known—as well as the best bicycle ever built. Truly the Aristocrat of Cycledom—we guarantee it absolutely to satisfy you. We sell on the square-deal plan—use it a month; if it does not satisfy you perfectly, the trial does not cost you a cent.

Delivered Free. Select the bicycle you want and terms that suit you—cash or easy payments. Save all middlemen's profit. We give the biggest value in the U. S

12 Months to Pay

If you do not find it convenient to pay cash, you can secure possession and use of your "Ranger" bicycle at once and pay for it in twelve small monthly payments. Our thousands of Cash Customers buy at rock bottom, factory-to-rider costs. The Easy Payment prices are only slightly more to cover added clerical work. Because you are dealing direct with the Makers, the cash and Easy Payment prices are naturally lower than you can obtain elsewhere.

Direct from Factory to You

We make 44 styles, sizes and colors of Rangers in our three model factories, and sell you direct. Our Mail Order Department is caring for the needs of millions of riders in all parts of the country. We have been established in Chicago 29 years and you can buy at the factory. There is a Ranger style and size to fit every taste and any pocket book. You can't equal the bicycles or prices anywhere. Men, Women, Boys and girls everywhere ARE SAVING TIME and money, and gaining health and recreation on famous Ranger Bicycles. Millions are riding to and from work, visiting interesting places and enjoying the great outdoors.

Tires, electric lamps, horns, parts, repairs, and equipment of all kinds; built-up wheels with coaster-brake ready to put in your old bicycle. Everything for bicycles and in the bicycle line, ready for at-once delivery, at Factory prices.

FREE Bring this ad with you, and we will give you free a high-grade cyclometer with the Ranger you select. It pays to deal direct with the factory—you get wholesale prices—no middleman's profits tacked on.

If you can't call, send coupon or postal (or telephone Main 786) and ask us to send you the big, Free Ranger Catalog (the Bicycle Encyclopedia of America), with complete wholesale prices and terms.

John R. Gregg had an idea about a shorthand system. That idea became an ideal, the ideal a reality. Today wherever his shorthand is taught—and that is in 83% of the high schools and 90% of the private commercial schools in the U.S.—Gregg shorthand has become associated with progress, alertness, the best in business methods and results.

Gregg School, the home of Gregg shorthand, is proud of its atmosphere of industry and commercial success. We feel that our reputation is not undeserved. For the student, this popular feeling means a gain of self-confidence along with technical perfection. That is why Gregg graduates are being demanded in greater numbers than the Appointment Bureau can supply.

The courses include what business men are actually seeking when they specify that office workers should be "experienced" —familiarity with general office routine and duties as well as special subjects such as shorthand and typewriting, bookkeeping, accounting, commercial law.

In the time a friend is loafing around undecided, you can have completed a business course. Once a graduate, dependence is forever buried.

You have thought about a business training, either for day time or evening. Your future is worth much thought. A visit to Gregg School today may decide you. Come to the office—we will gladly show you through the classrooms.

COMMERCE

The aim of the College of Commerce is to impart to students that exact and scientific training which today is required for success in the higher fields of business effort. The courses are designed to qualify men and women for high grade positions in the following branches of Commercial activity:

Accounting
Journalism
Salesmanship
Foreign Trade
Secretarial Work

Traffic Management
Insurance and Real Estate
Banking and Finance
Office Management

Advertising and Marketing
Commercial Teaching
Consular Service
Business Administration and Management

All courses in the College of Commerce are credited towards the B. C. S. degree.

LAW

It is the aim of the College of Law to give students adequate preparation for the practice of law in any state. The case system of instruction is employed in practically all subjects. All classes are divided into small sections to insure individual attention for every student. High school graduates eighteen years of age or over are admitted as candidates for the LL. B. degree. College graduates are admitted as candidates for the J. D. degree.

PREPARATORY

The Preparatory School is conducted for the benefit of students who have not completed a four-year high school course. Those who desire to enter some College or University or to prepare for state examinations in Accounting, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Nursing, etc., will find this a convenient school. All applicants must furnish evidence of sufficient maturity and intelligence to grasp principles readily and to cover the work rapidly. To such students is offered an opportunity to save considerable time in the completion of a high school course.

Bulletins of any of the above departments will be sent free upon request. Call, write or phone (Wabash 9389)

Specialized Cost Training

Do You Know—

—how to handle perpetual inventories?
—how to control labor?
—how to determine departmental costs?
—how to use production orders?
—how to distribute expense?
—how to control Work in Process?
—how to close the cost accounts?
—how to prepare cost reports?

These and many other important things are thoroughly and practically covered in our Cost and Systematizing Elective.

You can also specialize in such subjects as

INCOME TAX PUBLIC ACCOUNTING
C. P. A. COACHING
CREDIT ADMINISTRATION
EXECUTIVE ACCOUNTING
STATISTICS
GOVERNMENTAL ACCOUNTING
BANK ACCOUNTING

We will train you in the quickest, surest and most thorough manner, under the personal supervision of nationally known Certified Public Accountants, who examine and grade your lesson papers.

No Bookkeeping Necessary

Our simple, concise method enables those without previous experience to readily master our work, while our Post Graduate Electives supply the much needed source of specialized training for the advanced accountant, as well as students of other courses, of whom we have had over 200 enroll with us in the Chicago district during the past year.

You can save two to three years' time under our intensive method and complete your training in 8 to 12 months, and are guaranteed satisfaction by the oldest, exclusively accounting school with the most modern home study course.

Special Classes Advanced Interpretation for Professional Musicians; Special Courses for the Post Graduate Teacher, Kindergarten, Ear Training, Harmony, Dalcroze Eurythmics, Sight Reading, Orchestral and Choral Conducting.

Free Advantages History of Music, Faculty Concerts, Pupils' Recitals, Chorus Class, Orchestra, Demonstration of Children's Class Work, Lectures. Graduates assisted to positions through the School Employment Bureau.

Students' Orchestra (FREE) Senior Orchestra for advanced pupils, Junior Orchestra for younger pupils. An unusual experience for advanced pupils in Piano, Voice and Violin to appear at rehearsals and concerts.

Students' Chorus (FREE) Open to students of all departments.

Public School Music

The course requires two years for graduation, but in many instances one year may be credited by sufficient teaching experience, music study, College or University work. and students are enabled thereby to graduate and secure their Diplomas in one year.

The special features of the course are Methods and Applied Psychology, Practice Teaching, Orchestra Conducting, Chorus extended work in Harmony, Sight Reading and Ear Training.

Teachers' Normal Training

The demand for Teachers and Director of Music in Schools and Colleges is much greater than we are able to fill. The positions pay good salaries under ideal conditions. The Columbia School of Music offers an excellent training and assists its graduates to secure these places through the School Employment Bureau. The course includes thorough and practical work in Elementary Teaching and Advanced Pedagogy by means of a comprehensive course of lectures on Psychology and Teaching as well as practical lessons on teaching both class and private as it applies to children's work. Classes are also held in History of Music, Dalcroze and Harmony. A novel feature of this course is the Model Practice School. In this school are more than two hundred children receiving instruction in Ear-Training, Sight Reading, Preliminary Harmony, Technic and Dalcroze Eurythmics, under the direction of a Faculty teacher. Each Normal student is required to attend these classes every Saturday morning through the School year.

We Train You for the Office in Subjects the Office Needs

There were reasons why 100,000 graduates chose Chicago's Most Helpful Business College. These were: Its age and reliability; specialist instructors; central location (on Michigan, overlooking the lake); moderate tuition; thorough practical courses; free Model Office (where 3 weeks' actual experience relieves any embarrassment that might be felt in going directly from the classroom to a position); the possibility of taking day courses in the evening sessions; and the employment bureau.

"Think Beyond Your Job"

Are you working for the present or the future? If you are not prepared to become an accountant, a secretary, to take charge of an office—now while opportunities abound, look to your needs.

The following prominent men got their start at our College:

EDWARD F. DUNNE, Ex-Governor of Illinois

H. N. HIGINBOTHAM, Pres. World's Columbian Exposition

J. A. McCORMICK, Vice-Pres. Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Co.

GEORGE L. WICKS, Chicago Title and Trust Company

and many other well-known business giants.

We have letters from these successful persons, in which they express their appreciation of the Bryant & Stratton training.

When about to enter the business world, the easiest way is not the most direct. Take a business course first. Learn Bookkeeping, Advanced Accountancy, Shorthand and Typewriting, Comptometer, English, Forceful Speech. After that, go ahead!

Learn to Smile at the File and its Difficulties—

Business men have already learned that the best filing system they can purchase and install may be spoiled by poor file clerks. That is why they send their file clerks to us to train. Individual file clerks come, too, that they may better their own position in the firm where they are employed or elsewhere.

Filing is neither monotonous nor dull. There is enough variety of work to make it fascinating to an active mind.

We have a keen interest in placing our students advantageously in the business world. There are positions for grammar school, high school, and college graduates, experienced clerical workers, and librarians.

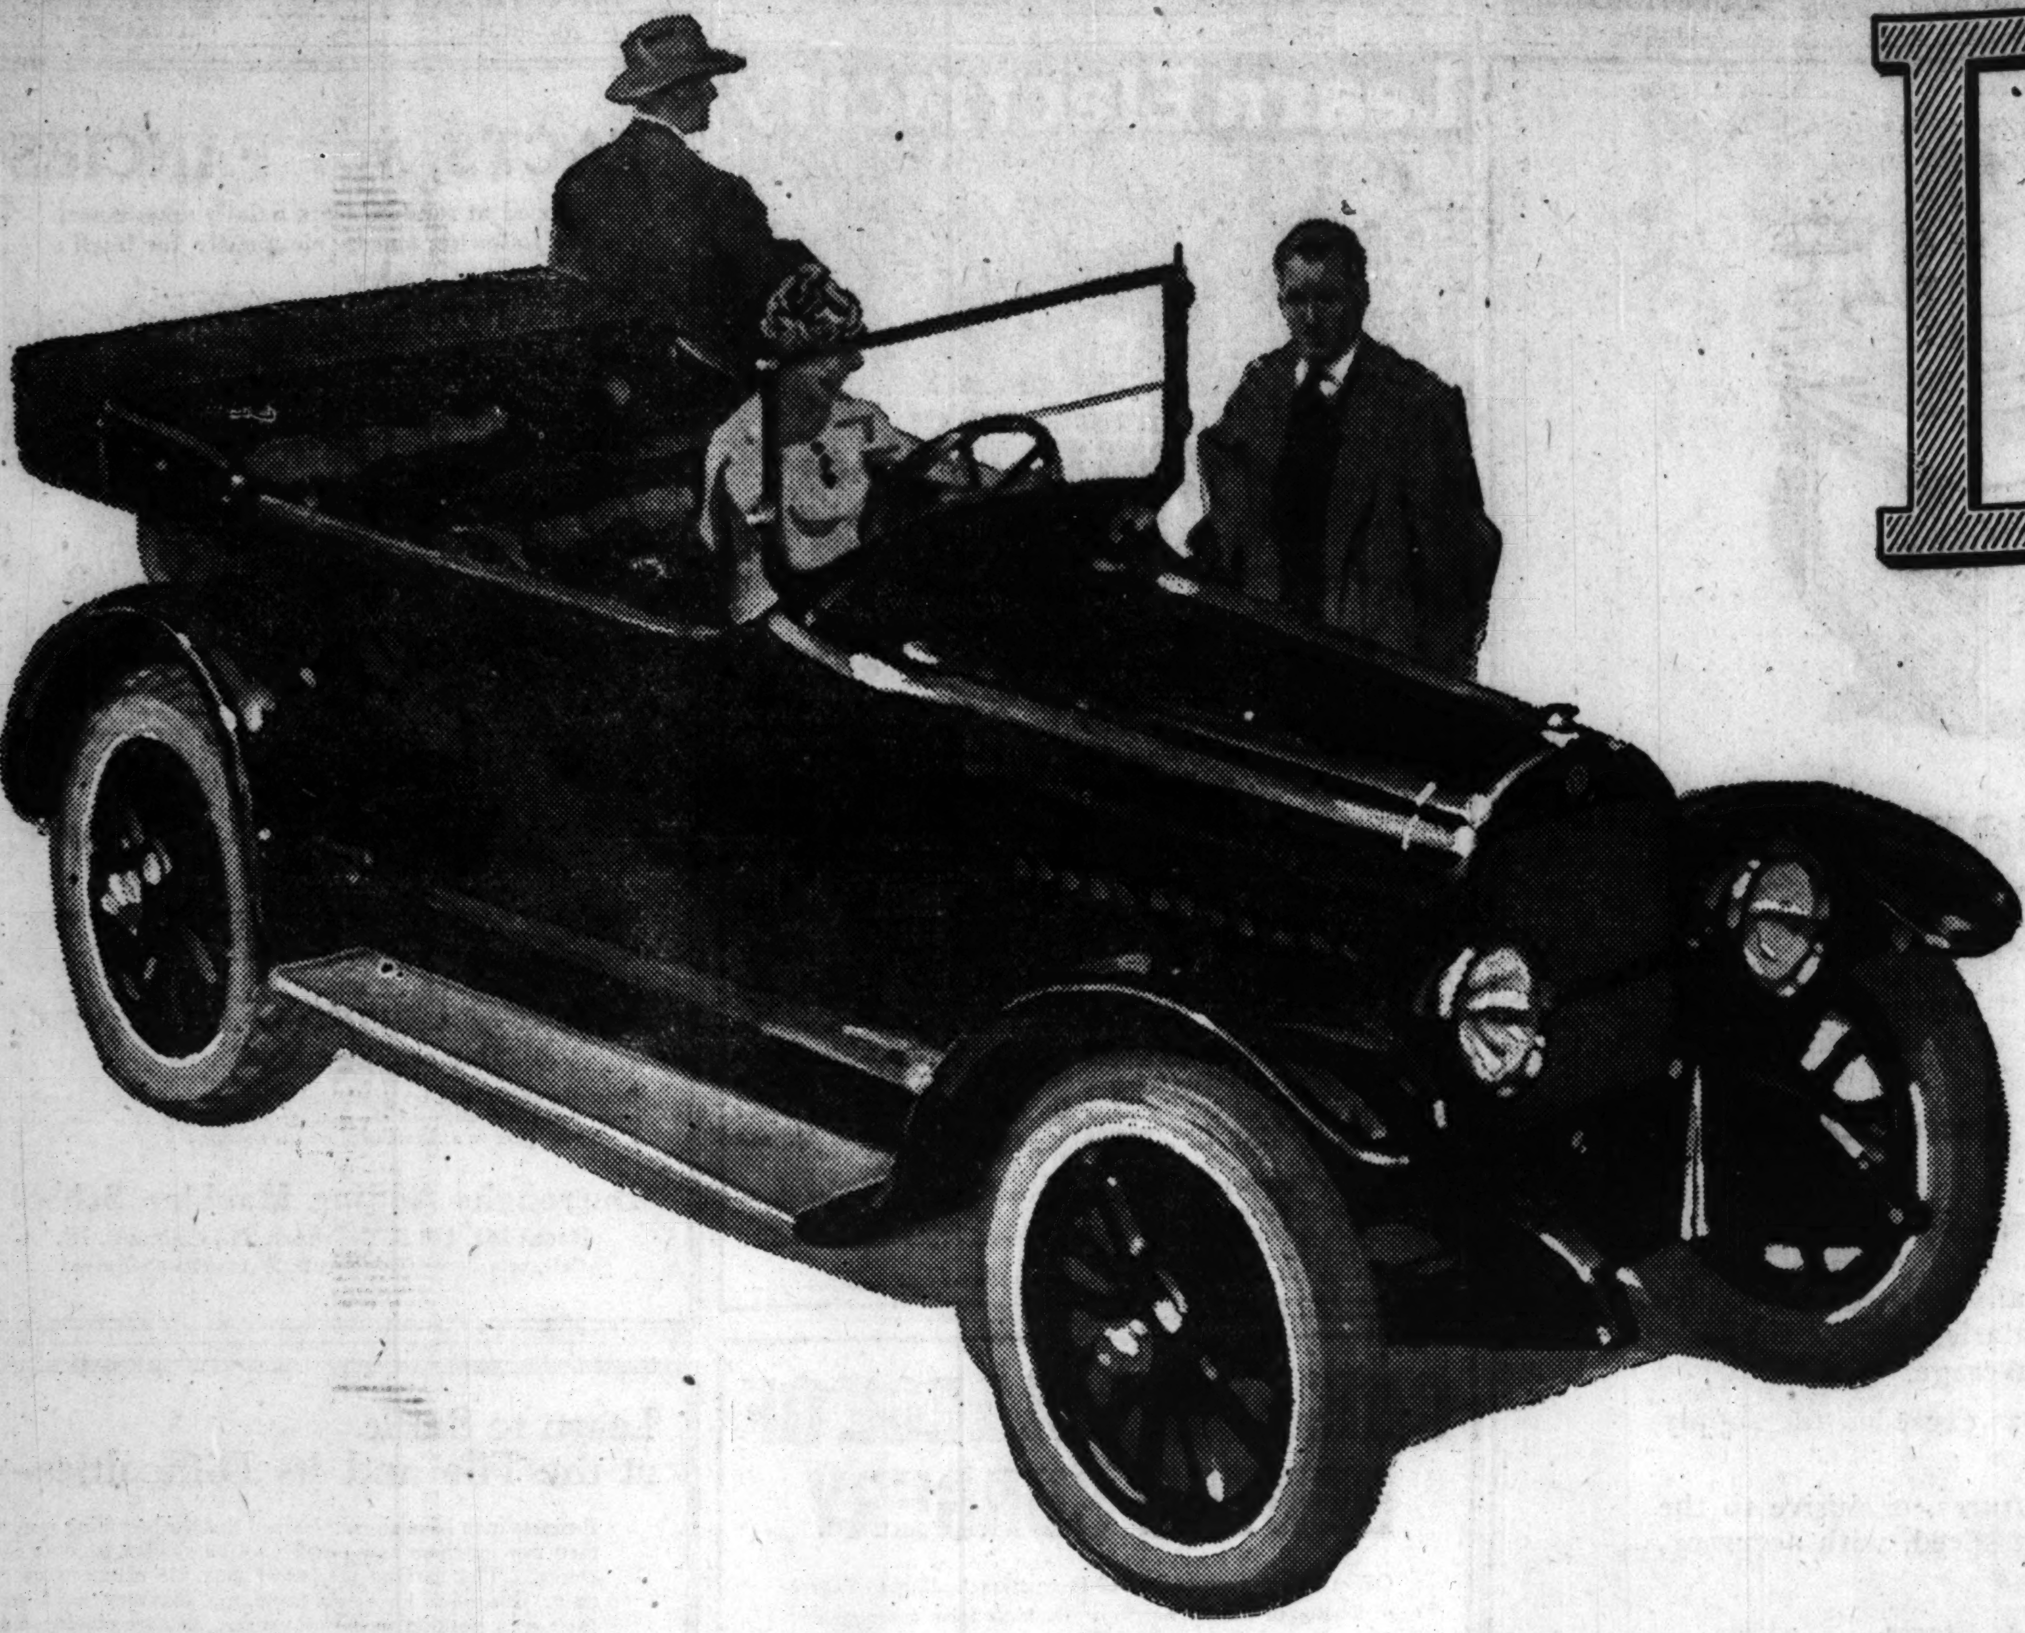
DORT

Quality Goes Clear Through



Daily There Is New Evidence in Favor of the Dort

Each Dort that goes into service begins anew to pile up fresh proof in favor of the car.

Rising prices in every field have given new value to the car that is economical in use of gas and oil, and that gets extra mileage from tires.

And the car that stands up and rarely needs overhauling or tuning up is especially attractive.

It is the high standard of the Dort in both these respects—economy and durability—that makes it such an intensely desirable investment.

There have been records kept of the mileage Dort gives, under average use, per gallon of gas and quart of oil.

There have been statistics gathered as to the exact service tires give on its wheels.

There have been tabulations made as to the average cost per owner for repair parts.

All these records are surprisingly low.

Their truth is confirmed by the actual statements of owners and by the published results of public, competitive tests.

They prove as nothing else could prove quite so pointedly that the Dort is a preferred investment.

It is not now and never has been our policy to offer any specific exploit of the Dort as conclusive evidence of the qualities of the car.

Rather have we preferred to base our statements upon the average performance of the Dort in the service of thousands of owners and over a long period of actual use.

Nevertheless the dramatic demonstration of Dort efficiency and economy in an economy and reliability run held a short time ago in California is of real interest and does confirm the statements we have made from time to time in regard to the thrift of the Dort.

Officials termed it the most strenuous and exacting road test ever staged in California, and Dort cars won first and second against a field of twenty-one representative cars.

The winning car was a Dort. It averaged 20½ miles to the gallon of gas and made a perfect score.

The second car was a Dort, also. It averaged 18 2-3 miles to the gallon and scored 997 points out of a possible 1,000.

Now, as we have said before, we do not consider that record as being of any important value by itself.

But coming as it does in direct corroboration of many previous contest records, and substantiating the high mileage per gallon of gas that owners report, it can be accepted as further reliable evidence of the economy and reliability of the Dort.

SITUATION WANTED.
ABILITY.
A successful mail order executive, now in early 30s, following the suggestion of one of Chicago's big men, has been examined by the foremost vocational adviser in the country, who explained to him his qualifications as a manager of sales of mechanical appliances or practical commodities. He has demonstrated his ability to thoroughly analyze conditions, to reorganize weak divisions, and improve on the efficiency of present systems. His record indicates adaptability and a pronounced degree of initiative. In his present environment he enjoys the unlimited confidence of the management, but he has reached the peak in that environment; he is now at the point in life where he must seek for an opportunity which will assure him a really big future. His health, education, personality, and disposition are such as will warrant his attaining the desired goal, and no amount of effort in work or study will interfere with his properly assuming the responsibilities of a man's size job. What have you? Address J 478, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE SALESMEN.
FULL TIME. PART TIME.
We have recently bought 4 tracts of land that are now in the course of subdividing and development, making 12 subdivisions on the market now. All improvements will be put in at once, and we will build on these lots the same as all of our other subdivisions, which is the only proper method that insures the buyers and profits. We need salesmen at once to train for the great rush that will come with the opening of these subdivisions. We will run a very heavy advertising campaign and back you to the limit and advance you to a position worth $10,000 a year if you show us that you are capable. All of our subdivisions are highly restricted as to class of buildings and class of buyers. We build for our buyers. Call at once. Office open 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

STOP!

This is not the time to build a home; wait a year. We know that building material is coming down, and a year's time will mean a saving to you of $2,000 to $3,000. Now is the proper time to select a home site. We have the choicest spots on the Northwest Side, in the Ravenswood section. Property is near schools, theaters, stores of all kinds, and also the finest transportation. Next year we will build you a bungalow or a 2 flat house and let you move in it and pay for it on a monthly installment plan, just as you pay for rent in a flat. Our terms on home sites are $10 per month. For further information address A Y 560, Tribune.

NEW PLAN.

Dairy farms, cattle, sheep, goat, and hog ranches of all sizes in the fine cutover lands of the rich states of Louisiana and Mississippi, contiguous to N. O. G. N. Ry., and carefully selected under expert advice with references to flowing streams, ranch headquarters, feeding, herding, and breeding grounds, farming lands, and shipping facilities. Land at extremely low prices and payments extending over long period of years, so that payments per acre per year amount to little more than interest on purchase price and on ordinary leasing charges for grazing purposes, and yet at end of payments you own the land. Write WALTER S. AYERS, Industrial Commissioner N. O. G. N. Ry., 1060 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., for dependable information.

FOR SALE—LOUISANA—VERY PRODUCtive cutover land, close to markets; ideal for general farming, stock raising and gardening, in any quantity, cheap; terms to suit purchaser. Write owners. SOUTHERN INVESTMENT CO., 161 State-st., Hammond, Ind.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE — SEVERAL thousand acres Louisiana land, some timber; value $100,000; will exchang for Chicago income property; will assume. A. OGILVIE, 218 S. Wabash.

Michigan.

OBEY THAT IMPULSE

YOU HAVE OFTEN FELT that you would like a farm home of your own. You would like to be independent—your own boss—free from the worry of high food prices, strikes and lay-offs. But you never have done anything except think about a farm because you felt that the cash outlay was more than you could raise.

OUR LIBERAL CREDIT PLAN makes it possible for most any man to get started on some of the best land left in the U. S. In the hardwood district of Antrim and Kalkaska Counties, Michigan, close to schools, market, towns and R. R., near lakes and streams, these lands offer an exceptional opportunity at $15 to $35 an acre. You can buy 10 to 160 a. with a small down payment and easy monthly terms. We do not sell swamps or stony land nor do we reserve the oil or mineral rights.

FREE INSURANCE protects you while paying for the land and our farm advisers give you without cost the benefit of their years of experience. Michigan exempts from taxes for five years the settler who makes some improvements on his land. We loan money in proportion to your investment for buildings, live stock and machinery. A Warranty Deed and Abstract of Title protect your ownership of the land.

OBEY THAT IMPULSE and write for our big free booklet. It will be mailed without any obligation on your part. Ask for excursion dates and rates. ACT NOW.

AUTUMN

"But the air's so appetizin', and the landscape through the haze
Of a crisp and sunny morning of the airly autumn days
Is a pictur' that no painter has the coloring to mock—
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock."
—James Whitcomb Riley.

A good automobile will make it possible to enjoy the beauties of Indian summer. The roads are hard and smooth—and not crowded. Below are a few of our choicest offerings:

FURS!
It wholly depends upon the fur house with a reputation for quality that makes your fur purchase a good investment.
BEAR IN MIND THAT GOOD FURS ARE THE ONLY KIND IT IS SAFE TO BUY.
If you could see some of the furs that are brought in to us by people who looked only at prices when they bought—furs made of "seconds" or improperly cured pelts and just thrown together—you would realize more than ever that without high quality low prices mean nothing. This exclusive fur establishment handles nothing but furs of the most reliable quality—furs that will give you years of satisfactory service and maintain their original luster and beauty during that time. And even on such fine quality furs our early season prices are as low or lower in many cases than you will find on inferior furs elsewhere. COMPARE—then decide.
Four months' charge accounts invited.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

ONE OF THE FASTEST GROWING WHOLESALE FIRMS IN ROCKFORD, ILL., NEEDS

$50,000.00

With which to maintain their present large sales for the next four months.

Securing additional capital at this time will enable us to obtain large cash discount on purchases for balance of year.

1920 sales [shipped] exceed $300,000. Sales in last four months of year will equal the first eight months.

Nature of business easily proves this statement.

Loans will be for 6 months and will be secured by bonded warehouse receipts covering insured merchandise worth 25% more today than price contracted for.

If you have $50,000 or part thereof and can act quickly we will pay you better than current rate of interest.

Address Box 444, Rockford, Ill., and appointment will be arranged.

FOR SALE—

Having decided to liquidate our business at once, we offer for sale our foundry and machine shop, which is complete and well equipped for all kinds of work usually done in such establishments, and all the trade in this territory can be promptly and properly served. This business in connection with mill supplies and machinery has been continuously and successfully operated for the last sixty-six years. Aside from our regular line of patterns we have a set of patterns for making chilled plow points to interchange with the vulcan. If interested it will pay to investigate, as there is a golden opportunity for business. We also offer our stock of mill supplies and machinery.

DROP IN CASH GRAIN STARTS FUTURES DOWN

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Heaviness in the cash grain markets was reflected in futures, especially in September corn and oats and December wheat. Prices were higher early, but declined and closed well toward the inside of the day, with a weak and distrustful feeling.

There are estimates of 1,500 cars of grain in for next Tuesday, as there will be no session on Monday, Labor day.

Closing trades yesterday were at losses of 1⅜@2c on wheat. September corn lost 1⅛c, while distant futures were ½@⅝c higher. Oats were off 1¼c for the near deliveries and ⅝c for May, while September rye is 2c lower and December up 1⅛c and barley was 1@2½c lower for the day.

Liquidation was on in September deliveries of coarse grains all week, and corn was off 7c, with cash off 10c. Oats lost 3⅝c for the September and about 8c for cash, while deferred futures are ¾@1c lower on corn and 1@2¼c off on oats, as compared with a week ago. September rye is 2½c lower and December 5c higher, while barley is ½@2⅜c lower, September leading.

Hedging Sales in Wheat.

The most important factors in the wheat market were the increase in the hedging sales, a decrease in outside buying, an absence of large export business, and a decline of 2@5c in cash prices, with premiums off around 3c, while outside cash markets were off 3@5c.

The market felt the absence of export buying and of increased hedging pressure, which, combined with reports of rain in central, western, and southern Argentina, where they were most needed, made the trade forget about the strong statistical situation and the decrease of 8,118,000 bu in primary receipts for the week, as compared with last year.

Clement-Curtis were the largest buyers of December wheat from $2.41 to $2.42. After they were through, selling by commission houses, local traders, and hedgers carried the price off to $2.39.

December Corn Firm.

September and cash corn declined rather sharply, but failed to affect the new crop deliveries. There was scattered liquidation in the September, and also selling of that delivery and buying of December by spreaders, which narrowed the difference to 18c at the last, against 21c Wednesday. Bulk of the trade was of a local character and considerable evening up for the double holiday was under way at the last, making the final rally.

The new crop deliveries closed at fractional net gains for the day in the face of a lower finish for wheat and oats and on the September. Sentiment is still decidedly bearish, but for some days the December has been acting rather sold out.

Hedging pressure and stop loss selling carried September oats off sharply. At one time it showed 2⅝c under the blackboard quotation for the December, but a strong rally came and the finish was at 1c discount. There was a lack of aggressive buying in all deliveries until toward the last. Premiums easy at September to ½c over for No. 3 white and 1@1½c over for No. 2 white.

A little export business was put through in rye, the seaboard claiming sales of 250,000 bu, but only 120,000 bu could be confirmed. There was further selling of September and buying of December to change hedges. Premiums in the spot market were unchanged with No. 2 at 3c over September.

Barley declined 1@2c, demand being slow and offerings fair.

Provision Offerings Light.

Lighter offerings of provisions and scattered buying by strong interests who have been active on that side of late advanced prices, and the close was at gains of 22½c on the near futures and 7½c on January lard, while ribs were bought by packers, who reported a larger cash trade, and gained 40@60c. There was no trading in pork for the second day of the last week. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The strong statistical position in wheat with comparatively small receipts, the primary movements since July 1 having been only 75,485,000 bu, compared with 132,511,000 bu last year, tends to keep many traders off the selling side. Others believe the export demand has more wheat than the primary markets have received in the last two months. The exports also largely exceed primary receipts.

Any let up in the export buying of wheat is expected to encourage increased selling by speculators.

A point made by one of the largest corn traders is that, with cash corn and September declining, there is no use trying to hold up the distant futures. Part of the weakness and break of nearly 8c in September corn during the week and 11c from the high point of the previous week is attributed to the selling out of September and buying of December by spreaders. The December has only declined 4⅝c and May 5½c during the 11c decline in September.

"Most of our surplus wheat has already been exported or sold for future shipment," says Frank I. King of Toledo. "About 80,000,000 bu has already left our shores. Most of the balance is reported sold. July and August are usually the big months on export business. In September Canadian and European new crops are available. Canada has as much surplus as we had. Argentine weather will be an important factor from now on."

A cash handler says with no prospects of accumulating wheat stocks at central markets before January, December deliveries in all markets are likely to adjust themselves automatically.

There is a modification of bearish sentiment in the corn crop news, says Thomson & McKinnon. The distant deliveries are at such a big discount that there is a growing idea that the producer will not accept the prevailing price, inasmuch as it is so far below the feeding value.

Farmers are holding back around 500,000,000 bu wheat for higher prices, according to estimates made from government sources. For some time past the holding tendency has been a feature in sections where farmers were financially able to do so. It is understood that in the main they desire $3.00, or about 50c more than is obtainable at terminal markets at present.

Messages from New York yesterday said exporters were making efforts to resell some rye, but with poor success.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Shipping sales of cash grain at Chicago yesterday were 5,000 bu wheat, 35,000 bu corn, 60,000 bu oats, and 5,000 bu rye.

No export sales of cash wheat were reported at the seaboard or the gulf on Saturday. Practically no demand was in evidence at the seaboard, but a little grain was bought in the west for shipment to Baltimore on the basis of 33c over Chicago December, track there, for shipment by Sept. 25.

Premiums on winters here were 3@4c lower, with No. 1 red and hard winter sold down to 14c over the December. No. 1 red brought $2.55@2.58½ and No. 1 hard $2.55½@2.59. No. 2 red sold at 13c over December. Premiums at Minneapolis were 5c lower. St. Louis and Kansas City declined 4@7c and Omaha 2@5c, with a slow demand i nthe southwest.

Cash corn was 1@3c lower at Chicago, with receipts 223 cars. Demand rather slow, with an industry the chief buyer. St. Louis was off 1@6c, Peoria 3@6c, and Omaha 4@5c, while Kansas City was unchanged to 3c lower, but carried considerable grain over unsold. Cash oats 1@2c lower here and at Peoria, 1½@2c lower at St. Louis and Omaha, and 2c lower at Kansas City. Local receipts, 214 cars.

Power Companies Need Higher Rates

Electric power and lighting companies have withstood the strain of high costs better than other utility concerns thus far because they employ a smaller amount of labor and advances in pay rolls make less difference in their operating expenses. Now, however, many of them are facing difficulties because of the increased wages demanded by capital.

A majority of these companies are said to be operating at full capacity and rejecting contracts for new business because they cannot accept without enlarging plants and extending facilities. To raise new money for extensions will cost them 9 or 10 per cent in the present market and public service commissions object to more than an 8 per cent return on the value of their property. Evidently new loans made at this high cost would reduce the margin of safety for securities already issued and thus damage the credit of the companies.

If the demands for increased service are not met, the companies will not only lose profits in the immediate future, but will hinder the growth of the communities where they are located and thus impede their own development.

The only remedy would seem to be rates high enough to cover the cost of new financing. An increase for this purpose need not continue indefinitely, as the cost of money is certain to decline at some time in the future and then high rate loans can be refunded.

Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound

A. S. J.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound first 4s have a first lien on the Pacific coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway. As they are oustanding in a relatively small amount and underlie the general and refunding mortgage there can be no question as to their safety. They are selling at about 60, at that price the yield is 7¼ per cent.

Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

D. A.—The Missouri, Kansas and Texas first 4s are secured by first mortgage on 1,583 miles of road at the rate of $25,300 a mile and by deposit of stock of a subsidiary. As the company is in the hands of a receiver and has been earning only a fraction of its fixed charges they are not a desirable investment. Interest on them is being paid six months behind time.

Phillips Petroleum.

E. A., Plymouth, Wis.—The Phillips Petroleum corporation had 512,000 shares of no par value outstanding as of Feb. 29 last. The balance sheet showed assets—chiefly oil properties—amounting to about $51 a share. Earnings in the four months ended April 30 were slightly more than $3 a share before depreciation and depletion. Information is incomplete.
